State Florists' Association of Indiana.

Annual Meeting at Indianapolis, January 13.

Fine Attendance and Interesting Session.

With an excellent attendance of out-of-town members, the State Florists' Association of Indiana held its annual meeting at Indianapolis, January 13, the Independent Athletic Club being the scene of the gathering, and re-elected Anders Rasmussen, of New Albany, president, despite the protests of that gentleman. His administration has been a noteworthy one, and the association recorded its thanks and faith by re-electing him without a dissenting voice. In addition, President Rasmussen was authorized to attend, not only the meeting of the board of directors of the Society of American Florists, to be held at Cleveland, January 24-25, but all future meetings of that body as the representative of the Indiana association, his expenses to be borne by the organization, and a further fee of $5 allowed.

W. W. Coles, Kokomo, was elected first vice-president, succeeding Herman Junge, Indianapolis. L. E. Hitz, Madison, was made second vice-president in the stead of E. E. Temperley, Indianapolis. Oliver E. Steinkamp, Indianapolis, was re-elected secretary, and Charles Pahud, of Indianapolis, treasurer.

In making his annual report, President Rasmussen commented on the success of the fall flower show and the entertainment of the Kentucky association, which, he said, had aroused much favorable comment among members of the trade south of the Ohio river.

Secretary Steinkamp reported the recent death of Robert McCann, florist for the National Military Home at Marion, Ind., and Mr. Rasmussen said a committee would be appointed to draw up suitable resolutions of regret.

Treasurer Pahud's report showed a satisfactory balance on hand. A gratifying gain in membership was registered during the year, according to the report of Secretary Steinkamp. More than 40 new members were added to the roster, the total membership now being 184. Eleven meetings were held in 1919, at Richmond, New Albany, Waveland, and Indianapolis. "Of these, our president attended seven, which is doing very well, considering his business responsibilities, and the fact that he took a wife during the year," commented Mr. Steinkamp. "Our worthy secretary might do well to follow the president's example," returned Mr. Rasmussen. In concluding his report, Mr. Steinkamp urged the florists of Fort Wayne, Terre Haute, South Bend and other Indiana cities to arouse public interest by holding annual flower shows, such as that given in Indianapolis.

A. F. J. Baur, chairman of the committee recently appointed to confer with the authorities at Purdue University, reported that a meeting had been held at Lafayette in September, and that Purdue officials had promised to conduct experiments to determine the reasons for bud-dropping in connection with sweet peas, and those for blight of asters. Another meeting was held during the flower show in Indianapolis in November, he said, and the college experts indicated that they would go at the research thoroughly, to decide how to prevent the diseases named, or otherwise that nothing could be done to prevent them. Suggestions from any source in connection with these two questions would be welcome, Mr. Baur said.

The question of insurance, was given a thorough airing, Dillon Myers, of the American Mutual Cyclone & Hail Insurance Company, Muncie, Ind., telling in detail of the efforts of the company to obtain releases from policyholders outside the state, in accordance with a decision of the state auditor, and what had been accomplished in the reorganization of the company. Out of 72 policyholders living outside of Indiana, 31 releases had been obtained, he explained. The company has $102,500 insurance in force in Indiana, the losses in 1919 being $1,094, and the expense of administration, caused by the difficulties related, were about $1,000. The company has one outstanding claim, of which, according to Mr. Myers, there is some doubt as to its justice. The association decided to continue in power the committee appointed some time ago to report back when it believes the company's progress has been sufficient to permit the members to obtain reliable insurance. O. E. Steinkamp, Anders Rasmussen, M. Elder, Herman Junge and Charles Pahud constitute this committee. Mr. Rasmussen went on record as favoring a refund of unearned premiums to florists who were asked for releases from the policies. Most of the members present favored insurance on the basis of so much per square foot of glass.

A letter from the Indiana Horticultural Society was read, inviting the state florists' association to have a speaker at the annual meeting of the former to discuss co-operation between the two organizations. Secretary Steinkamp explained that he had invited H. H. Swaim, of Lafayette, secretary of the horticultural society, to attend the florists' annual meeting, but that he had been unable to come. A. H. Nehrling, of Crawfordsville, believed the florists' association should participate in the $4,600 state appropriation allowed the horticultural society, expressing the view that this appropriation was intended partly for florists. Secretary Steinkamp was authorized to discuss the question of a combination flower and fruit show with the officers of the horticultural society.

A. F. J. Baur announced that Irwin C. Bertermann, of Bertermann Brothers Co., Indianapolis, had been elected vice-president of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association, which would meet in Indianapolis next October. Mr. Bertermann explained that many growers are now in the F. T. D., and are getting benefits. "Indianapolis is regarded as the center of the flower industry in many quarters," he said, "and the members of the F. T. D. are coming here for one of the biggest conventions it has ever had." The association decided to appoint committees at a later date to make the necessary arrangements for the reception of the organization.

For the sixth consecutive time, or since the trophy was established in 1915, W. Frank & Sons, Portland, Ind., won the rose trophy, and after a spirited disdussion, the association voted to award the trophy to the firm for permanent keeping. Hartje & Elder, Indianapolis, won the carnation trophy. Other exhibitors of various seasonable flowers, all of whom received honorable mention, were Baur & Steinkamp, Hartje & Elder, E. E. Temperley and A. Wiegand's Sons Company. Not only did the association decide to give to the Portland firm the cup it had won so many times, but it adopted a motion to make future awards permanent when the trophy has been won three consecutive times by any florist. As indicated, W. Frank & Sons captured the rose trophy six consecutive years. The winners of the carnation trophy are as follows: Baur & Steinkamp, 1915 and 1916; W. Frank & Sons, 1917 and 1918; Hartje & Elder, 1919 and 1920. The committee on awards was composed of Karl Sonnenschmidt, Lincoln A. Coles and A. H. Nehrling. The flowers shown were sent to local hospitals. Irwin Bertermann explained that the illness of John Bertermann, president of the company, was not serious.

L. E. Hitz, the new vice-president of the association, invited the florists to come to Madison some time during the summer. "We may not raise as many flowers as some of you, but we think our natural scenery is hard to excel," he said. "Also, we cannot give you anything to drink, but we can show you a government warehouse across the Ohio River full of good Kentucky whisky." The association decided to accept the invitation, the date to be set later by Mr. Hitz.

A pleasant interruption was the serving of a buffet luncheon during the afternoon. The annual banquet was held at the Independent Athletic Club in the evening, Harry H. Dietz, formerly with the government at Washington, but now with the state of Indiana, being the chief speaker. Mr. Dietz has traveled all over the world in the study of flowers and his address was deeply interesting. M. E. C.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

As the season moves on, the busy days are alternated with dull periods that at times are discouragingly continuous, but that is no reason for sitting down and twirling one's thumbs. The department stores have the right idea, and that is to always anticipate and have ready some striking feature that will keep up the interest in their stock, and draw people to the store. Immediately following the Christmas holidays, they usher in the New Year with a sale of white goods, the stocks of which are fairly bewildering in their variety. August was always the dullest month of the year in all kinds of merchandising, until Wanamaker started his August furniture sales, which were so successful that they are now a regular feature of the business in all furniture and department stores throughout the country.

As cut flowers will soon be more plentiful, and lower in price, it is well to feature and encourage their use in every possible way. Calendulas, both the orange and lemon shades, are now to be had in quantity, and of splendid quality. They can be arranged in baskets or flower bowls, with mignonette, to make a striking window. A table decoration with these flowers alone will make a conspicuous display, and show their worth for this purpose. This is the season of social events, when balls, dinners and theatre parties are of nightly occurrence. For such occasions, corsage bouquets are always in demand, and as they are frequently required at a moment's notice, a sample or two made up, ready to put on, will gladden the heart of the man in a hurry. A few well made corsages, finished to the ribbon and pin, shown in the window, in a small hamper, basket or corsage box, will invite sales, and at the same time, show the artistic ability of the shop.

A "stork" window would be a good feature at this between-times season. A few of the various suitable receptacles, such as cradles, cribs, and baskets, with figures to one side, of the stork, etc., filled with small flowers, will call to mind that some friend has just had such a visit and sales will result. At all events, such a window will attract admiring attention and increased interest in the store.

As a special, keep in stock a made up wreath of tasselled ferns, such as Norwood, Verona or Smithii. This, of itself, is beautiful, and a splendid background for cattleyas, roses or other choice flowers that will make it into a handsome design.

A long narrow basket, filled with flowers, is good to recommend as a family selection to be placed on the floor, to the front, underneath the casket, taking the place of the more expensive mat.

The first good freesia is about due. A dozen sprays in a box, sent to a few good customers with a card "First of the Season," will be an agreeable surprise, and call to mind the store and its readiness to serve.

Fern dishes to be refilled are now coming in every day, for which there should be a good stock of suitable varieties. A card, stating that this work is a specialty, and calling attention to the large assortment of hardy ferns, and a quick service that can call for and return the dish "within the hour," should be sent to all whose names are in the fern book. There should be a record here of every filling, and the date, as, at times, complaint is made that the ferns died the next day, and the record perhaps shows the dish to have been filled three weeks before. However, it is best not to argue over such matters, but let it go and make it up in some other way.

In all matters of dispute with customers, it pays to smooth it over at once. No matter how unreasonable the complaint may be, or if there has been flagrant error on your part, do not let a day go by without having the matter straightened out to the satisfaction of the patron.

It is but a little less than a month before the next floral holiday, that of St. Valentine's day, which this year is to be strongly featured by the trade all over the country. Some very excellent posters have been arranged for, and stickers 1½ by 2 inches in size, which should, not later than January 15, be used on all store packages until St. Valentine's day. It will be the theme of the national campaign, as well as of all the local publicity bodies, and from all accounts there will be a number working regularly by that time. Give earnest thought to St. Valentine's day business. If you feature the day, encourage the use of flowers, and invite the business, it will come to you.

The 1920 publicity fund is now open. Those who have not as yet contributed, have been getting the benefit of the men that did. Now is the time to step up and square yourself with a check. Help put that $100,000 across. It will be a great incentive to your business. Do it today.

Planning for 1920.

Experience is the best teacher, and the happenings of the past year, in which were scored many successes, as well as some failures, will make an excellent guide for the future. The new year is the time for resolutions, so let each resolve to make this the record business period of his career. There is a clear field ahead, and a better demand for plants and flowers than ever before. There is a greatly increased business to be had, if one makes the proper bid for it. It is, however, clearly up to the individual; if success is to come, one must show himself worthy of it. No matter how well conducted or successful the business of the past year, there will be found room for improvement, as there is no such thing when it comes to running a retail cutflower store as 100 per cent efficiency.

Now is the time to plan for the next twelve months, when there should be distinct features brought out week by week that will fit in with the varying seasons. If this work is planned ahead, and arrangements made to get the required stocks, and at the same time see that the store's customers are kept in touch with the new things as they appear, there is no question but what the business will be greatly stimulated and increased in volume.

There is a difference in the methods of conducting the cut flower business, as carried on by the one-man store in the suburbs or busy residence section, and the large retail houses in the central shopping districts, but the percentage of profits on the total of the business transacted will not vary greatly if strict attention is paid to overhead charges in both cases.

The proprietors of many small shops conduct their business in a very primitive way, carrying but meagre stocks, doing a hand-to-mouth business, as one might call it, for the most part waiting to get the order before stock is obtained to fill it. It is a great pity that such dealers do not see the light, or appreciate their opportunities. They are surrounded by people who love flowers, and who would buy and enjoy them if they were invitingly presented. It is not a high priced location that is necessary to bring business. What is required is a well arranged and inviting looking store, both inside and out, carrying a stock that should always be kept just a little ahead of the demand. The proprietor must be always on the job, seeing to it that customers are properly served and satisfied. He does not wait to be asked for this or that, for if standard, it is sure to be found in stock.

A large and successful retailer stated recently, that the public did not have to be coaxed to buy flowers half so much, as most retail florists should be given instructions how to sell them. At least half of the retailers appeared to know but little about the business and kept such uninviting stores, carrying little, if any, stock, that it was a wonder to him how they made even a living.

Ambition, initiative and a progressive spirit, are essentials to the success of any undertaking; while to a large extent, born or inherent in the individual, yet these necessary attributes can be cultivated and brought to a perfection that will produce wonderful results. Planning and laying out the work, day by day, week by week and month by month, is of great help in bringing out these good qualities. It is the first step to system, without which there is never much progress.

The very best thing we can do to better the business today, should always be uppermost in the mind. Can the store interior be arranged to make it more inviting? Are there goods distinctly not salable in sight? Perhaps little jobs of repair that, "when we get a chance," will be fixed up, are very noticeable. How is the floor? Does it want a new coat of stain, or is the linoleum worn out in spots? There is nothing gives such an untidy appearance to a store as a neglected floor. How about the window? Is it so attractive that people stop to have a look as they go by? Are there cards calling attention to the merits of the plants or flowers displayed?

THE STORE FRONT.

Go across the street and see if the outside appearance of the store can be improved. There is great advertising value in an attractive, decorated store as seen from the opposite side of the street. There is so much that the florist can do with boxes of flowering plants and vines in summer, and evergreens in winter, both in tubs and boxes to make the store noticeable, and at the same time feature this branch of his business, that he should continually plan to make the most of this form of publicity. If necessary to use an awning, see that this is always bright and fresh, and that it carries the slogan, "Say it With Flowers," across its entire length.

Can the store service, to which so much attention is now paid, be improved? There is nothing that is so satisfactory to customers as promptness in delivery. There should be system in keeping up the stock, particularly of standard supplies, such as ribbons and chiffon, letters, palm leaves, galax and magnolia leaves, wire, wire frames, moss and many other essentials; to buy these piecemeal, sufficient for a day or two at a time, is most expensive. A book, in which to put down "Things we need," as soon as they are discovered running low, is a great help when the supply man comes around.

PUBLICITY.

The activities of the S. A. F. nation-wide publicity campaign, the great strides recently made in addition to the membership in the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association, the increase in the number and membership in the various florists' clubs all over the country, together with the inauguration of local publicity campaigns, is doing much to increase the sale of plants and flowers. All these progressive movements will be of the greatest advantage to the individual retailer, who, by cultivating this spirit of the times, and doing his full share in carrying full lines of stock and pushing the business to the utmost, will not only benefit himself, but the whole body, of which he is a part.

The above are but a few of the details that, if well planned and carried out, month by month, will put the business of 1920 away ahead of previous records. If each individual volume at the end of the year, shows an increase of only 10 per cent, which is easily possible, it will indeed be a banner year, and source of great satisfaction to those who are striving so hard to place the business on a higher plane.

St. Valentine's Day Poster.

The national publicity committee of the Society of American Florists has planned a great drive for St. Valentine's day, one of the features being a wonderfully effective poster which should be working overtime in every cut-flower store in the land from now until the event is past. In addition, there is a miniature reproduction, or posterette, 1½x2 inches, gummed, to be used as a stamp or seal, which, if placed on all letters, packages and boxes, will spread the propaganda for this occasion as has never been done before.

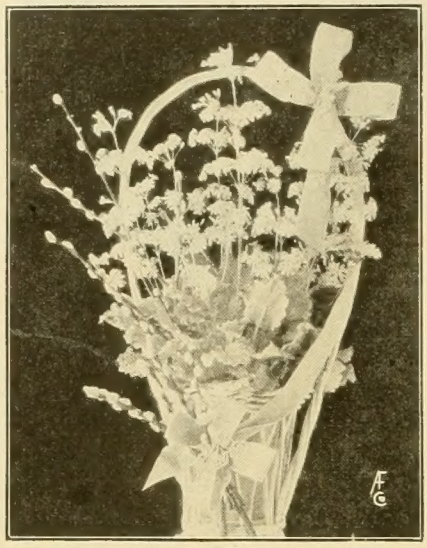
The poster, shown in the acompanying illustration, is 14x21 inches in size, and can hardly be improved upon, as its colors are harmonious, the lettering so well done by a winged Cupid, who is shown just finishing the job, that it tells the story at a glance. The sheet, of which there is but a border showing, is a light green. On a large, black ground, with dentil edges, is an immense red heart, which extends beyond the black relief at its extreme edges on the sides. The lettering is in white. A paint pot and bow and arrow on the ground, and the "little fellow" who is so earnestly at work, add life and fit so into the picture, as to make it a great success. The suggestion, "You can send flowers by wire," in the lower left hand corner, will be sure to start something and make the public acquainted with the Florists' Telegraph Delivery service. If used intelligently by the trade, the posters and stamps should be the means of making people so think of St. Valentine's day, that they will enter heartily into the spirit of it, and many will buy flowers for this occasion who have never done so before.

Some men are timid of all innovations. To them, the old things are "good enough." To all such, here is a grand opportunity to test out something really worth while. If featured and kept to the front, these little stamps and posters will more than do their part, but they must be backed up by an earnestness and confidence in the day as a floral holiday, that will, in its aggressiveness, create a record-breaking business.

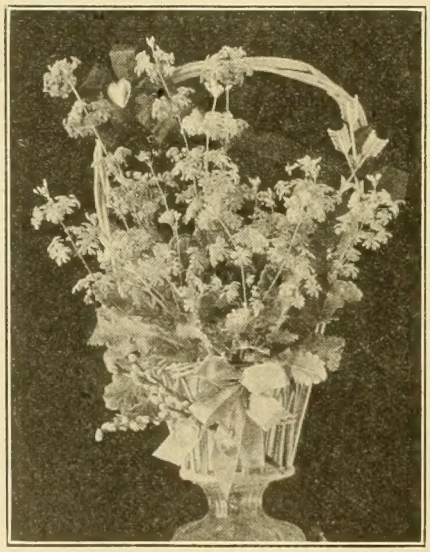
The poster should have the center space on each side of the delivery cars. It should be shown in the windows and store. With all florist autos of a city carrying these conspicuous posters, it is sure to give wonderful importance to St. Valentine's day, and the necessity of using flowers in its proper observance.

Primulas Malacoides and Townsendii.

For the next six weeks these very valuable flowering pot plants will be at their best, and should form an important addition to the stock of the retail store. For the most part, they are flowered in four-inch pots, and for their size, carry a greater wealth of blossoms than any other plant. The pleasing lilac-pink blossoms are so profuse from the pot up, that they can be worked into baskets of cut flowers, and are particularly adapted and decorative for table ornamentation. For hotel and restaurant dinner tables, one plant, with the pot in a small jardiniere or with paper cover, is a satisfactory adornment, taking the place of the small vase of flowers that is now so expensive.



Primula Malacoides in Decorated Basket.



Primula Malacoides from - n. Pot. In Small Basket.

Many of the cheaper handle baskets are of a size to hold one plant, either with or without the pot. With a touch of narrow ribbon on the handle, this will often take the place of cutflowers, and satisfy the customer that would have walked out without purchasing anything. The narrow wicker jardiniere boxes with handles at the ends are very showy when filled with these primulas and are just the thing for a window ledge. Where there is sale for something larger, several may be put into a pan together, which, with a little decoration, will be found very effective.

The greatest use should be made of all kinds of decorative helps, the newest offerings of the supply houses. Many of these, such as mats, colored papers, skeleton baskets, etc., are inexpensive. Colored cords, with tassels, come in all colors; the thinnest of these, about the size of stout wrapping string, cost but a trifle. They, however, give a good finish when the same color as the flower, they are used to bind a white paper cover to a blooming plant.

These primulas can be made very useful, worked in with cut flowers in large designs and clusters. Wash out the soil and bind the roots in sphagnum, making a small, compact ball. When trimmed of unnecessary foliage, this can be stemmed or wired to be conveniently handled and suitable for any floral arrangement. They will remain fresh considerably longer than the cut flowers.

Retailers who make a specialty of plant baskets, find they are good stock to feature, not only at the holidays, but all through the season, many customers preferring them on account of their lasting qualities to baskets of cut flowers. For these, arranged with choice ferns and variegated foliage, the primulas are very desirable. A tube vase, holding a few choice roses, snapdragons or other flower, hidden among the plants, will add a decorative feature for which many will be willing to pay the extra cost.

Lindley Co. Buys Arnold Box Department.

The Lindley Box & Paper Co., Marion, Ind., which specializes in the manufacture of florist boxes, announces that it has bought the flower box department of the A. A. Arnold Paper Box Co., of Chicago, which will be moved at once to Marion. The Arnold Co. has made a feature of heavy weight boxes, the Lindley product being the standard containers for local delivery of light weight packages. In the consolidation of the two lines, the Lindley Box & Paper Co. plans to eliminate considerable of the selling expense made necessary in the past by two representatives calling on the same trade, and improvments in the operating department will also reduce manufacturing costs, which will offset continued advances in raw material.

BRAMPTON, ONT.—According to W. G. Peacock, of the Dale estate, higher prices for Christmas stock prevailed than in 1918, with not nearly enough roses, carnations and violets to meet the demand. The supply of bulbous flowers was about as usual. In quality, roses were better than in former years, but carnations showed poor condition. The call for orchids and roses proved greater than in past seasons, and high prices did not deter customers in buying what they wanted.

SEDALIA, MO.—With prices about 50 per cent advanced over last year, Christmas trade reported by the State Fair Floral Co. showed an increase of 25 per cent in volume of business, with more cash transactions and fewer charge accounts than usual. In cut flowers, the supply and demand were almost evenly balanced, with no bulbous stock sought. The quality in general was about the same as last season. Poinsettias had a strong movement, but otherwise pot plants did not move any too well until the supply of cut flowers was depleted.

THE CARNATION.

Carnation Society's Coming Meeting.

The annual meeting and exhibition of the American Carnation Society is to be held at the Hotel LaSalle, Chicago, January 21-22, and every carnation grower should make an effort to attend the meeting and exhibit some blooms and help make both the meeting and exhibition a big success. The society deserves the support of everyone who grows carnations. Owing to the war conditions of the last few years, the interest in the society's work has not been as active as in the earlier years of its existence, but as the secretary states in the schedule of premiums, conditions are now restored to practically normal. This, together with the various features of interest that will be undertaken at this exhibition, will well repay anyone for the time and expense of attending the meeting. The many problems connected with the culture of the carnation, together with the control of the diseases, and the eradication of the insect pests that attack the plants, are live subjects that are of important interest to every grower. Any member can bring any or all of these questions before the meeting, have them discussed, and get the experience of the growers present, which is one of the great advantages the members of the society derive from attending its meetings.

The display of new varieties will also be of special interest to the growers. There are quite a number of new ones that will be on exhibition for the first time in the west, showing that though the conditions of the past few years have been far from encouraging for the production of new seedlings, the enthusiastic carnation breeder has been keeping steadily on with his work.

The feature of the exhibition that will be of particular interest to the florist from the smaller cities will be the re-arrangement of the flowers on the second morning of the exhibition by the Chicago Retail Florists' Association. This will show what can be done to popularize the carnation for the purposes of home display and presentation.

Article 3 of the rules and regulations, governing the exhibition, states that only members of the American Carnation Society are permitted to stage either competitive or non-competitive exhibits, except in classes 35 and 36, which are open to all. Therefore, non-members who wish to exhibit should get in touch with the secretary and join the society.

Care of the Plants.

The Christmas holidays have now gone down in history, and the carnation grower can reflect on results obtained for his product. First quality carnation blooms were in great demand and brought good prices, in some sections, the demand being far greater than the supply, and according to a general observation of the conditions of the trade, there is going to be a healthy demand for good carnations for several weeks yet. But do not let this tempt any grower to drive and feed up his plants to hurry up the crop. The plants have a long season before them, and when they can be made to produce blooms and make new shoots steadily together, much better results for the season will be obtained.

THE S. A. F. ST. VALENTINES' DAY POSTER.

Take advantage of the bright sunshine during a clear day to air the plants freely, so as to give the growth substance and strength to withstand the many dark, cloudy days which follow one fine one at this season of the year.

The plants are now full of buds and growths as thick as the proverbial field of wheat, and to keep them steadily carrying on in this state, they must receive the closest attention to their general routine needs, of which watering disbudding, cutting the flowers and keeping the insect pests in check are the most important.

GETTING BLOOMS READY FOR EXHIBITION.

The quality of the blooms the plants are producing now are an indication of what they will be at the time they are needed for the C. S. A. show, January 21-22. The plants will continue to gain strength every day from now on, and if they are producing good quality blooms now, they will be a little better two or three weeks from now, and the grower's principal concern will be to be careful with the watering and maintain an even temperature. Cut the blooms as soon as they are ready, so as to give those coming along a chance to keep up the quality. If the quality of the blooms being cut now are of second rate, with weak stems and the calyx bursted, there is little chance to make exhibition blooms out of them.

Read carefully the instructions to judges of seedling classes on page 17 of the C. S. A. premium list, and if you have a seedling, judge it for yourself and see how it measures up to the qualifications called for.

PROPAGATING.

One of the principal parts of the work which should receive attention at this time, is the propagation of the stock for next season. Every healthy cutting that can be taken without distressing the plants should be put in the propagating bed until a good surplus beyond the actual requirements of the establishment is obtained. Then, if there are any left, and there is time for them to be propagated, it will pay to root them for sale or to be grown on for field plants.

C. W. JOHNSON.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—With prices better than in 1918, this year's Christmas business showed a 20 per cent gain, according to Abele Bros. In cut flowers, carnations and roses were the short items, but there was a good supply of bulbous stock with moderate sales. Carnations were the leaders in popularity, followed by roses. There was an increase in the volume of business in flowering plants.

PLANT NOTES.

Seeds for Present Sowing.

There are a number of plants, that in order to obtain the best stock, it is necessary that the seeds be sown during January. Centaurea gymnocarpa is slow in making its growth, and to have nice plants for edging the beds of geraniums and other plants, an early start is required. Vinca rosea should be sown in January to obtain a good blooming stock at planting time. Lobelias should be sown by February 1 that fine stock plants may be had. If it is proposed to reset the smilax beds next year this is the time to get the seed started. Begonia Vernon and the other summer blooming varieties, if sown early, make fine plants by May, full of flowers. Gloxinias and tuberous begonias can be sown at this time and blooming plants had for the coming summer. Many growers have given up the propagation of verbenas from cuttings and depend upon seedlings, and to have a nicely branched plant by June 1 the seed should be sown the last of January. Another useful border plant is Pyrethrum aureum (golden feverfew) and this should be sown early to get good sized plants at bedding out time. There are not many cannas these days, grown from seed, but anyone intending to grow them in that manner should sow the seeds in January. These seeds will germinate much more readily and evenly if soaked in water for 24 hours before planting. Asparagus plumosus and A. Sprengeri should be sown now when there is good heat in the greenhouses, and these seeds, like the cannas, start much more evenly if soaked.

Cyclamens.

"What can we do with the old cyclamen plants?" is a question often asked by many growers. As a rule the answer is, "Throw them away," for a plant can be grown to a 6-inch or 7-inch pot size in 16 months. That is, seed sown in September will produce such a plant for Christmas the following year, and it is uncertain how the old plants will carry through the spring and summer. There is a limited demand for cyclamen plants in larger sizes than 7-inch pots and they must of necessity bring a good figure to make them remunerative. After they are through blooming the best way to handle them is to shake the old soil out and pot them up in fresh soil, two parts loam, one part well rotted manure and one part leaf mold, with a good sprinkling of sharp sand. If the soil is inclined to be heavy and sticky, add more sand. They can frequently be potted in a pot a size smaller than that in which they have been growing. Place them in a cool temperature, that is, in a house from 45° to 50° at night, so as to encourage root action and slow growth. It used to be the custom to dry the bulbs off so that they lost all their foliage, and start them in the spring, but growers have found that our springs and summers are too hot and dry and it is often difficult to make the bulb, after it has been dried off, break a good luxuriant foliage, and it is far better to keep the plant growing all the time. As the warm, sunny days of spring come on, the plants should be slightly shaded and as early as possible placed in cold frames and the glass shaded. The shade should not be made too heavy or the leaves will become drawn and an unshapely plant will be the result. After the plants have begun to grow, care should be taken that they do not become pot bound, but shifted into large sizes as soon as necessary. The watering of this stock will require constant study and attention. They should never become too dry and it is very easy to over-water, so they will require looking after very closely until a good growth has been encouraged.

Begonias of Lorraine Type.

For the large plants for next winter's flowering we are placing the cuttings in the propagating bench now. The plants were selected before Christmas and strong, healthy specimens taken for propagation. The flowers were removed and the plants given a warm location that the best vigor might be maintained. Any leaf showing blemish is discarded, only clean, healthy leaves being used from which to raise the young stock. A warm propagating bed is chosen for these plants and the stems are inserted in the sand deep enough so that about half an inch of the leaf is below the surface. They are kept moist and warm until they are rooted, when they are potted in 2½-inch pots and placed in a warm house and shifted along as required. This may seem a trifle early by many growers to start the propagating of these plants, but there is always demand for some large specimens and fine leaves are obtainable at this time and they root easily during January and February when the propagating bench is warm. The plants will require considerable care and attention during the heated spell of July and August, but with plenty of ventilation and a light shade, they are easily kept moving and make fine plants for the holidays.

Spiraeas.

The spiræas are always a very useful plant at Easter, but they are classed among the cheaper plants at that time, so should be grown in such a way that they do not occupy valuable space any more than necessary. They should be brought into a cool house by the middle of January and until the foliage begins to grow can be placed along the edge of the walks if room is not available, but they must not be left standing in this location too long, for when the leaves begin to unfold they quickly draw toward the light and a plant growing to one side of the pot will be the result. So as soon as growth starts they should be placed on the bench in full light. They can be grown quite close together for some time, but when the foliage begins to touch that of the plant beside it they should be spaced out and given room enough for the plants to grow shapely. Spiræas require a large quantity of water during their entire culture, especially those that are potted in as small a pot as possible, which is the general custom with all growers. To make the large specimens, two or three clumps are planted in the same pot when started. These will make large plants for church decorations at Easter. If the plants are grown in a house which is to be fumigated by tobacco smoke they should either be removed from the house or well covered with papers; the foliage quickly burns when subjected to tobacco smoke and the plants are blemished.

Fuel Conservation.

Oil as fuel, and practical burners, together with water grates for burning culm and other low-grade coal, were the interesting subjects of the January meeting of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia. It was clearly shown that both methods were practical and economical. It is said that culm, fine coal and coal dirt are but coal flakes, having the same heating qualities, ton for ton, as the larger commercial sizes. The difficulty heretofore has been to get oxygen through this compact material in the ordinary grate. A new hollow water grate, connected with the water in the boiler prevents its burning out, while a forced draft through numerous small holes or openings in the grate underneath affords perfect combustion. As the supply of this class of fuel is practically inexhaustible, and its price less than that of the higher grades, it follows that it will be much more economical.

Petroleum fuel oil embraces certain grades of crude oil, from which gasoline and some other by-products have been taken, which is necessary to make it safe and free from explosive gases. At its present price of five to five and one-half cents per gallon, it is said to equal coal for the same amount invested, three and one-half barrels of crude oil being equal to one ton of best coal, but oil is the most efficient, being always the same in fuel value, while coal varies. There is no occasion to frequently replenish fires as with coal, which operation always, for the time being, chills and reduces the steam pressure ,while the ease of operation by simply adjusting valves, so as to insure perfect combustion at whatever pressure desired, does away with all the labor of handling coal and ashes. In mild weather, or during the day when the sun gives sufficient heat, when coal fires are banked, consuming fuel, there need be no consumption of oil, but the moment it is turned on again there is no waiting for the fire to come up, it being at once at full efficiency.

The oil burning apparatus is very simple and compact. It consists of a half-horse power motor, which is connected to a pump that draws the oil from its storage tank. The same power drives a fan and rotating cup to 3,200 revolutions a minute, which centrifugal force breaks the oil into a fine mist or spray, mixing it with the air that is then projected at a low pressure into the ash pit and ignited. The apparatus is attached to an iron plate, which takes the place of the ash pit doors. It is necessary to take out the grate bars and set in fire brick all around the sides of the ash pit, so that the iron is not touched by the flames.

The heat is regulated by the usual steam automatic apparatus, which, connected to the oil pump, regulates the supply of oil, so that any desired steam pressure can be maintained.

Just at present, on account of conditions in Mexico, the fuel oil supply is uncertain, but it was predicted that with increased transportation facilities, particularly more tank steamers, the supply would, in the near future, be ample and continuous, so that the price would not exceed that of coal, and perhaps be cheaper. Growers not convenient to railroad sidings, or near industrial centers where delivery was possible with tank auto trucks, will have difficulty in getting economic delivery.

Steam Sterilization for Soils.

The urgent need for practical methods of steam sterilization whch can be applied to hotbeds and cold-frames, as well as to greenhouse soils, is commented on in Circular 151 of the Ohio agricultural experiment station, Wooster, which contains much useful information on the subject. The methods as developed, are three in number; involving, first, the perforated pipe method of steam sterilization; second, the inverted pan method, using steam; and third, the formaldehyde or formalin drench method.

The perforated pipe method of steaming appears to consist at its best, of a set of perforated pipes, with crosshead and high pressure boiler connection. These pipes are connected and buried in the soil of the bed, either with or without partial banking up of the soil. The surface of the bed is then covered with canvas or other covering, and the steam passed into the system for such a period as is required to heat the soil to the necessary temperature, which for best results, is 180 to 212 degrees Fahrenheit, maintained for a period of one hour or more. The time required to reach this temperature will vary with the boiler area, pressure and other steam and soil factors. The length of the pipes should be one-half or one-third the total length of the large beds. Generally 1½ inch pipe is used, with holes ⅛-inch, bored in a straight line about one foot apart. The pipes are buried in the beds at intervals of 12 to 16 inches. The crossheads and main to the boiler should be 2-inch pipe or larger. In practice, it is found that to make the best use of fuel and labor, two sets of perforated pipes are necessary. Estimating eight pipes to a bed, and 30 feet long, 240 feet of pipe will be required for and waving to the cheering children one set, and two sets, wth crosshead pipe will require about 500 feet. The two sets are suggested in order to save the time necessary in digging up and resetting the system, as this resetting of one system may be done while steam is kept going in the other; thus, no labor is idle, and steam will not have to be kept on unnecessarily long.

The inverted pan, as originally devised to treat nematode infested soils in Florida, is adapted to being lifted and transferred where the distances are not too great. The apparatus consists of a galvanized iron pan, six inches deep, and 6x10 feet in size, which is inverted over the soil to be sterilized, and the steam admitted under pressure. The pan is supplied with steam hose connections, has sharp edges which are forced into the soil on all sides to prevent the escape of steam, and is equipped with handles to facilitate moving, the weight being about 400 pounds. The steam should be kept at as high pressure as possible, 80 to 100 pounds being best, and the treatment should continue for one or two hours, depending on the pressure maintained. Experiments conducted at 80 degrees C., under 100 pounds pressure, for one hour, showed the best results in killing both fungus and weed seeds. When one section of the bed is finished, the pan is carried to an unsterilized portion and the operation is repeated until the entire bed has been steamed. The material used in the construction of the pans is galvanized sheet iron, the most useful weight being 20 guage, or possibly 22 gauge, the latter being heavy enough to require little in the way of frame supports. The entrance pipe for the steam should be in T-form, so as not to blow holes in the soil, and if placed at the end of the pan, will not interfere with the box boards when on the frames. For the most economical use of fuel and labor in the pan method of steaming, three or possibly four pans will be necessary, according to the width of the beds. The estimated cost of the pans is $15 each. The first outlay will be about $50 for a set of three pans and connections.

For the work of drenching, it is rather difficut to make estimates as to the cost of appliances, as well as labor, since appliances are the usual watering devices of greenhouses and cold frames, and the labor will be somewhat variable according to the effectiveness of these devices, usually some form of a sprinkling can, a force pump with hose and nozzles for application through the Skinner system of overheat watering. Naturally, the cost items in the drench method become reduced almost to the cost of material. The best strength seems to be three to three and one-half pints or pounds of formaldehyde to 50 gallons of drench, applied at the rate of seven-eighths to one gallon per square foot of surface. Estimating that formaldehyde (U. S. P. 40%) costs 80 cents per gallon, and that a strength of approximately 1-125 (3½ pints or pounds to 50 gallons of water) be used at the rate of one gallon of solution to each square foot of area, the material to treat one house of 3,000 square feet would cost approximately $21. The estimated cost by the perforated pipe method for the same area is figured at $15.40, and for the inverted pan method, $12.20.

DIRECTOR, SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

William F. Ekas, president of the Florists' Club of Baltimore, Md., state vice-president of the Society of American Florists since 1917, and also a director in the national organization under affiliation for 1920, was born in the above city, October 5, 1890, the son of the late William A. and Mrs. Minnie Ekas. He is the descendant of a long line of experienced growers, his grandparents and three uncles on his mother's side, and two uncles in his father's family, being well known in the trade, and his father, at the time of his death, was foreman for Samuel Feast & Sons, prominent Baltimore florists.

William F. Ekas was educated in the public schools of his native city and at an early age began to gain knowledge of the profession he has so successfully followed. For 17 years he was associated with his uncle, Harry Ekas, in the growing and retail trade, later taking the position he now occupies with the Baltimore branch of the Leo Niessen Co., of Philadelphia, Pa. During the world war he spent some months in government construction work at Edgewood arsenal, Edgewood, Maryland. When but six years of age, he was elected an honorary member of the Florists' Club of Baltimore, and attained full membership in the organization on reaching his majority. He is a member of the Maryland Horticultural Society, a life member of the Society of American Florists, secretary of the publicity committee of the state of Maryland, and a member of Hiram lodge, A. F. & A. M.

Mr. Ekas is widely known as one of the aggressive, younger members of the trade, and is keenly interested in the advancement of floriculture in general, and the success of the publicity campaign to "Say It With Flowers."

FREDERICTON, N. B.—J. Bebbington & Son had a better Christmas demand than last year, with prices showing an advance of 100 per cent. The supply of roses, carnations and violets, which came largely from Ontario and Boston, was plentiful, with quality better than a year ago. Roses and carnations led the demand. There was a limited call for ferns, palms and holly wreaths. A splendid lot of cinerarias in bloom sold at from $1 to $2 each and solanums proved another popular item. Geraniums helped out wonderfully.

TERRE HAUTE, IND.—N. B. and C. E. Stover report 1919 Christmas sales as showing an increase of about 110 per cent over those of a year ago, with a corresponding advance in prices. While bulbous stock was of good quality, there were plenty of poor roses, no violets and a light demand for carnations. In fact, the quality in general was much inferior to that of the 1918 holiday season. Poinsettias took the lead, with roses in second place. The demand for the former seems to increase with each succeeding year. Plant sales were about the same as a year ago. The middle and working classes were the flower buyers this year, the best trade demanding plants.

New York Florists' Club.

INSTALLATION OF OFFICERS.

The New York Florists' Club met in its hall in the Engineering building, 25-33 West 39th street, on the evening of January 12 and officers-elect were installed as follows: A. M. Henshaw, president; Charles Knight, vice-president; John Young, secretary; Wm. C. Rickards, Jr., treasurer. Trustees to serve two years: Arthur Herrington, Max Schling, Emil Schloss. The following were elected to membership: Robert Johnson, Ardsley, N. Y.; A. L. Underhill, Babylon, N. Y.; Samuel Seligman, 239 Fourth avenue; Edward J. Brenner, 103 West 28th street; David Bielefield, 11 East 101st street, New York. A number were proposed for membership.

Retiring President Kessler called the meeting to order and after well chosen remarks, turned the gavel over to President Henshaw, who made an appropriate address. All the other officers were duly installed and pledged their best efforts for the good of the club. Treasurer Rickards read his report, which showed a satisfactory balance in the treasury. President Henshaw appointed committees as follows:

Dinner—Roman J. Irwin, Charles Schenck, P. F. Kessler, L. E. Dupuy, A. Buckholtz.

Legislative—W. H. Siebrecht, Jr., F. R. Pierson, Patrick O'Mara.

Exhibition—Harry O. May, Paul A. Rigo, Aubrey Nash, Percy B. Rigby, Alfred Kottmiller.

Awards—Wallace R. Pierson, Joseph A. Manda, P. W. Popp, Wm. H. Duckham, C. H. Totty, Frank Traendly, Max Schling.

Publicity—J. H. Pepper, A. T. De La Mare, G. E. M. Stumpp.

Transportation — Thos. Boothe De Forest, E. A. Manda, C. Lowther.

Essay—Arthur Herrington, A. T. De La Mare, J. H. Pepper.

Delegates to New York State Federation of Clubs—Charles Weathered and Max Schling.

The house and entertainment committee for 1919 was reappointed.

C. Englemann, who has an extensive carnation range at Saffron Walden, England, who has been on a trip to South America, and is now touring this country, was introduced to the meeting and made a pleasing talk. He left England in September. President Vincent, of the American Dahlia Society was also a visitor.

Charles H. Totty reported a meeting of the flower show committee had been held in the afternoon and that the outlook was favorable.

The meeting was called for 7:30 o'clock and the business was quickly transacted. A large number of ladies were present and dancing and refreshments caused many to linger until the "wee sma" hours. A. F. F.

National Publicity for Flowers.

In the preparation of the list of subscribers to the campaign for 1920, it is found that only about one-eighth of the florists in the country have, so far, realized that it is to their advantage to support this movement to the extent of pledging subscriptions. There is no longer any doubt as to the efficacy of the campaign—in the face of the exceptionally large volume of business accomplished during the recent holidays there could not be. If the campaign was not the most prominent factor in bringing about this condition, what was? Various features figuring in the volume of the Christmas trade were not mere happenings—the unusual demand for flowers and plants for gifts, for instance. This can be traced directly to our magazine advertising, which emphasized most strongly the suitability of our products for gifts.

Our publicity committee, of course, takes a very broad view of the matter of publicity for the year just opened. The prestige we have gained for our slogan must be kept up, and this can only be done by our further and most persistent effort. We need no longer urge the importance of this, for if it is not now realized to the full, it never can be. The public likes the slogan and responds to it readily enough, so that we have the prospect of immediate returns for our efforts continually before us. The more we do, the greater the returns, and we must not lose sight of this influence, which it is in our power to exert.

A notable instance of the possibilities for popularizing the slogan is found in the Von Tilzer song, "Say It With Flowers," which has pleased the public so much that it has become one of the greatest "hits" ever made on the stage. At the big new Capitol theatre in New York, the largest in the world, the very astute producing director, Ned Wayburn, has taken the song for an especial feature in his season's programme covering many weeks, and stages it two or three times daily, with an ensemble of 39 singers, including chorus and ballet. The attendance at each performance averages about 6,000 people, very many in the audiences coming from distant points, so that it is not merely local publicity.

A new series of magazine advertisements have been prepared covering special flower days and special occasions for gifts of flowers, and the use of these advertisements in large or small degree depends wholly on the support we are to receive from those most interested—the florists. The St. Valentine's day advertisement is a page, in four colors, to appear in seven national magazines, and it promises to awaken a great deal of otherwise dormant interest in this "people's festival." The trade should link up with this advertisement by using liberally the poster stamps and posters supplied by our promotion bureau, particulars of which are promptly furnished on application to the secretary.

Is our committee to have the financial support necessary in all this work for the uplift of the trade? Will that large body of florists who have stood aloof from this movement, join their more generous brethren in the trade who have sponsored the campaign in the last two years, and have pledged their support during the present year? Will they help us to take more than a few steps into the "promised land" we have sought?

We do not ask contributions of a size that would "pinch"—merely an equitable support, accompanied by good-will and the desire to participate in work which is for the general good of the trade. "Help us to help you." That is the slogan of the committee, and expresses a whole lot. Will you do it?

SUPPLY LOW AND HIGH PRICED.

Market conditions have not changed any since the last writing. Stock is still scarce and high in price, and there is no relief in sight until we get some sunshine. Cloudy weather with rain or snow has been the programme ever since the first of the year. The retailers report a decrease in business since the holidays, but the demand has been heavy enough to use all the stock coming in, and, in fact, anyone calling on the wholesale houses after 9 a. m. usually finds them with nothing to offer except a few fancy roses. There are more of these seen than those of medium or short stem, and of these Columbia is the best. Carnations have been the big disappointment of the present season, as the cut has been small and of poor quality. Lily of the valley is arriving in greater quantity and is somewhat cheaper in price. The supply of violets is equal to the demand and of better quality than this market has seen for some time.

NOTES.

The Florists' and Gardeners' Club held its regular monthly meeting, January 6. Frank Alker gave an interesting talk on horticultural books, and F. Bates, representing Lord & Burnham Co., read a paper on "Standardized Greenhouses." An exhibition of plants and cut flowers was made by Thos. Stingiss and Roderick W. Ross. Three lady florists attended and met with a hearty reception. After the session, the members enjoyed a bountiful lunch at the expense of the latest addition of the Ludwig family, son of DeForest, whose birth was recently chronicled.

George Wessenaur, of Sewickley, Pa., reports the largest season, in a social way, in his history.

There will be a large delegation from this district attend the carnation convention in Chicago.

Homer Wood, of the McCallum Co., is on a business trip in the east.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.—A 55 per cent gain in volume of Christmas business as compared with 1918, with little advance in prices, is the report of A. Washburn & Sons. The supply of carnations, violets and roses was nearly equal to requirements, with quality better than last year. Plants sold as well as usual. Buying began early and cash sales were more numerous than in previous years.

CINCINNATI, O.—Forty per cent greater business during the 1919 Christmas period, with prices higher on all items than a year ago is reported by H. W. Sheppard. There was a plentiful supply of roses, but carnations and violets were not equal to the demand. Sales of bulbous stock were moderate. In comparing quality of the stock with that offered last year, roses and carnations were good, with lily of the valley and orchids poor. Ward roses and baby primroses were in greater demand than in previous years and flowering plants sold best. An interesting feature of the trade was the willingness of the public to pay for the best stock available.

Albany, N. Y.

CLUB MEETING.

Over 40 members of the local florists' club were present at the January session, which was held in Troy on the invitation of the members who live in that city. The meeting place was the store of Joseph Gettings, who conducts the Colonial Flower Shop, 452 Fulton street, and commodious and satisfactory it proved to be. William Newport, the retiring president, called the meeting to order, and Robert Davidson, the retiring secretary, read the minutes of the December meeting. The new president, Edward P. Tracy, and Louis H. Schaefer, the secretary-elect, were escorted to their chairs by a committee named by the retiring president. They accepted their new offices gracefully, and upon the cessation of the applause, James H. Snyder, of Rhinebeck, a violet grower, presented a bouquet of violets to each of the new incumbents. Discussions of reports submitted by Fred A. Danker, chairman of the flower show committee, and Thomas F. Tracey, the treasurer, took up considerable time. Mr. Danker said that the "Say It With Flowers" week, observed last November in Albany, Troy and Schenectady, had been satisfactory to the trade. Mr. Tracey reported $123 still owing for expenses in connection with the work of the special committee in the three cities, and that this amount could be collected from the growers, retailers, and those affiliated with the trade. Several voluntary subscriptions were made at the close of the reading of the report, and Mr. Danker said that at the next meeting of the committee, the members expected to be able to pay all bills and to prepare a final report. The subject of trade through the holidays, 1919, brought responses from a considerable number. The retailers, Trojans, said that the high prices had acted as a deterrent to many of their customers, but that the total of sales was about the same as a year ago. Some of the retailers were disposed to blame the growers for increasing their prices too abruptly at the opening of the holiday season, and other retailers said that the growers, in view of the greatly increased costs of growing their commodities, were justified in making the increases they did. James Snyder explained the violet situation from the growers' standpoint at Rhinebeck. The complaints from the trade about the wide variations in quotations from the growers, he said, were due to differences in the class of stock offered and a lack of co-operation and agreement among the growers themselves. The club voted to entertain the delegates to the convention of the New York State Federation of Horticultural Societies and Floral Clubs with a banquet at The Hampton, Albany, on the night of January 15. The delegates will hold their sessions during the day in the hotel, and will be the guests of the Albany club at a number of entertainments and the dinner. The Albany florists will decorate the banquet hall in a befitting manner.

Five applications filled out at the meeting were accepted in order that the new members might attend the dinner on January 15. Among the visitors at the meeting were: Louis Hanfling, New York; Stephen Green, with H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., and James J. Karins, with Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa., Messrs. Hanfling and Green gave optimistic reports of the condition of trade in their territory. The club begins the year with 70 members, a gain of 16 in one year, and a balance of about $200 in the treasury. After the meeting, refreshments supplied by the Trojan hosts and a social hour were enjoyed.

NOTES.

Through the holidays, poinsettias, solanums, cyclamens, greens, and decorative material sold best. There was a good supply of Christmas trees, all of which brought record prices. F. A. Danker was perhaps the only retailer who had azaleas. He showed some fine plants in the smaller sizes, and they sold well.

Joseph W. Seibert, a retail florist of 199 Congress street, Troy, and a member of the club, died during the holidays, after a two days' illness of pneumonia. He had been a member only six months. He was fond of cacti, and had a unique collection of those queer plants. His wife and several adult children survive.

LIMITED SUPPLY CURTAILS.

With continued cloudy weather, home-grown stock is still scarce. In roses, Ophelia, Russell and Premier are very good but the supply is limited and fancy prices maintain. Killarneys move at more moderate figures. Carnations are also in short supply and wholesale at from 10 to 15 cents, depending on grade. Paper Whites, now more plentiful, are playing an important part in many orders. Stevia is also increasing and pot plants in seasonable varieties are numerous.

NOTES.

W. J. Barnes had a busy week with orders for many decorations for the implement show and installations of lodge officers. Funeral and hospital orders keep up well.

Manager Neff, of the Muehlbach Flower Shop, says the new year is making a good start, with many orders for decorations, corsages and funeral work.

The Wm. L. Rock Flower Co. reports a strong demand but short crops are curtailing business at times.

Arthur Newell is having excellent business in all lines at his fine establishment.

H. Kusik reports stock falls short of requirements daily.

A. F. Barbe reports a good start on the 1920 business.

BUSINESS VERY GRATIFYING.

This city has every reason to be proud of the holiday trade, all reports indicating better business than in any previous year, the volume increased by many entertainments and social functions, which called for much florists' stock and handiwork. Flowers were plentiful and prices never better. There were, however, very few complaints. Plants were not of as good quality as in former years, the flowers seeming smaller, especially in poinsettias and begonias. Cyclamens and primulas were good, as were solanums, and there were a few baby azaleas offered. American Beauty roses were in good demand, but there was only one grade, selling at $36 per dozen. Other varieties ranged $10 and upward. Carnations sold out completely at $4 and $5 per dozen. Violets met with fair movement, but receipts were uncertain. The shops were never more attractive than this year. The leading hotels and clubs were busy with various functions and many debutantes were presented in their own homes. Three bank openings also gave the trade plenty of work. Weather conditions were favorable until New Year's day when the mercury went down to zero and remained there for the day following, making deliveries difficult.

NOTES.

Miss A. L. Faul, of S. A. Anderson's force, is taking a much needed rest. The employes at this establishment were given a two-day rest period after the holiday rush.

W. Mark Palmer is now a very active member of the Kiwanis club.

OBITUARY.

William Stuart Allen.

William Stuart Allen, a pioneer wholesale florist of New York, died at his home in Larchmont, N. Y., January 13. His illness began with influenza in February, 1919, and continued until September, when he improved. From October until the week before his death, he was at his New York store almost every business day. Complications set in, however, and he sank rapidly toward the end.

Mr. Allen was born at Union Springs, N. Y., 65 years ago, the son of the late Charles Linnaeus Allen, a noted writer on horticultural topics. In 1880, he embarked in the wholesale business in New York and had been active in it since that date. For a time he was manager of the New York Cut Flower Co., but for many years was in business for himself. He was the first secretary of the New York Florists' Club and was one of its organizers, but in late years he had withdrawn from public activities.

Of Quaker parentage, he had the peace loving attributes of that sect. He is survived by his widow, one daughter, one grand-daughter and one brother, Charles H. Allen, of Floral Park, N. Y.

F. C. Weber.

F. C. Weber, a well known florist of St. Louis, Mo., died recently in that city, age 74 years, after a week's illness with pneumonia. He came to this country from Germany at an early age and his career had been one of achievement. As a young man he was employed as gardener on the Chouteau estate, later entering the retail florist field in which he continued for nearly half a century, being located at the time of his death at 4300 Olive street, where he had one of the finest stores in the city. Always progressive, many of the newer ideas in flower merchandising originated in his establishments. During the past 15 years many of the responsibilities of the business have been placed in the hands of his son, F. C. Weber, Jr. He had a wide circle of friends by whom Mr. Weber was held in the highest esteem.

J. J. W.

DOVER, O.—According to C. Betscher, Christmas business for 1919 was on a par with last year's volume, and while sales were much higher, the shortage of stock of nearly all lines held the amount of sales down. The quality of the stock was better than in 1918. Moderate priced purchases were curtailed and many sales were missed on this account.

PHOENIX, ARIZ.—An unusual increase in Christmas business, namely, 200 per cent. with prices 50 per cent higher than a year ago, was the result of extensive local newspaper advertising, and an increase in Florist Telegraph Delivery business. There was an adequate supply of carnations, violets and roses and a fair offering of bulbous stock, all of better quality than usual. Violets came in for an unusually heavy demand.

BALTIMORE, MD.—Christmas trade at the establishment of Samuel Feast & Sons showed a gain over 1918, with prices much higher. The quality of the stock was good and the supply on December 24 and Christmas Day was equal to the demand. American Beauty roses and gardenias were not up to usual standard, however. There was a marked increase in the sales of plants and plant baskets. Buyers were not critical, and with the good variety available, seemed well satisfied.

THE First National Bank of Chicago, in a New Year's card, recently addressed to its patrons, says: "More than half a century of continuing faith in the United States and its people impels us to look forward to a domestic tranquility bringing happiness and prosperity."

Coal Prices Advance.

Prices for anthracite coal in New York now are $11.05 to $11.60 per ton, an increase of 60 cents over last week. Dealers explain wages of truck drivers and handlers have risen from $175.00 per month to $10.00 per day, making necessary an advance in price of coal to consumer.

AN important decision regarding railroad and express claims is noted in our seed trade department this week.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

Public notice is hereby given that J. A. Peterson & Sons, 3132 McHenry avenue, Westwood, Cincinnati, O., submits for registration the new plant here mentioned:

Begonia seedling, No. 442. Parentage Begonia Mrs. J. A. Peterson x Socatrana. Strong, sturdy grower, large flowers, about the size and shape of those of Begonia Melior, color American Beauty rose, foliage dark bronze, turning to green. The variety was originated by this firm about three years ago, and as a commercial variety is considered by them as the best they have ever offered for dissemination, flowers lasting well on the plant, not falling readily.

Any person objecting to this registration, or to the use of the proposed name, is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Rose Day, January 25.

Governor Harding of Iowa has issued a proclamation, designating Sunday, January 25, as a day of tribute in that state, on which occasion all of its citizens are asked to wear a rose in honor of the American women who served, or are serving, in the Army Nurses' Corps.

The Fort Sheridan Recall, published by wounded soldiers at Fort Sheridan, Ill., realizing the sentiments of the thousands of men who have been under the devoted care of these noble women, endorses the movement in the hope that its observance will be nation-wide. Thousands of these nurses, justly called the "Roses on No Man's Land," are still serving in our army hospitals. A large number gave their lives, and as yet far too little credit has been given them for their unselfish, patriotic service. It would indeed be fitting were the governor of each state to issue a similar proclamation.

The governors of Kansas, Massachusetts, Ohio, Wisconsin and Maine have asked the citizens of their respective states to observe the day and Miss Nellie C. Jarvis, 4109 Plainview drive, Des Moines, Ia., has asked President Wilson to issue a proclamation making the occasion one of nation-wide tribute.

National Growers' Association.

J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill., past president of the Society of American Florists, in a recent communication urging the organization of a national flower growers' association, says:

"Since the Detroit convention last August, I have conferred with many of the leading growers of cut flowers and plants and the consensus of opinion is in favor of forming a national flower growers' association. It is also believed that during the meeting of the American Carnation Society at Chicago, January 21-22, would be an opportune time to form a temporary organization and make plans for a permanent body to be perfected during the convention of the S. A. F. at Cleveland, O., next August.

"I hereby issue a call for all growers interested, to be in Chicago, January 21-22, prepared to assist in planning a sister organization to the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association, and also another strong adjunct to the S. A. F.

"It is not necessary to at this time set forth the advantages to growers in uniting for a common cause. Come to Chicago and we feel sure you will be convinced."

Plant Quarantine No. 37.

It is proposed to extend the quarantine against the Japanese beetle in New Jersey. This affects all kinds of food plants, fruits and vegetables, also nursery and greenhouse products, including trees, shrubs, plants of all kinds, bulbs and flowers, and notice has been issued of a hearing to be held at the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., Room 11, Federal Horticultural Board, at 10 o'clock a. m., January 27, 1920.

Congressman Hudspeth, of Texas, has introduced a bill in the House of Representatives to amend the Federal Plant Quarantine Act of August 20, 1912, so as to provide and include that all expenses connected with the fumigation of importations, in cases where the same are required to be fumigated, be borne and paid by the United States government.

Illinois Plant Quarantine.

Governor Lowden, of Illinois, has issued a proclamation dated January 2, 1920, declaring it will be unlawful on and after January 20, 1920, to import into or within the state of Illinois, corn, broom corn, celery, dahlias, chrysanthemums, gladioli and geraniums grown in the states of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut and New York, on account of infestation by the European corn borer.

NEW YEAR'S DEMAND WONDERFULLY GOOD.

The trade is jubilant over the outcome of the New Year's demand. While the stores had prepared for a large amount of business, it turned out much better than anticipated. There was a fine lot of stock to select from, and prices ranged only slightly lower than at Christmas. Freesias are coming in much more freely this week, and are meeting with ready sale. As yet we have had none of the colored ones, but they are promised shortly. The carnation market is greatly improved. Stock of the best quality is now being freely offered. Sweet peas are appearing in larger quantities now. They are of excellent quality and bring good prices. The number of orchids has increased considerably during the past week and there is now an ample supply. Prices are from $1.50 to $2.00 each. Cypripediums are seen in all the better stores. A steady demand is reported for them. There are plenty of gardenias with no change in prices. Cut cyclamens are being much used for corsage work. There have been some extra well grown Glory of Mordrecht ferns shown at the various stores. For some reason they did not appeal to the public as was expected, but they were of much use in window decorations. Enormous quantities of Boston ferns were sold. Cibotiums, aspidistras, and aspleniums were also good sellers. At present there is a strong demand for ferns and asparagus. This is the season when this stock is usually in short supply.

NOTES.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co. made a splendid New Year's display of ericas. Many of the newest varieties were to be seen in pots. Some of them give promise of becoming good commerical sorts. The New Year's trade was very good at this establishment, the demand being about equally divided between cut flowers and plants.

M. H. Ebel, of Sacramento, was a visitor this week. He says he had a fine holiday trade this year. He noted a much heavier demand for flowering plants than in former years. Prices ruled a trifle higher than heretofore, but he had no difficulty in selling all the stock it was possible for him to obtain.

Podesta & Baldocchi's store was a splendid sight for New Year's. They had a fine collection of flowering and foliage plants. Their Erica melanthera and azaleas were especially fine. Victor Podesta is greatly pleased over the amount of business transacted.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. made their usual rich display and a large volume of business was done. Cattleyas and cypripediums in pots attracted plenty of eager buyers. They are handling a fine grade of Erica melanthera from the nursery.

Domoto Bros. were still able to supply the trade with some of their fine azalea stock at New Year's. Tom Domoto is well pleased over the season's trade, and thinks business will remain as good as it now is for a long time.

The E. W. McLellan Co. is supplying the trade with a fine cut of American Beauty roses. They had a large supply of flowers from their own greenhouses for their New Year's trade, and shipped a large amount of stock.

Albert O. Stein's store on Sutter street arranged one of the best displays in the city. Many beautiful specimen flowering plants were shown here to the best advantage, owing to the great size of the store.

J. A. Axell had a much heavier shipping trade than he expected. He says the demand for white chrysanthemums for long distance shipments is as strong as ever. He also handled a large supply of orchids.

Mrs. Darbee, on Hyde street, did a heavy shipping business in violets. She says the demand from the north and middle west was heavier than in other years. She is still shipping chrysanthemums.

Julius Eppstein, of the St. Francis hotel, is busy nearly all the time now on decoration work. The increase in the orchid supply has helped his trade very much as this flower is one of his leaders.

The Bay Counties Seed Co. made a fine display of flowering plants during the holidays. They had a fine lot of ericas as well as berried plants, all of which, Manager Tonini says, sold well.

Charles Stappenback, on Polk street, says the holiday trade in his neighborhood exceeded his expectations, and he could have sold more flowering plants if they were obtainable.

The Hollandia Nurseries, Berkeley, have a nice retail store and are doing a steady business. They carry a good line of flowering plants and shrubs of every description.

F. C. Jaeger & Son made a beautiful showing of foliage and other plants at New Years. They had a fine lot of specimen cibotiums, which sold out completely.

The Francis Floral Co. displayed a great quantity of their baskets filled with plants at New Year's. Basket work is a specialty here.

GOOD TRADE AND FAVORABLE WEATHER.

Business in general has been exceptionally good, and present conditions indicate a much better supply of stock in the near future than has been available during the past two weeks, the result of favorable weather. Roses are very scarce. Carnations are now arriving in better form and are more plentiful. Spencer sweet peas and violets are in splendid condition, and the demand for them far exceeds the supply. Some very fine Freesia Purity are among the daily offerings. Greens of all kinds are in good supply, a feature being shipments of Oregon ferns, received during the past few days. The fine quality is much appreciated.

NOTES.

Conrad Lengenfelder, the well-known grower, of West 32nd avenue, left for the Pacific coast, January 10, where he will enjoy a rest ordered by his doctors. He expects to meet S. R. Lundy in San Francisco, and they will travel together, visiting various parts of the state.

S. R. Lundy, of Boldt-Lundy, the House of Flowers, is on a visit to Portland, Ore., from which city he will go to California, where he will remain until the middle of February. During his absence, Mrs. Lundy is in charge.

Marion W. Uhlschmidt, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, has been visiting the trade in this section, and intends to make his headquarters in this city.

J. Schoepke, formerly at the Crump range, at Colorado Springs, is now with the Park Floral Co., at its cut flower plant.

Joe Ennigan, of the New York Floral Co., has been confined to his home for several days on account of illness.

ROSES TAKE DECIDED PRICE DROP.

Good roses have declined in price perhaps 33 1-3 per cent since Christmas, and in some instances, a level 50 per cent below the holiday prices was accepted. Short stock is quoted at $10, and is short as to length and supply. Premier, Columbia and Butterfly are the best flowers. Carnations are still holding their own, and the best are bringing as high as $12 per 100, while shorter stemmed stock and slightly inferior flowers sell as low as $8. Matchless, Benora and Mrs. C. W. Ward are of excellent quality. Calendulas are more plentiful, but short stemmed. The price remains as advertised. Paper Whites are of good quality and move at $6 per 100, some extra fine stock being quoted as high as $8. Soleil d'Or, the best yellow, is not grown extensively for this market. Sweet peas are more plentiful, and the quality is up to standard. Rose Queen, Mrs. Skaach, Venus and Christmas Pink are at their best, while Yarrawa and the lavender and blues are not as advanced as the pink varieties, and in consequence, shorter stemmed. Home grown single violets are still a scarce article and the California stock fills the void. Stevia is done for locally. What is being sold on the market, is shipped from Chicago. The retail end of the business has let down considerably since the first of the year and a few dull days were noted, but the life-saver of the established florist, funeral work, has helped to keep things going, the funeral of Dr. Christian R. Holmes, January 12, perhaps calling for the greatest amount of choice floral arrangements ever put out by local florists, and this in spite of the fact that friends were earnestly requested not to send flowers.

NOTES.

C. Jones, of the Walnut Hill Floral Bazaar, is busy taking inventory, and says he is well satisfied with the season's business, but claims the wholesale prices were too high. Stores in residential district, catering to local trade, are of necessity compelled to have a more uniform price, not being able to meet the wholesale fluctuations like the stores doing a transient business.

H. W. Sheppard and C. E. Critchell will be in the party that is going to Chicago next week to attend the annual meeting of the American Carnation Society.

C. E. Critchell is receiving some fine stock of the new rose, Dunlop. It should prove a welcome addition to the retailers' wares.

The Avondale Floral Co. is doing its share of business, and reports the demand for New Years ahead of last year.

Gus Adrian, Clifton, is maintaining his reputation as a grower of narcissi, his stock being of excellent quality.

Wm. Murphy Co. is receiving some very fine sweet peas.

SCARCITY OF CUT STOCK CONTINUES.

The scarcity of cut flowers, which began with the holidays, is with us as much as ever. While the weather for the week ending January 10 was ideal for the growers, and to a certain degree increased the daily cut, nevertheless the demand is far ahead of the supply. Funeral work has been an important factor, and it is not a case of price. On the contrary, "Can I get what I want?" is the order of the day. The supply of carnations has increased, but many more could be moved at good prices. Sweet peas, violets and bulbous stock are more plentiful and move well. Callas and rubrums are few and far between and sell at sight, while roses still continue scarce. The supply of stevia is still too great, while the green goods market is holding its own.

CLUB MEETING.

A good attendance at the regular florists' club meeting held January 8 was on hand to give the retiring officers a good send off, and promised the new officials their hearty support for the year 1920. Those installed were: Henry Welke, president; Fred H. Holton, treasurer; Eugene Oestreicher, secretary, and Gust Pohl, trustee for three years. Fred Gutermuth, vice-president-elect, was absent. Alfred Locker and Arthur Arndt, both of Wauwatosa, were elected to membership. James Livingstone's annual report proved that the club's financial standing had improved considerably over the year previous. A. Hare, chairman of the entertainment committee, announced the mid-winter dancing party to be held at the Calumet club, January 29. The chair called attention to the carnation convention and meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association to be held at Chicago, January 21-22, and expressed his wish that a large party from this city attend. This no doubt will be the case, as most of our carnation specialists are interested. President-elect Welke promised to greatly increase the membership list, and make the coming year the best ever, if he gets the hearty cooperation of the members. Just a little energy given by all ought to help our new president to accomplish a great deal. The main thing is to attend all the meetings.

STOCK IS CLEANING UP EVERY DAY.

Stock of all kind is cleaning up completely every day at high prices. Roses are in strong demand, especially American Beauty, Mrs. Chas. Russell, Columbia and Premier. Ophelia, Sunburst, Milady, Hoosier Beauty, Champ Weiland, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Killarney, White Killarney, Killarney Brilliant, Richmond, Montrose, My Maryland, Mrs. George Shawyer, Cecile Brunner, George Elgar and all the other varieties grown for this market, are also having a heavy call and there is never any surplus to speak of. Carnations are holding their own, and continue to command high figures. Sweet peas appear to be a trifle more plentiful, but are moving right along at prices ranging from $2 to $5 per 100. Lily of the valley is not selling as well as it might, even at the reduced prices, but the demand is gradually strengthening, and it would not be at all surprising if quotations advanced again. White and yellow narcissi are selling well this season, and some very high figures have been realized on this item. Jonquils and tulips are to be had in limited quantities. Orchids are more plentiful, but are in good demand. Gardenias continue to clean up every day. Snapdragons, stevia, mignonette, daisies, calendulas and violets are to be had. Callas are good property and clean up rapidly. Green goods are having a good call, especially galax and boxwood. Pussy willows are quite a factor in the market, and are selling at about 50 cents per bunch of 12 sprays. Wedding work has been plentiful the past few weeks with the retailers, and funeral orders have been numerous. Business so far during January has been exceptionally good, and the total sales show a great increase over those of the same period of 1919.

NOTES.

One of the best bits of recent evidence of flourishing prosperity in the trade, comes in the form of an announcement by Radon, French & Company, investment securities bankers, 111 West Monroe street, of a $200,000 preferred stock issue by The American Greenhouse Mfg. Co. The issue is being sold by the above named investment house, the Central Trust Company of Illinois functioning as transfer agent. Officers elected at a recent stockholders' meeting are as follows: Philip L. McKee, president and treasurer; J. D. Purdy, Jr., vice-president; John M. Cameron, secretary. Mr. McKee is sufficiently well known in the trade to require no identification. Mr. Purdy has been western representative of Spang-Chalfont & Co., pipe manufacturers, for several years, while Mr. Cameron is one of the most prominent corporation lawyers in the middle west. The American Greenhouse Manufacturing Co. will open its new Kansas City, Mo., office, January 19, in the New York Life Insurance building.

Otto Siebenthal, of Siebenthal & Nelson, Peoria, was here on a business trip this week. He has just equipped his store with an entire set of Randall's store fixtures, which he says gives him one of the prettiest establishments in that vicinity, thanks to William Abrahamson, manager of the A. L. Randall Co.'s store fixture department.

M. C. Wright, of the Lord & Burnham Co., reports business as exceedingly brisk, with the demand for greenhouse materials at this time of the year, the heaviest that his firm ever experienced.

A. L. Vaughan & Co.'s sales for January so far, show a great increase over those of the same period of 1919.

Miss Marguerite Arlin, of Bellevue, O., visited friends and relatives here this week.

Chicago Florists' Club.

The regular meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club was held at the Hotel Randolph, January 8, President Zech in the chair. After the various committees had presented their reports, the retiring president gave thanks to all the members for the support given him in his administration during the past year and expressed the hope that the club would soon have a home of its own. He urged every member to give loyal support to President-elect T. E. Waters, who was then escorted to the chair by E. A. Ollinger. Mr. Waters, in an eloquent address, promised fairness to all and punctuality in opening the meetings. The new president, who assumed his new work like a veteran, next installed Vice-President-elect A. T. Pyfer, Secretary-elect Fred Lautenschlager, Treasurer-elect Paul E. Weiss, and W. J. Keimel, director. Applications for membership were received from Ralph B. Howe, 231 West Madison street, Walter G. Poehlmann, Morton Grove, and Wm. T. Collins, 1457 East 70th street. Joseph Werstler, 2221 West Madison street, was elected to membership.

C. W. Johnson, chairman of the committee on arrangements for the joint convention of the American Carnation Society and the Illinois State Florists' Association, laid before the club the plans of this committee, all of which were approved. Arrangements have been completed for the annual banquet of these associations, to be held in the grand ballroom of the La Salle hotel, January 22, cost $3.00 per plate, including dancing and entertainment. There will also be a ladies' theatre party on the evening of January 21. President Waters on motion appointed a committee of club members to secure carnation exhibits for the show as follows: A. J. Zech, Guy French, Geo. J. Ball and Paul R. Klingsporn. The committee was instructed to do everything possible to insure a creditable display of carnations from this district. Attention of visitors was called to the urgent need of making hotel reservations early, all the local hotels being crowded to the point of turning away. Applications for reservations should be addressed to the La Salle hotel.

President-elect T. E. Waters and Secretary-elect F. Lautenschlager tendered their resignations as trustees, and the following were elected to serve for the unexpired terms: A. J. Zech, two years; August Poehlmann, one year.

Chairmen of standing committees for the ensuing year were appointed as follows, the appointees to select their associates on the committees: Good-of-the-club, Guy French; advertising, Fred Lautenschlager, Michael Barker and George Asmus; publicity, Aug. Lange; garden, James Morton; coal, C. L. Washburn; transportation, Michael Barker.

George Asmus made a rousing appeal for the housing of the club in a home of its own. This matter was placed in the hands of Mr. Asmus and the trustees for investigation with report at the February meeting.

The next meeting to be held February 5, has been set aside as the annual novelty night. Guy French, chairman of the good-of-the-club committee, will be in charge, and growers who have novelties to show should make arrangements at once.

The visitors included Fred Henoch, of the Ove Gnatt Co., La Porte, Ind.

Chicago Florists' Publicity.

There have been three great local meetings in the history of the Chicago trade. The first was held January 4, 1912, when P. J. Foley was elected president of the florists' club. The second great gathering was held October 10, 1918, when Fred Lautenschlager, chairman of the florists' Fourth Liberty Loan committee and his co-workers sent this branch of the trade over the top with subscriptions to the amount of $331,600. The latest great meeting occurred at the Hotel Randolph, January 12, the object being to raise funds among the wholesale, retail and grower florists for a local advertising campaign. The attendance on this occasion numbered considerably more than 200, the keenest interest being taken in the entire proceedings.

President Kohout of the Commercial Flower Growers' Association called the meeting to order and George Asmus was elected temporary chairman, Paul E. Weiss, secretary. Mr. Asmus told the object of the meeting and the urgent necessity for co-operation of the three groups of florists in raising funds for the purpose of advertising flowers and exploiting their uses. Mr. Asmus said the great problem of the florists had been in the gluts caused by over-production. The noticeable absence of gluts recently he attributed largely to the people having more money to spend for flowers, this due in some measure to the prohibition of liquor and generally to other war conditions, also the great publicity campaign of the Society of American Florists. Prosperity in the trade is such that greenhouse builders are far behind in their work. The greater part of the expense of advertising the business, he added, should be borne by the growers, who had by far the largest investment at stake.

Mr. Asmus then introduced Shelby S. Jones, formerly of Vaughan's Seed Store, and now advertising man for James S. Kirk & Co., well-known soap manufacturers. Mr. Jones pointed out the great value of co-operation as illustrated in the results obtained by California fruit interests, which had been remarkably successful in placing this business on a better financial basis, stabilizing prices and avoiding waste of product. Large sums of money, he said, are needed in advertising, together with great care in its expenditure. Before investing large sums, well considered experiments should be made with small amounts to make reasonably certain that the work will not be in vain. Advertising, he said, is cumulative, and much time as well as money is needed to obtain results, citing one case in which it required three years to turn the tide in favor of the advertiser.

H. J. Seel, representing the Milwaukee Florists' Club, described the community plan of advertising adopted by the trade of that city. He claimed that advertising in general paid for itself. The plan of his associates has been frequently described in these columns, and it has given highly satisfactory results thus far. The three branches of the trade are joined in an organization, managed by a board of directors, in which each branch is represented by three members. The growers are assessed one per cent, retailers one-half of one per cent, the wholesalers contributing their share in the work of accounting. Similar plans are in successful operation at St. Louis, Mo., and Buffalo, N. Y.

J. F. Ammann, former president of the Society of American Florists, and secretary of the Illinois State Florists' Association, came on from Edwardsville especially for this meeting and made a stirring address. He told of the great publicity work done by the national society, but he said each community and each individual must take strong hold of this subject to make it a success and contribute what is due in broadening business in the interest of the individual, the community and the nation.

Joseph E. Pollworth gave a series of examples of the actual financial benefits to be derived from the adoption of some such scheme as that which is operated in other cities, and a number of other speakers joined in the discussion.

Chairman Asmus then presented a provisional constitution, and a large number of those in attendance signed in favor of organizing.

Some difficulty having been encountered in making the plans of other cities suit this market, a committee was appointed to readjust matters and present the proposed changes at another meeting to be called within a week or two. The committee consists of W. J. Keimel, Otto H. Amling, N. J. Wietor, A. Lange, L. R. Bohannon, Geo. Asmus, Paul R. Klingsporn, August Poehlmann and C. J. Michelsen.

Mrs. Ella Grant Wilson, of Cleveland, O., was an interested visitor.

MARKET OFFERS LITTLE CHOICE.

Neither the supply or variety of cut flowers on the local market has increased to any noticeable extent since the holidays, and as to quality there has been no great improvement, due to the cloudy weather. Many poor carnations are being received. Roses are short of the demand, with the possible exception of American Beauties. Sweet peas are a little more numerous, but clean up daily at fair prices. A little stevia is also available. Narcissi now comprise the bulk of the supply. Daffodils are promised very shortly. A few calendulas are seen.

NOTES.

Martin Arban narrowly escaped serious injury recently when an auto in which he was riding was struck by a motor truck. He sustained numerous cuts and bruises, being thrown through the windshield. Added to this misfortune, his range a short time ago suffered a $1,000 fire loss and his wife is recovering from a sprained ankle.

The J. M. Gasser Co. has taken out insurance for all of the firm's employes, the amount based on length of service.

Frank Lisy, of East 116th street, is now the happy father of two boys. The latest arrival came January 4.

FUNERAL WORK TAKES THE LEAD.

Business slowed up considerably since the first of the year, with very little social work going on. Also, weather conditions have been against the business, with heavy snows to contend with. Funeral work has been somewhat light, but, no doubt, will be a larger factor the rest of the month. The supply of stock has been anything but encouraging. Roses are the bulk of the offerings, and they are scarce. Only the better quality of roses are obtainable in any quantity, and they are almost too prohibitive to use in ordinary funeral work. Carnations have been a failure up to this time. This season's cut has been shorter than any experienced in this market for years, and aside from the shortage, the quality is not the best. From present indications, they will not be in crop for another month. Sweet peas are only in fair supply, with prices high.

NOTE.

The past week was florist week at the court house. Ray Young, Frank and J. J. Windler were on jury service. Thus are we able to prove our citizenship.

The local publicity committee has an important meeting scheduled this week, at which time they intend to take up their advertising programme for the coming month. The St. Valentine day advertising will come under this head also. The results obtained from this joint advertising seems to be gaining momentum with every month, and deserves all and more of the support it is getting. J. J. W.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—J. M. Fox & Son, Inc., report a larger holiday trade at prices higher than last year. Carnations, roses and violets were in short supply and there were no bulbous flowers. Quality in all offerings was excellent and was considered by purchasers rather than price. Flowering plants sold better than in former years.

PAWTUCKET, R. I.—About 15 per cent increase in holiday business with no advance in prices over last year is reported by Hoffman, the Florist. The supply of violets, roses and carnations was equal to requirements and there were also moderate offerings of bulbous flowers. Quality was about as usual. There was a noticeable increase in the call for ferns and basket arrangements in which boxwood was used. Local flower buyers seemed very reluctant to pay the unusually high prices necessitated by the advanced wholesale list.

LIGHT DEMAND AND SHORT SUPPLY.

Conditions the past week have been much the same as for the previous seven days; a light demand and a still more limited supply. It is estimated by those competent to judge that the crop of carnations is not more than half what it was this time last season, and owing mostly to weather conditions, there are at least one-third less sweet peas. With the exception of single and Double White Killarney, the stock of short stemmed roses is very meagre, anything salable readily bringing 10 cents. There is quite a stock of Columbia, Premier and Russell, together with Ophelia and Maryland, but as all these varieties are somewhat shy after their Christmas crop, there are none too many and high prices are the rule. Calendulas and snapdragons are apparently waiting for sunshine, as shipments are small. Cattleyas are about the only quantity stock, being equal to the demand at lower prices. White lilac is in good supply. Violets are getting more plentiful, but there are none too many as yet. There are still belated crops of stevia, which helps out. Few Easter lilies are seen, while callas sell up very close. Nearly all commission dealers look for a more plentiful supply next week, depending on better weather. What is needed is more sunshine. Sweet peas are likely to be the first quantity flower, as many more houses have been planted and are now about due. Calendulas are more largely grown, as are snapdragons, both of which will soon show a substantial increase. Not much improvement in the rose crop can be looked for before February, as it will take that long for the new growth to mature. By that time carnations should be nearly at their best and conditions about normal. A carnation grower commenting on the record-breaking prices, stated that his returns in money will not equal those of last season, as his crop is not more than half as large, and that most other growers are in the same condition. Retail storekeepers, on account of the high prices, are put to their wits ends to make both ends meet without scaring off their customers. One solution as given, was, "Do not quote dozen prices on anything, but try and find out for what purpose they are wanted; then suggest a box or basket of assorted flowers, or a pretty flowering plant." If for a funeral, sprays, wreaths or other arrangements, or a graduated scale of prices are proposed, which selection, if left to the florist, will be sure to please. In many of the stores, there is little cut flower stock kept for display, as each day's supply is used up almost as fast as it comes in. Under these conditions, prices that will give a moderate profit should not be difficult to obtain, and those who take the chance in carrying a good stock, should win out.

January 11.—Two sunny days, Saturday and Sunday, helped somewhat, but shipments from the growers were very unsatisfactory, there not being one-fourth enough to meet requirements. The funeral of a popular member of the "400" made a great demand for choice stock. It is estimated that there were more than 100 pieces, totaling over $5,000.

NOTES

Vice-President F. C. W. Brown of the S. A. F., and George Stumpp, were in town for a few hours January 9. Both looked well and brought their smiles with them. Mr. Brown states that the Gasser Co., of Cleveland, O., is about to open a "cash and carry" flower shop across the street from their present location. The new store is to be quite unique, something different, but sure to become popular.

One of the most important illustrated lectures to be given before the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society at its monthly meetings, which are now held at the New Century Drawing Rooms, 12th, below Sansom street, is that of Dr. E. H. Wilson, of the Arnold Arboretum, Jamaica Plain, Mass., January 20, at 3:30 p. m. Dr. Wilson's subject is "Flora and Vegetation of Korea and Formosa."

John Habermehl declares this to be one of their busiest seasons, one large affair following another so closely that they scarcely had any rest. They find stock very scarce, but manage to get enough. Their large supply of azaleas are a great help to give color to their decorations.

Robert Craig contemplates a trip to Porto Rico, leaving New York January 17. He is going for a rest, and to escape the rigors of the cold weather of the next six weeks. The Craig houses are being rapidly filled with stock of all the popular Easter plants.

James Heacock, Robert Jamison and Carl Korts, paid a flying visit to the Madison, N. J., rose growing district, January 5. They were much pleased with their trip and the excellence of the roses as seen in several large establishments.

Carl Corts and Martin Gannon, active as flower salesmen for the past 15 years and keen observers, declare flowers have never been as scarce as for the past 10 days. Many other good judges coincide with them in this view of the market.

Primulas of the malacoides type are now being featured by a number of growers. W. K. Harris, H. I. Faust and Robert Craig Co., all have well-flowered stocks which are in good demand.

Harry Anderson, representing A. N. Pierson, Inc., has been calling on the rose growers in this vicinity the past week in the interest of the new varieties, Pilgrim and Crusader.

John Berger believes the coming week will see quite an addition to the flower stocks and that the worst is over for this season.

The sympathy of the trade is extended to Ferdinand Le Cierse, in the death of his wife, who passed away, January 10. K.

MARKET CONTINUES DULL.

Business was slow in the wholesale district during the past week. It strengthened a little, January 10, as the retailers must have stock to carry them over Sunday, but that was an incident rather than a marked improvement. Special American Beauty roses dropped as low as $50 and $60 per 100, with but little demand. Prices on the best cattleyas did not exceed $75 per 100, and many went for $40 and $50. But only a comparatively few retail stores handle American Beauties and orchids—unless they are very cheap. However, their decline shows that the more prominent retailers are having light business. Up to January 10, special tea roses were also slow, but with a better movement on that day. In the shorter grades of tea roses, carnations, Paper White narcissus, good sweet peas and various minor stocks, prices held reasonably firm. Cold weather, followed by a thaw and dark foggy days, necessarily kept down the supply, but there was enough to care for all demands. Golden Spur narcissus, freesias and a few short tulips are now on the market and command good prices. White lilac is also a factor, but moves slowly. Violets are slow at 75 cents to $1 per 100.

January 12.—There is a more active movement this morning and it is hoped that the reaction that always follows the holiday trade is about spent.

NOTES.

On the night of January 12, the then president-elect, now President Henshaw, of the New York Florists' Club, gave a dinner at the Hotel Pennsylvania, to the past-presidents, retiring officers and officers-elect of the club, members of the trade press and several other guests. The affair was staged in the large and handsome conservatory, on the hotel roof, in the center of a great bower of palms, ferns and foliage plants. After the menu had received full justice, the president designated Secretary John Young as toastmaster, who, with various clever remarks, introduced in their turn, all that were present, and each had something to say, which gave variety to the sentiments expressed. A welcome visitor from abroad was F. C. W. Brown, of Cleveland, O., vice-president of the Society of American Florists. In attendance were: A. L. Miller, president, Society of American Florists; Past Presidents W. A. Manda, Henry Weston, J. B. Nugent, Wm. H. Duckham, Chas. Weathered, W. H. Siebrecht, Sr., Jos. A. Manda, Chas. Schenck, C. H. Totty, Frank H. Traendly, G. E. M. Stumpp, Walter F. Sheridan, Retiring President Kessler. Other officers and members: Vice-President-elect Knight, Secretary Young, Treasurer Rickards, W. R. Pierson, P. W. Popp, Arthur Herrington, Roman J. Irwin, Harry O. May, P. Gerlaird, A. T. De La Mare, W. H. Siebrecht, Jr., A. F. Faulkner and J. H. Pepper. All the past-presidents, Vice-President Brown, W. R. Pierson and others gave interesting talks, and it was a most enjoyable affair. Retiring President Kessler and President Henshaw were lauded in song as "jolly good fellows."

"It's lonesome in our street." The hotel of the War Camp Community service, formerly the Hotel Earlington, which in the past two years has housed over 2,000,000 soldiers and sailors, closed January 4. It is located at 55 West 27th street, next door to our "den." There were accommodations for over 1,000 men, the charge for a bed being 25 cents per night. There were many changes, as the men came in from camps and ships and departed, with new arrivals taking their places, which accounts for the great number lodged.

Frank H. Traendly and Eugene Daildouze spent several days of the past week visiting the trade in New England. They were in Boston and looked over the wholesale markets. At Hadley, Mass., they visited the Montgomery range and report a great stock of Pilgrim and Crusader is being made ready to disseminate. Alexander Montgomery, who has been ill, is now much improved and able to be about. They also visited A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., and report that range in fine shape.

Theodore Malandre, of Malandre Brothers, a retail firm that always carries heavy stocks of plants for the holiday trade, says that the plantsmen should grow more good pepper plants for the market. For this season, the trade has been overstocked with poinsettias, some of them so small and poor as to be almost worthless. Poinsettias that do not sell for Christmas, come near to being a dead loss, whereas pepper plants will keep and can be sold for seevral weeks after.

Mrs. Charlotte D. Conkling, mother of Miss Mabel Conkling, bookkeeper for H. E. Froment, died January 6, age 74 years. She was a native of this city, and previous to her marriage, a member of one of the old families, the Froments.

H. W. Naumann, a Brooklyn retailer, with a store at 5221 Third avenue, that borough, died recently in a hospital following an operation. He is survived by his wife.

Manager McCarty, of James Weir, Inc., Brooklyn, reports an excellent holiday business. They were well stocked with seasonable plants and cut flowers.

George Cotsonas, of the New York Florists' Supply Co., and wife, have the sympathy of many friends in the recent death of one of their children.

R. W. Peterson, of J. A. Peterson & Sons, Westwood, Cincinnati, O., is in the city calling on the trade.

William P. Ford is receiving, in addition to other good stock, a fine quality of lilacs and irises.

Traendly & Schenck, in addition to their fine stock of roses, are handling good tulips.

Mr. Kains is too well known as an authority on this subject to need an introduction.

The thirty-eighth annual meeting will be held at Milwaukee, Wis., June 22-24, 1920.

THE price of bags at Chicago, January 14, was $60.

VISITED CHICAGO: Morrell Gihon Lion, of Fosgate & Lion, Mt. View, Calif.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—David Burpee, of the W. Atlee Burpee Co., has returned from the south.

ALEX. SETTERBERG, of the Everette R. Peacock Co., Chicago, is at Fowler, Ind., this week on catalogue work.

ROCKFORD, ILL.—H. W. Buckbee is running full page advertisements in the farm papers, offering "Full of Life" seeds.

THE Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., has just issued Farmers' Bulletin No. 1060, entitled "Onion Diseases and Their Control," 24 pages, illustrated.

BEANS.—White field seed beans were $7.75 per 100 pounds at Chicago, January 3; Baltimore, $8.00; Minneapolis, $8.40. Average price for the United States the same date in 1919, $6.00.

VISITED SALT LAKE CITY: L. W. Wheeler and Mrs. Wheeler, of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., Gilroy, Calif., en route east; C. C. Massie, of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

TOLEDO, O.—Clover was active, January 12, opening 15 cents higher than the closing price, January 10, with cash offered at $33.30. Timothy was steady with cash, 1919, at $6.17½, January $6.17½, March $6.27½, April $6.27½ and May, $6.27½.

ONION SETS in the Chicago district have been moving lively the past week, by reason of the fine shipping weather, and excellent condition of the sets. Prices are advancing, $3.50 being asked for colors and $4.00 for whites in carlots, prompt shipment.

FLAX SEED YIELD.—Wisconsin has for several years claimed first rank in the yield of flaxseed to the acre. According to the state bureau of crop estimates, the five-year average yield is 10.7 bushels to the acre. In 1919, the 5,600 acres grown in the state averaged 10½ bushels. In 1918, the acreage was 4,200 and the average yield 11 bushels.

NEW YORK.—The Peter Henderson & Co's farm, Jersey City, N. J., 12 acres or more, which has been conducted as a trial ground, has been purchased by the Federal Shipbuilding Co., which will erect thereon, houses for its employes. The price paid has not been stated. This is a separate property from that where the greenhouses are located.

CATALOGUES would be classified as third-class mail under a bill which has been introduced in Congress by Representative Steenerson of Minnesota, chairman of the house committee on the postoffice. At the present time such publications are mailable as parcel post matter, and it is believed that the postoffice department would derive a greatly increased revenue from this business if the third-class rate was applied.

Railroad and Express Claims.

The interstate commerce commission has decided that railroads and express companies cannot protect themselves from liability for damages on their claimed legal limitation of two years and one day. The commission holds that suit may be filed within six months after claim is definitely declined by the railroad, even though it is beyond the two-year period.

Illinois Plant Quarantine.

Governor Lowden, of Illinois, has issued a proclamation dated January 2, 1920, declaring it will be unlawful on and after January 20, 1920, to import into or within the state of Illinois, corn, broom corn, celery, dahlias, chrysanthemums, gladioli and geraniums grown in the states of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut and New York, on account of infestation by the European corn borer.

Seed Testing at Ohio University.

Seed testing demonstrations for farmers will be given during farmers' week, January 26-30, at the Ohio State University, Columbus, two hours each day being devoted to the work. Persons interested are requested to register in advance. The demonstrations include germination tests of grass and clover seed and identification of grass seeds; identification of legume and weed seeds, and practice in testing.

Seed Analysis by Illinois Dept. of Agri.

Albert C. Wilson, chief seed analyst of the Illinois department of agriculture, Springfield, in a recent communication, reports that the work of analyzing samples of seed is proving very satisfactory. A small percentage of the samples sent to the department are found to contain too large a proportion of noxious weed seeds, therefore, are unsalable for seeding purposes. The seeds represented by some of the unsalable samples have been recleaned, and the second sample analyzed. A great many others sent in, contain quite large percentages of inert matter and weed seeds, and most probably were taken from seeds which had not been recleaned after coming from the huller. Attention is called to the fact that all samples submitted should be from seed that has been given as thorough a cleaning as possible, because the analysis will determine whether it is salable or not. Many of the samples received for analysis are too small to make a proper report possible. All persons sending in samples should endeavor to have at least 12 teaspoonfuls, which is equivalent to two ounces, the amount required. Unless the correct amount is sent, the sample will be held until the additional quantity is furnished, thus causing several days' delay and additional work for the office. Care should be exercised that containers will not become broken in the mails. A little cotton sack, tied at the top, with tag attached, is one of the best methods for forwarding such samples. Such packages, if marked "Seeds," are mailable as third-class matter, at the rate of two ounces for one cent, if no writing is put inside. All writing in regard to the sample should be sent by letter.

Uncle Sam Cannot Pay for Lost Seed.

The United States postoffice department, after deliberating since April, 1918, has acknowledged in a communication from the third assistant postmaster general that it owes the Robert Buist Company, seed growers, Philadelphia, Pa., $6.50, but really cannot pay it until congress makes an appropriation. On April 10, 1918, the Robert Buist Company mailed a package of seeds valued at $6.50, which was insured accordingly. But the seeds were never delivered.

Eighteen months' correspondence between the seed grower and the postoffice department has resulted in a letter from the department in which the claimant is informed that his claim has been approved, but that the firm will have to wait for the money a while longer. The communication, commonly known as a form letter, signed by Third Assistant Postmaster A. M. Dockery's own rubber stamp, follows:

"Returned with the information that the claim in question has been approved in favor of your company for $6.50, but that payment cannot be made at this time, as there is no money available for that purpose.

"A request for additional funds has been submitted to congress, and as soon as practical after an appropriation is made, a warrant in settlement of the claim will be mailed to the payee; therefore, further correspondence on the subject is unnecessary.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

RUBRUM LILIES

BUY NOW

A few cases of Hardy Lilies planted now will come in very handy, for they will bloom at the time when flowers are scarce. These flowers last longer than any others you can use in a floral piece. They improve the character of the floral design when used with other flowers.

We offer for immediate shipment the following varieties: Rubrum, Album, Magnificum and Auratum. Sizes: 7-9, 8-9, 9-10, 9-11, 10-11 and 11-12.

The quality of our Lily Bulbs cannot be surpassed. We positively assure you that these bulbs have been properly cultivated to produce the best bulbs for florists' forcing. This type of Lily in Japan grows wild, and during the war very few were cultivated for export purposes; so when our Mr. Miller arrived in Japan, and knowing of the scarcity, he immediately purchased fields that had been cultivated

To produce a good Hardy Lily, it is necessary to gather the bulbs in the mountains, where they grow wild, and then cultivate them for a season or two in open land. This method improves the quality and has long been practiced by the Japanese growers. Very few are available this season, so we can expect many uncultivated Lily Bulbs. In trusting us with your order, you assure yourself of the best cultivated bulbs from the Orient.

Columbus, O.

TRADE AFFECTED BY COLD WEATHER.

Owing to severe weather which prevailed during the past week, some branches of the florist business were not as active as formerly. This affected the transient trade moe especially, as people did not come down town as much as usual. On the other hand, there was a good demand for all kinds of flowers for parties and receptions. The social season is now in full swing, and as a result, many receptions, weddings and parties are scheduled. This is relieving the situation and makes the volume of trade among down-town florists about normal. Funeral work has not been as active as heretofore. Flowers are coming into the market in good shape, and generally speaking, the supply is good. Trade is tending largely towards roses, sweet peas and violets. Roses are plentiful and of extra good quality. They are principally Ophelia, Russell, Columbia and Premier. They retail from $4 to $10 per dozen, and the demand is good, even at the higher levels. Sweet peas are of fine quality and rather plentiful. They sell from 75 cents to $2 per bunch. There is a limited supply of carnations reported, with white and pink varieties predominating. The retail price is $3 per dozen. Narcissus is rather plentiful with the demand extra good under the circumstances. The usual price is $2 per dozen. Violets are in fine demand, and the supply is generally adequate. Prices are $2 per bunch or $4 per hundred. Pot plants are becoming stronger now since the holiday season is passing. They are largely cyclamens and primroses. All downtown stores look for an active trade during the remainder of January. Conditions for a gradual expansion of business are good, and preparations are being made for a large volume until the beginning of Lent.

J. W. L.

SEDALIA, MO.—Archias' Floral Co. had a better holiday trade than a year ago with prices 10 to 25 per cent advanced. There were only half enough roses, carnations and violets to supply the demand and a limited offering of bulbous flowers. Dark weather affected quality. Increased prices and the limited supply of cut stock gave plant sales a boost over those of a year ago.

VAUGHAN'S GIANT PANSIES

VAUGHAN'S INTERNATIONAL PANSIES

Vaughan's International Pansy Mixture was first offered by us in 1889. We import from all the best European sources. Each year has added to the quality of its flowers and variety of its colors. We buy every year novelties of known merit to improve the mixture; it is always complete, always the latest and always the best mixture. We add to all Pansy Mixtures which we now buy more than 50 per cent of the choicest named kinds obtainable, each in correct proportion. This is one of the Specialties that has established the reputation of Vaughan's Flower Seeds, and one which we maintain most carefully.

Trade pkt., 50c; ⅛ oz., $1.50; ½ oz., $5.00; oz., $10.00.

Vaughan's Giant Pansy Mixture

Embraces, besides all the separate shades and colors, five special strains not listed elsewhere, and which can only be had in this and our International Mixture. This mixture includes the richest reds, coppers and bronzes, together with the most delicate rose and pink shadings, all the distinct colors of Trimardeau and the splendid, Cassier strain.

Trade pkt., 50c; ⅛ oz., 75c; oz. $5.00; ¼ lb. $18.00.

Vaughan's Cut Flower Mixture

This mixture is put up by ourselves and contains mostly light colored sorts. We have sold this mixture for several seasons to some of our Chicago cut flower growers, who have realized big returns from the sale of flowers. Pansies are as easily grown as violets, require less care and bring better results.

Trade pkt., 25c; ⅛ oz., 60c; oz., $4.00.

New Early-Flowering Giant Pansies

The new strain produces its giant flowers about four weeks earlier than other known types. In March, when the old type pansies hardly show any buds the plants of the new strain bore from 3 to 5 of their giant flowers.

Early Flowering Giant White, Yellow, Light Blue, Dark Blue and Mixed (Four Colors). Trade pkt., (500 seeds) 25c; ⅛ oz., 60c; oz., $4.00.

Vegetable Markets.

The weekly report of the United States department of agriculture for the period January 6-13 indicates generally strong and active conditions. Potatoes were steady, with advances of 10 to 30 cents recorded in producing sections. Haulings continued heavy in western New York, but light in other districts. New York sacked round whites ranged from $3.75-$4 per 100 pounds f. o. b., with a few of the best closing at $4.15-$4.22. Consuming markets advanced steadily for this as well as for middle-western round white stock, closing for the latter at $4.35-$4.75. Maine sacked Green Mountains closed at $3.75-$3.80 at shipping points. Michigan round whites closed at $4-$4.30 f. o. b. Cadillac basis, an advance of about 30 cents. Wisconsin and Minnesota stock advanced somewhat further, closing at $4.25-$4.40. Colorado Rurals and Pearls brought mostly $4 per 100 pounds sacked wagonloads, cash to growers, an advance of about 20 cents over the previous week. The onion market was firm, with but little change since the previous week in New York shipping points. Demand and movement were limited with prices firm at $6-6.25 per 100 pounds sacked for medium to large yellow varieties. Consuming markets in general ranged $5.50-$6.50. Chicago recovered from its low point and closed at $5.25-$6. Danish seed cabbage held in western New York shipping sections at $90-$100 f. o. b. per ton bulk, an advance of about $15 during the week. Consuming markets advanced about $20 for this stock. Wisconsin Holland seed cabbage closed at Chicago at $95-$100, and in St. Louis at $120-$125, about $25 above the previous week's closing price. New Florida Wakefield sold in Philadelphia and Baltimore at $3-$3.25 per 1½ bushel hamper, a drop of 25 cents from the previous week. Sweet potatoes were firm. New Jersey and Delaware yellow stock held steady in middle-western consuming markets at $2.25-$2.75 per bushel hamper. Tennessee Nancy Halls advanced about 25 cents to $1.75-$2.25. Carrots in western New York continued to strengthen, closing strong at $3 sacked per 100 pounds.

Lettuce Under Glass.

We have heard more complaints about poor lettuce crops this winter than ever before. The market also bears out this condition, as there exists a scarcity, the like of which we have never seen before. There are, of course, a number of factors working to produce this condition, the chief one probably being the dark weather, long continued. But there are others. Diseases are more general and more disastrous, at least in this vicinity. This is partly due also to the weather, as any tendency towards a weak, poor growth is a constant invitation to diseases. Owing to the many existing troubles, no new glass has been built locally, hence all the growers are operating in old houses, which is always a handicap. There used to be always some new glass with heavy crops to help supply the markets, which is not the case this time. Also, the abundance of money seems to produce an extra demand, as people pay no attention to high prices, buying just the same.

Yet, considering all these conditions, we wish to call attention to the use of nitrates under glass in mid-winter as a remarkable remedy against many troubles. We firmly believe that the proper use of chemical nitrogen not only hastens growth, increases weight of crop, but helps to ward off diseases, owing to better health of plants. We also believe that the application of manure can be overdone, producing acid conditions which are hard to correct under glass, a more moderate use of manure, aided by the use of chemicals, being a better method. Of the materials available, we can use any one of the three in trade—nitrate soda, sulphate ammonia and nitrate potash. We have been using nitrate of potash on lettuce with excellent results, and where obtainable it is excellent. However, the other two will fill the bill, if used with care. We prefer to set out the plants first and give a start of two weeks, and then apply the fertilizers directly between the rows, keeping away from the plants. The materials should be reduced to a fine state, at least through ¼-inch mesh sieve, and applied sparingly, being careful to touch no foliage. Each grower must experiment himself in regard to best quantity of application.

"Hamburg Late Pink" Chrysanthemum

Picture was taken Nov. 23, 1919, and will give a good idea of what "Hamburg Late Pink" looks like when grown to single stems and planted six inches each way.

"Hamburg Late Pink" is an improved late pink Maud Dean, having more petals, and if grown for late will hardly ever show an open center.

The average grower of chrysanthemums must have varieties which are easy to handle, and from which he can cut as near 100% of perfect blooms as possible. "Hamburg Late Pink" has been grown for the last four years, and produces a very high proportion of good flowers. It is not an exhibition variety, but, for late pink, one of the best for commercial purposes. It can be had in bloom the latter part of November by taking an early bud, but some of the flowers will show open centers; but by selecting late buds, after October 1st, most of the flowers are cut during December, and would advise to select late buds, as the later buds will hardly ever show an open center, and some flowers can be had even in January.

Keeping qualities are excellent, and where a graceful pink flower is wanted, "Hamburg Late Pink" cannot be surpassed.

"Hamburg Late Pink" will be disseminated in the spring of 1920.
Plants will be ready March 1st, 1920, and orders will be filled in rotation.

Grape Anomaly.

Few people would credit the fact that many parcels of foreign grapes are bringing more money than good black varieties from the Channel Islands and English hothouses. It is passing strange that whilst Guernsey and English Alicante were freely sold from eightpence to a shilling a pound wholesale, many lots of grapes from Almeria, in Spain, realized at Covent Garden from 45 to 70 shillings a barrel, of 40 to 50 pounds net weight. The figures quoted do not include extremes of price; so that roundly speaking it is accurate to say that a large percentage of Spanish grapes are more costly than the fine black varieties grown under glass. Dutch Alicantes and Belgian Gros Colmar are both excellent, and resemble closely the home-grown grapes so named. So marked is the resemblance that only experts can discriminate, and even they cannot always be certain of their judgment.

Spanish grapes are wanted for re-export. Furthermore, speculators buy with a view of keeping the fruit for many months, until such time as the scarcity of other kinds of grapes enhances the value of the white Almeria. Buyers do not always gain by so doing, but the storing of Almeria grapes, which will keep well, is generally deemed a sound investment. Consumers will do well to note the uncommonly good value now offered in best black grapes.—British Paper.

Twenty-Ninth Annual Meeting and Exhibition, Chicago, January 21-22, 1920.

The Opening Day.

The twenty-ninth annual meeting and exhibition of the American Carnation Society opened, January 21, in the grand ballroom of the Hotel La Salle, which was handsomely decorated for the occasion. Considering the great scarcity of stock, there was a very creditable showing of good blooms, the principal exhibitors of carnations being Charles S. Strout, Biddeford, Me.; S. J. Goddard, Framingham, Mass.; Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association, Chicago; F. Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette, Ind.; Bassett & Washburn Chicago; The McCallum Co., Pittsburgh, Pa.; Gude Bros. Co., Washington, D. C.; Frey & Frey, Lincoln, Neb.; Geo. Brenkert, Denver, Colo.; V. Bezdek, Gross Point, Ill.; Kring Bros., Fairbury, Ill.; Alois Frey, Crown Point, Ind.; A. M. Campbell, Strafford, Pa.; E. Winkler, Wakefield, Mass.; A. Sykora, Batavia, Ill.; James Psenicka, Gross Point, Ill.; W. Frank & Son, Portland, Ind.; The Richmond Greenhouse Co., Richmond, Ind.; John Reardon, Ames, Ia., and Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass.

The miscellaneous exhibits included a grand vase of the new rose, Frank W. Dunlop, from John H. Dunlop, Toronto, Ont., and a vase of a beautiful canary yellow sport of Ophelia from the same grower; the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., showed Frank W. Dunlop and Butterfly in good form; A. Henderson & Co., Chicago, displayed some fine sprays of colored freesias; Carl Hagenburger, W. Mentor, O., Carl Hagenburger, West Mentor, O., Berry, of his famous dwarf strain; S. S. Skidelsky & Co., New York, showed several plants of Pride of Newcastle, a red sport of Begonia Chatelaine; the Wm. F. Kasting Co., Buffalo, N. Y., good blooms of Hamburg Late Pink chrysanthemums; Hartje & Elder, Indianapolis, Ind., Pink Mistletoe chrysanthemums; J. A. Peterson & Sons, Cincinnati, O., fine specimens of their new Begonia Peerless.

No feature of the show attracted more attention than that arranged for Charles S. Strout by C. Engelmann, Saffron Walden, England, a carnation specialist of international reputation, now visiting in this country. The 1,500 blooms which were packed for shipment Saturday and Sunday preceding the exhibition stood the 1,200-mile journey in fine shape and made a splendid appearance, the exhibit occupying about 50 square feet. Donald, a deep rich red, was noteworthy and showed fine form. Maine Sunshine, another new Strout production, a rich delicate yellow, also made a fine impression. Another feature was a variegated sport of Matchless, while among other outstanding sorts worthy of mention were Laddie, Crystal White, White Delight and Aviator.

Gude's Democracy was greatly admired as were Peter Fisher's Ethel Fisher, John Reardon's white seedling and the Richmond Greenhouse Co.'s Topsy, the last named exhibited by the E. C. Amling Co., Chicago.

President Dorner's Address.

Members of the Illinois State Florists' Association and Fellow Members of the American Carnation Society:

It has been our pleasure to meet in convention in Chicago on former occasions. It is my pleasure to bid you hearty welcome to the twenty-ninth annual convention. We all know that Chicago is noted for its hospitality. The past year has been a prosperous one for all florists, even, with what we had to go through. Two years ago, it was a hard matter for some of us to get coal, and we all began to think that history would repeat itself. But by the level heads of our government, the coal strike was brought to an end. It has always been a saying, "always be prepared," and those who bought early had very little worry concerning the fuel situation. The carnation growers of this country have certainly passed through a very critical period since the war began, and more so since it ended. We were put in the non-essential class during the war, but as I understand, during the coal strike, they told us we belonged in the essential class. The officials of our government have found out, at last, that we belonged in more than the non-essential class, which was very glad news for us.

I wish to inform the members of our society, that our membership, for the past year, has been at a standstill. I think that every member present at this meeting should make it his business to see that he gets at least one new member. We all know that the more members we have enrolled in our society, the more prosperous we will be. Our revenues would be increased, our meetings would be better attended, and our exhibitions would be much larger than ever before. I wish to suggest that our society offer some inducement, in some way, to those getting the most new members the following year.

INCREASE IN DUES SUGGESTED.

The American Carnation Society should devise some plan so our revenue would be increased. We are running today on the same plane as we have in the past, regardless of the high prices. I would suggest that the dues be raised to $3, instead of $2, which would give us a little more revenue. This may cause some criticism, but we should take time and prices under consideration. As we all know, it costs a great deal more now to exhibit carnations than it did four or five years ago.

The shipping facilities in the past year have been much improved, but we are still a long ways from getting what is right. The express companies have taken better care of our packages than last year, and are a little more prompt in settling claims. I think the parcel post department should insure parcels against freezing, when marked "perishable." At present they insure only against non-delivery, the responsibility for breakage being the same as non-insured parcels. I think this matter should be taken up with the Society of American Florists, and it might help if we would co-operate with them, for they are in a position to handle this matter to better advantage. I would suggest that a committee be appointed by our society to co-operate with the S. A. F. A great many parcel post packages have been frozen in transit this season, for which the shippers suffered loss.

We have in the past year lost three of our members by death. Frank Friedley, of Cleveland, O.; Robert Montgomery, of Natick, Mass., and Henry Rohrer, of Lancaster, Pa. I would suggest that our society take some action in this matter, and a committee be appointed for this purpose.

SEEDLINGS HAVE BRIGHT FUTURE.

The registration of new varieties in the past year has been much less than in former seasons, due to the war, fuel, labor and high prices. All carnation growers know, that a new variety will, in time, lose its vigor and vitality, either by propagation or through disease. And those must be replaced by other varieties which have vigor and vitality. It costs a great deal more at present to put a new variety on the market, and therefore seedling carnations should bring a higher price than in former years. The seedling carnations shown at our exhibitions are always the most interesting displays in the hall. Why? Because it is human nature for us to always be on the watch to get something better than we grow today. Carnation growing in this country in the last three or four years was at a standstill. But today we hear a number of those who quit growing carnations are back in the harness again. The breeders of seedling carnations have a great future before them, as most of our standard varieties have taken the backward course, and must be replaced by new varieties.

Chas. W. Johnson, Chicago.
Vice-President American Carnation Society.

At the board of directors' meeting held in Detroit in August it was decided to let the retailers' association of Chicago rearrange the exhibits on the second day, the entries in the medal classes and those entered for certificate of merit, to be left intact, unless each variety be kept to itself. This arrangement may be satisfactory to some, and to others it may be unsatisfactory. The only way to find out is to try it out, and if unsatisfactory, it can be changed by the board of directors.

I would suggest to those who raise seedling carnations, and disseminate them, that they be very careful in selecting a name for their new varieties, so the name will never conflict with those already registered.

I wish to extend my thanks to the secretary for the help he has given me, and the good work and time spent in the interest of our society. A man like Mr. Baur is certainly a help to all the members of our organization. He has labored hard to keep the American Carnation Society on its feet and to make our annual meetings and exhibitions a success.

In conclusion, I wish to thank the members of this society for the honor of being its president for the past year, and I sincerely hope that you will all enjoy the hospitality of the Chicago Florists' Club, and when leaving Chicago, it will always be fresh in your memory.

Secretary Baur's Report.

Mr. President and members of the American Carnation Society:

As your secretary, I beg leave to submit the following report for the past year:

Conditions approaching normal having been restored, your officers, when arranging for this convention, deemed it advisable to return to our usual programme. In view of the successful convention held in 1919, under most unfavorable conditions resulting from the war period, we felt justified in looking forward to this meeting with confidence akin to enthusiasm. A full schedule of competitive classes was arranged, with the usual cash and medal prizes. One new class was added, its purpose being to encourage the raising of blooms with extraordinary keeping qualities. Arrangements should be made to repeat this class each year, and thereby encourage the carnation breeders in striving for varieties with increased substance. Another new feature this year will be the rearranging of the exhibits by the retailers of Chicago for the second day. This is by way of experiment, and whether it shall be repeated in future exhibitions, will be determined by the degree of success in this instance.

The curtailed premium schedule of last year, and the subsequent saving in money, has enabled the society to catch up, in a measure, with its finances. Prices on all supplies continue high, however, and strict economy must be practiced until either prices moderate or our income can be increased. We were successful in securing an unusual amount of advertising for this year's premium schedule, there being 36 full pages. Our members can make this a really valuable advertising medium by patronizing our advertisers. Plans which are in prospect make it highly important that you lend your assistance along this line.

It is most gratifying to note that our members are supporting the society most loyally. We have also reinstated 17 delinquent members during the past year. But why do we not gain more new members? Some plan that will produce results must be devised. Who can suggest one? Our membership list now stands at 300 annual members and 11 life members. These figures should be doubled. We have lost during the past year Frank A. Friedley, who died March 9; Henry Rehrer, who died April 7, and Robert Montgomery, who passed away August 5.

There was paid into the secretary's office: In dues, $649.00; for advertising, $285.00; for miscellaneous, $82.00; total, $1,016.00, all of which was turned over to the treasurer and his receipt taken therefor. The secretary's and treasurer's books were audited by a public accountant and found correct, as will be shown by his report.

Our regular publications were issued in the routine of business. Special announcements were published in the trade press free of charge, for which this society owes its thanks. There are no overdue bills, and collection of dues and other accounts is progressing satisfactorily.

The $1,000.00 in the Fred Dorner memorial fund is not yielding sufficient interest to cover the cost of the Dorner Memorial medal at the present time. Prospects for any material reduction in the cost of this medal in the near future do not seem bright, and it would probably be wise to add two or three hundred dollars to this fund in order to again make it self-sustaining, unless the present fund can safely be invested so as to yield a higher rate of interest.

Preparations for the fifth national flower show have been resumed with a view to holding it in 1921. This society should lay plans to maintain its place in the front rank of the special societies, by staging the greatest show of carnations ever put on display. We are guaranteeing the financial success of this show. Let us assure its success from the artistic point of view.

We now have 251 members in the S. A. F., which entitles us to representation on the executive board. Our president, Theodore Dorner, has been appointed to serve during the present calendar year. A new rule, adopted last August, provides that all affiliating societies shall pay the expenses of their representatives, instead of their mileage being paid by the S. A. F., as was done previous to this year. This calls for additional funds again, if you desire your representative to attend these board meetings.

Seven new seedling carnations were registered during the year, and three sports were offered for registration. Six registrations were sent over from England, one a duplication of Toreador, a variety disseminated in this country some years ago.

The regular mid-summer meeting of the board of directors was held in Detroit August 22. Plans for this convention were perfected and other matters were attended to. The board instructed the secretary to send an invitation to the Illinois State Florists' Association to participate in the festivities connected with this convention, they having already voted to hold their semi-annual meeting in this city during our convention. The secretary was also instructed to lay before this meeting a request from the head of the department of floriculture of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, for a membership in the A. C. S., to be carried by the department.

This society is extremely fortunate in having locally a man with such energy and executive ability as our vice-president, Charles W. Johnson. To him is due, in a large measure, the credit for the efficient manner in which the local arrangements were managed. Our thanks are also due the Chicago Florists' Club, the Chicago Retail Florists' Association and The Commercial Flower Growers' Association, for their splendid co-operation in making this convention a success.

Illinois State Florists' Association.

The annual meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association was held this year at the Hotel La Salle, Chicago, January 21-22, in connection with the annual convention and exhibition of the American Carnation Society, and the programme was purposely condensed to permit the members to participate in the proceedings of the national organization. We present the president's address and secretary's report herewith.

PRESIDENT KEIMEL'S ADDRESS.

Fellow-Members, Illinois State Florists' Association:

It gives me great pleasure to welcome you to the fifteenth annual meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association, the first held in Chicago, and in conjunction with the American Carnation Society. As much of our time will be taken up in connection with the deliberations of the latter organization, it was decided to curtail our programme in order that our members might have every opportunity to benefit as much as possible through attendance at the sessions of the carnation society.

Since our meeting last March, the florist industry has passed through a period of great prosperity, so that notwithstanding the increased cost of practically every item necessary to production and the conduct of our business, we have been able to meet expenses, and in addition, make a small profit. While this prosperous period resulted to a certain extent from the influenza epidemic, much credit on the other hand must be given to national advertising, and florists throughout the entire country are fast awakening to the great benefits to be derived from the judicious use of printers' ink.

Thanks to the work of our secretary, J. F. Ammann, we now have more than 100 members, who are also members of the Society of American Florists, with the result that the president of the state society has been accorded a place on the board of directors of the national body. It is also our aim to increase the life membership in our organization to at least 100, and in this way create a fund, the interest from which will be sufficient to meet the expenses.

As trade conditions are again evidencing the return to a normal basis, the necessity of publicity becomes more apparent, and it will be to the association's best interests to renew our annual exhibition in connection with the fall meeting, which proved such a success in former years before war conditions necessitated their discontinuance. These shows at Moline, Bloomington and Galesburg accomplished much in bringing the florists of the state into closer relationship as well as being of great benefit to the trade in the cities in which they were held and I recommend that a committee be appointed to give this matter consideration. In 1918, we had planned to have a fall show at Springfield, but it was found necessary to abandon it, and I hope this year's efforts will be crowned with great success.

During the past few years, we have seen great improvements in many varieties of flowers, especially roses grown for cut blooms. I might mention Columbia, Premier, Madame Butterfly, Frank W. Dunlop, Crusader, Pilgrim and many others which have brought about a new standard in the rose family and should greatly aid us in making our show next fall a worthy event. There will also no doubt be a good list of new chrysanthemums and carnations brought out during the year which will prove welcome additions especially available for this purpose. All indications point to a most prosperous year, and florists owe it to themselves to see that they receive their full measure of it, which we can only be sure of realizing by demonstrating to the public what we are accomplishing.

In conclusion, I wish to apologize to the members of this association for not having been able to preside at last year's meeting and also for my inability to devote to the organization as much of my time as I should have liked to give. I shall be glad to do all in my power for the continued success of the association and aid my successor, if it be my privilege, to make this the most successful year in our history.

SECRETARY AMMANN'S REPORT.

Much of the secretary's work has been neglected because of the busy year in Society of American Florist activities, and yet our association has had a very prosperous 12 months. We have added 19 life members and 10 annual members in the past year and have secured the requisite number of members in the S. A. F. to place our president on the national executive board. It behooves us to do more. All our members should be S. A. F. members, and there should not be one S. A. F. member in Illinois who is not a member of the state association.

This is our fourteenth annual meeting and completes my tenth year as your secretary. I wish to say these years of my intimate association with so many members of our craft have indeed been pleasant ones. We have had trials, and been tested, yet withstood the storms and indifferences of many. Today, the Illinois State Florists' Association stands second to none in our country. Much has been accomplished in little more than a decade. Our membership roll totals 232, of which 72 are life and 160 annual members. This is not as many as we should have, considering the many florists in our state, yet it is a very good percentage.

We have at Urbana one of the most up-to-date experiment stations, devoted exclusively to floriculture, in the country, obtained almost entirely through the efforts of this association.

There is much yet to be done, and the work must not be neglected. I realize the importance of an active secretary, and as much of my time in the near future shall be taken up by work of the national publicity committee, I beg of you, for the benefit of the work of this asosciation, and for my own relief, to elect another man as my successor in office.

ATHENS, GA.—The Georgia State Horticultural Society will meet in this city, January 30-31.

BOSTON, MASS.—F. A. Macrae, formerly of Providence, R. I., is now with Sidney Hoffman of this city.

NEWPORT, R. I.—Edward J. Hess, formerly in the florist business on Thames street, has taken the position of head gardener at "Indian Spring," now the estate of J. Francis Clark.

MONTREAL, QUE.—The Montreal Gardeners' and Florists' Club has elected the following officers for the ensuing year: R. Burroughs, president; D. Donald, first vice-president; H. Pare, second vice-president; W. H. Horobin, secretary-treasurer.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

The trade is now passing through a period which, in its scarcity of flowers, is almost without precedent; it is particularly trying to those who like to carry a good stock, and in liberal displays, make a bid for new business. The extreme high prices also have a depressing effect, although it is a matter of surprise to many retailers that the majority of people realize that everything is now at least double in price compared with what it used to be, and appear satisfied to pay what is asked.

From this time forward, the percentage of sunny days will increase, which will encourage growth and bloom, particularly in roses, sweet peas, calendulas, snapdragons and freesias. These, with the spring bulbs which are commencing to make their appearance, and the best the carnations can do, will bring the business nearly to a normal condition. Not much is to be expected in the way of carnations, as with most growers they are away below par, some believing the crop will not average much more than 40 per cent of that of last season.

Under these conditions, the most should be made of whatever there is to be had in foliage and flowering plants. Baskets of growing plants, when well arranged in their combinations of color and graceful foliage, with perhaps the addition of a few cut blooms in concealed vases, will, in many cases, take the place of loose flowers or baskets of all cut flowers and thus allow making the most of a meager supply.

Baskets of growing ferns, such as Nephrolepis Smithii and Verona, are beautiful in themselves, and offer a fine background for a few choice flowers, which with a ribbon at the handle, is quite the equal in decorative effect of an all flower arrangement. A few of these baskets, filled, should be on hand all the time, so as to be ready for decoration at a moment's notice.

Calendulas are more showy, and for some reason, much cheaper than carnations. Their shades of orange are always admired and they arrange and tone in well with croton sprays. Small vase baskets will be found quite salable filled with these alone.

Freesias are now in, a beautiful spray that is a great addition to the stock. They look well in all combinations, while their delightful fragrance makes them a favorite with all flower lovers.

Primulas, Malacoides and Townsendii cannot be too highly commended. Their wealth of bloom makes them very conspicuous and exceedingly useful either as a pot plant or for cut flowers.

Cattleyas are much more plentiful and cheaper; they are so exquisite, that only a few are necessary to give elegance and style to an otherwise plain arrangement. White lilac is another choice spray-like flower which can now be depended upon. A cluster of lilac and a few cattleyas will hold its own with any combination. The same flowers on a background of crested ferns, make one of the handsomest of wreaths.

Have you secured a stock of the new Valentine stamps and posters. If not, do so at once; both the stamps and posters are far ahead of anything of the kind so far sent out. The stamps should adorn every piece of literature or package that leaves the store. The posters should be glued or sewed to a piece of hemmed muslin about one inch larger than the sheet. An eyeleted hole in each reinforced corner will be sufficiently strong to allow of these being fastened by stout cords on both sides of the car. These cords pass all around the body and are tied underneath. This very artistic poster, which suggests St. Valentine's day at a glance, will in this way, if placed on all florists' cars, give great publicity to this floral holiday. The posters can also be made effective in the store door or windows.

It is not too early to be looking forward to Easter. There are but nine weeks before the day, when everything must be ready for the big event. Select your plant baskets and allow your supply man time to give them a unique coloring. Early plant orders will be appreciated by the growers, while the advantage of first selections is not to be overlooked. Everything is to be gained and nothing lost by planning ahead.

Credits.

Next in importance to safeguarding one's own credit, comes the risk in that allowed to customers. There always was and forever will be those, who if credit is given, will buy more than they need, can afford, or will be able to pay for. If such purchases had to be for cash, their desire to possess the articles would be controlled and small quantities, if any, bought.

That credit should be extended only to those who are known to be worthy of it, is patent to every business man, but this rule is broken more often than any other in the store management. Charges on the books represent money earned, and should be so safeguarded as to be as safe as funds in bank. It is folly to do business that is not to be paid for, as, if known in advance, no attention would be given such orders. Retail florists are for the most part a hopeful lot, however, looking more to the size of the order, than the credit of the customer. Such lax handling in accounts is sure to result in loss, and reveals very poor business management.

Persons who take offense at being asked to pay, or give reference as to their responsibility, when opening an account, had better be allowed to go elsewhere. Many merchants state their terms as follows: "Our prices are based on cash payments. Purchases will be charged for the convenience of customers during the month, and are due when bill is rendered." This is generally printed in their bill heads. Many send a bill rendered for all transient purchases on the tenth of the month if the account has, by that time, not been paid.

When an account runs over two months, it is time to get after it courteously, but firmly, by letter. If the customer means to pay, this will generally suffice, but if there is still no response, then there is cause for concern, and every effort should be made to bring the matter to a focus. The best time to collect a bill from a new customer, is when the goods are delivered, or as soon after as possible. Everything regarding the transaction is fresh in the mind, and that is the time to get the money. Nearly every dollar lost through bad bills, could have been collected by proper business precautions or methods diligently applied.

When letters are necessary, it is best to use plain envelopes, so that they will be opened, and their contents given a "once over." The first sight of the business envelope recalls the account, but as it is known to be a dun, it is frequently torn in half and goes into the waste basket without another glance. When payment on account is promised at a certain date, be on the spot and secure as well, the time to call again. When there is evident intention to avoid payment, then, if some of the account is for gifts sent to friends, a threat to collect from them, will generally produce results. Suit, is a last resort, but if the amount is worth while, it pays to get judgment and keep it entered up, particularly if there are any rich connections, as settlement has to be made before any transfer of property in estates to which they may be a beneficiary by will.

Collection agencies and systems are expensive, and only succeed through harsh methods that could be much better done by one's own office force.

TEN PER CENT FOR CASH.

There are stores that do a practically cash business, offering as an inducement a 10 per cent discount in trade. The cash register record slip, showing the amount of their purchase, being always good for 10 per cent of its face value in payment of stock in the store at any time. As there is always a profit on the sales, the actual cost of getting the cash is not five per cent, and as it has the effect of bringing the customer back, who very likely buys something in addition, it is worth all of that in advertising value.

Sweet Peas.

One of the most satisfactory of all the winter cut flowers is the improved or orchid flowered sweet pea. Less than 10 years ago sweet peas of the grandiflora, or garden type, were forced, but found little favor, as they were considered so out of date, being always associated with summer. With the introduction of the early blooming and greatly improved orchid flowering type, with long stems and extra large florets in exquisite shadings of color and which have in the past five years improved so wonderfully, they are now considered one of the most staple flowers on the market. The white varieties, shades of pink and the lavender are beautiful, and have won their way into the hearts of all flower lovers. They appear to be suited to every requirement from a few sprays for a dainty vase, to the largest cluster. As a corsage flower, they are quite the equal of any other, in fact, in many respects they excel. For wedding bouquets, they are most proper, both for the bride and her maids. For table decorations they are equally effective, and are used to advantage in all kinds of design work.

As they are likely soon to be the most plentiful cut flower on the market, they can be featured and made even more popular by judicious display. To keep them constantly on the move should be the aim of the retailer, so that each day's purchases should be sold up as closely as possible, as they shrink perceptibly and lose their fragrance the second day.

If many, in fact, most retail florists, would study intensive store methods in featuring and displaying their plants and flowers, so as to attract attention, they would find it greatly to their advantage. In many cases, the most beautiful sweet peas are crowded in jars and vases, and huddled together on the shelves of the ice case until they are but a mass of color. The greatest beauty in the sweet pea is in the individuality of its sprays; crowd them together, and this is lost. Place a bunch of 25 sprays in a vase so that outlines of the separate florets are visible and the quantity will seem doubled in size and much more effective. Arrange a bunch of pink flowers in a blue vase basket, with a little green, tie a knot of pink or blue ribbon on the handle, and there is at once a good color contrast and artistic finish. Half to a dozen such arrangements on a table in the store will be sure to be noticed by every visitor and result in many more sales than if the flowers waited in the ice case for a customer. It is always worth while to feature made up corsages. They are in every day demand, frequently wanted on a moment's notice, and many times sales are made because they, in their beauty, suggest use to one who had not thought of buying until they called the opportunity to his mind.

When a bit plentiful, sufficient wax paper to make a flaring cornucopia or covering around a bunch, sets off the flowers to advantage and makes it look larger. A number of these in a large shallow bowl will move off quickly in week-end sales, particularly if a price card is conspicuous. A good publicity idea, when it is desired to work up among patrons increased interest in the store, is to send to a selected list, a bunch of choice sweet peas in a small box, or tied in a cornucopia of white paper. They will appreciate the gift and attention, and be almost certain to reciprocate.

A shower wedding bouquet of white sweet peas will be a good drawing card for the window, and always has an influence in obtaining orders.

A collection of all the varieties now in the market, 25 sprays to a vase, correctly named, is another window attraction that will be of interest to all flower lovers.

Modernizing the Old-Time Store.

There are a great number of retail florists, many of them of prominence, whose annual volume of trade is quite a factor in the community, but who transact their business in the old-fashioned way, much the same as they did 20 years ago. They are conservative to a degree, take care of their old customers faithfully, meet their obligations promptly, and are satisfied so long as they are able to make both ends meet and secure a comfortable living.

The store, in appearance, is much the same in all its esesntial features as it has been for years—counters, cases, ice box, all in the same places; window and front of the shop no different in form or color. The window displays are sttereotyped, almost the same, month to month, with only a change at holiday seasons.

Such men are averse to all kinds of innovations; their motto appears to be "let well enough alone"; the idea of going after or doing anything to bring in more business, does not agree with their method of doing things. They, of course, like to be busy, but the work must come in of itself. It always has done so, and they look for it to continue.

While there are old fashioned people, who like to do things in the same way year after year, and who, as a rule, only buy flowers for funerals or anniversary occasions, such as decoration of the graves, etc., there has grown up a new generation, who are imbued with modern ideas, who want things up-to-date. Their mode of living is different; they have been brought up in another school, learned aggressive business methods, are progressive and ambitious, make more money and spend it securing and enjoying the worth while things of life. Their homes are well furnished, often luxurious, where plants and flowers are sure to find a welcome and are considered a necessity. The well-kept grounds around the dwelling, with their foliage and flowering plants in summer, and evergreens in winter, are in this necessary demand, a great factor in the florist's trade. The florist's field of endeavor is like that of the farmer whose soil has great possibilities, but it requires careful planning and constant cultivation to get the best results.

DOUBLING THE SALES.

We feel we are quite within bounds in saying that there is not half the demand or consumption of plants and flowers that would be possible if modern business methods were the rule in all the retail stores, and dealers were more alive to their opportunities. There are examples of modern, up-to-date, progressive business methods in extending the efficiency of retail stores in every business community. In nearly every instance, these take the form of attractive store fronts and display windows that are in every way best fitted to show the class of goods in which the firm specializes. The appearance from the street is considered of the greatest value, as every passer-by is a possible customer, and the more attractive the window, the greater the chance to arrest attention and perhaps interest to such an extent, that a sale is made. The interior should be in keeping with the outside, with modern fixtures, well arranged, and a clean, plain or covered floor that is so important to the appearance of the shop.

There is many an old style store front that could, for a comparatively small amount of money, be converted into an up-to-date appearance, that with modern and aggressive methods in display, would more than pay for the investment in a year's time. Bring the floor of the window within a foot of the pavement; plants and flowers look so much better when viewed from above. When the greenhouse man sets his plants on the walk, they at once show to better advantage than on the bench. Short pedestals give an elevation when necessary. Show windows in modern stores are all brought close down to the sidewalk, as there is then so much more room for display.

The old-fashioned long counters and wall cases are now largely done away with; display tables of various sizes, which can be moved about in frequent changes of the interior, are found more useful. Mirrors take the place of wall cases, and are particularly advantageous in enlarging the appearance of the small shop, which, in crowded retail centers, is the rule.

These changes for the better are not sxpensive and can be put in gradually and made to pay for themselves, which they undoubtedly will, particularly if they instill in the dealer a more progressive and enthusiastic interest in the business.

SELL FLOWERS.

There is no better motto for the retail florist than the two words, "Sell Flowers," with particular emphasis on the "Sell." When anything now is placed in stock, the first thought should be how can I best sell this; how shall it be featured to attract the most attention? Featuring is a form of advertising. If there are but a few, such as well-flowered plants the first of the season, place the pots in jars, baskets, mats or paper covers; they will be found to attract more attention and move quicker. A certain line of cut flowers may be offered at low prices in quantity. How can we best call attention to these and sell them quickly? The small vase baskets are filled, the window is decorated with a quantity in boxes, which, at low prices that still allow a good profit, soon cleans them out, and new customers are made for the store.

Palms at Porto Rico.

An interesting visitor from this island possession of the United States, who has been for the past month visiting the trade in New York and Philadelphia, is F. M. Pennock, a former resident of Kennett Square, Pa., but for the past 20 years has lived in San Juan, Porto Rica. Mr. Pennock is a graduate of Cornell, taking the course in horticulture, and while his first work on the island was the scientific laying out of roads, of which he was also an expert, has for the past 10 years taken up floriculture, or more properly speaking, the culture of tropical foliage plants, such as dracaenas, pandanus, crotons, ficus, aspidistras and palms, all of which grow there most luxuriantly. All kinds of bamboos also make wonderful growths in a short time. Their long, hollow trunks are used to make flower pots, sections being sawed off just below the joint for the bottom and cut to make a suitable depth. Trunks, three four and five inches in diameter, are used for this purpose. When necessary to shift the plant, the pot is split and thrown away.

The coloring in all the foliage plants is exceedingly brilliant. Pandanus Sanderii, or Golden Pandanus, has a brilliant golden tint that would gladden the heart of any greenhouse man. The glorious coloring of the croton is far ahead of any in greenhouse culture. Dracaenas also make a wonderful growth, as do Areca lutescens. All plants of this character do best on the coast or sea level, where high temperature the year round is from 60 to 65 degrees, there not being a variation of more than seven degrees between winter and summer.

In the foothills and mountains, at an elevation of about 2,000 feet, winter temperature seldom gets lower than 50 to 55, and 60 in summer. It is this section that Mr. Pennock believes to be ideal for the cultivation of the kentia and aspidistra. A large fruit grower has taken up the kentia and has now 60,000 in four-inch pots. These are grown under the lath frames, covered with cheesecloth. A much larger planting of seed was made last winter.

Mr. Pennock believes all palms that delight in kentia temperature will thrive wonderfully well in these elevated plateaus, called the Rio Piedras district, as will also aspidistras. The climate is much better than California, as there is very little danger from frost, the lowest record of the weather bureau, which was very exceptional, being 44 degrees. Roses, carnations, chrysanthemums and cosmos flower luxuriously in their seasons. Labor, which enters largely into the cost of growing plants, is exceedingly plentiful and wages low, good, trustworthy workers being paid 75 cents to $1.00 per day. Transportation requires five days to New York, with freight rates much cheaper than the same distance by rail.

All plants raised there are admitted free of duty and are not subject to the restrictions of the federal board.

Porto Rica contains about 4,000 square miles, being 100 long by 40 in width. There will soon be railroad connection all around the island. The principal industries are sugar, tobacco and coffee. There is also considerable fruit growing, such as oranges, grapefruit and pineapples. The population of the island is something over 4,000,000. The largest cities are San Juan, on the north coast, 57,000, and Ponce, on the south coast, with 45,000 people. Since coming into possession of the United States, the sugar and tobacco industries have grown rapidly in importance, and land has greatly increased in value in many sections being worth five time the price held in 1900.

National Publicity for Flowers.

The drive for St. Valentine's day business is just now very active. Our promotion bureau has received over 400 orders for stamps and posters, some of the orders quite large, a few calling for as many as 50,000 stamps and 100 posters each. These stamps and posters are inexpensive, and are very valuable aids in local publicity for what can be made one of our leading flower days. Every florist can use at least a few stamps, and certainly one poster for window display. Both link up with our magazine advertising, and he is a wise florist who sends in his order right away. Thousands of people are by these stamps and posters reminded of a day when sentiment should prevail, and flowers should, above all things, be the medium for its conveyance. The greater the publicity given to the day, the better results for the florists, and, surely, the small cost of the stamps and posters should hardly be considered in the matter. Wake up, and send in your order, if you have not already done so.

THE BILLBOARD SIGNS.

With the holiday business out of the way, the matter of the billboard signs should now receive attention. Many hundreds of florists have good locations for these signs on their own properties, and an installation would help each and every one, whether grower or retailer.

We are glad to have had the support of some of the members of our society in arranging for installations. W. H. Eiss, of Buffalo, secretary of the Western New York Florists' Publicity Committee, has arranged for the location of 20 billboards. Guy French, of Morton Grove, Ill., has promoted orders for as many more. Wallace R. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn., at a meeting of the Hartford florists last week, obtained pledges for 10 billboards; a pretty good showing for Hartford and vicinity. Many others of our members could, in their communities, very easily arouse interest in this feature of our campaign, which should create a tremendous amount of publicity for our slogan, "Say it With Flowers." Secretaries of florists' clubs and other organizations are invited to communicate with the secretary as to possibilities in their districts. Order blanks, giving all particulars, are available upon appliction to the secretary's office.

CAMPAIGN FUND FOR 1920.

With the splendid results accruing from our work of last year, our publicity committee ought to receive a very much greater financial support than they have had so far. These results are only possible through expenditure of money, and there has not been as much cash available for purposes of the campaign as there should have been. What is $54,000 among 20,000 florists? A little more than $2.50 per head—and some of the subscribers paid for as many as 200 heads. This is shameful. We get, absolutely, what we pay for—profitable publicity—so why should any one withhold a subscription? Never was there greater prosperity in the florists' industry, and the publicity campaign has promoted it.

You, Mr. Non-Subscriber, share in it all, at the expense of your brethren. Do you think this is right? Of course you do not. Then send in your check for any amount you can afford, and feel that you are helping the committee to help you. Let us keep the campaign going—harder than ever. The more we do, the more the results. Flowers are being used now for purposes never thought of before.

The campaign fund for 1920 is, so far, $37,572.50, actually pledged.

The following subscriptions have been received, and are in addition to those previously announced annually for four years, unless otherwise stated:

Weidemann's, Jersey City, N. J.	$ 5.00
T. J. Gibson, Newport, R. I. (1 year)	5.00
Roy E. Neal, Lawrenceville, Ill.	7.50
A. Deitsch Co., Chicago, (1 year)	75.00
Wirt Fl. Co., Parsons, Kan. (1 yr.)	5.00
T. Harold Coffman, Huntington, W. Va., (1 year)	10.00
	$107.50
Total amount promised for 1920.	$37,572.50
Total	$37,680.00

Adding Atmosphere to Flowers.

What a pleasure and thrill we have all received now and then when someone tells us about the way the florists have "put across" the slogan, "Say it With Flowers," and really haven't you been more than repaid in the pleasure and satisfaction and the fact that you were instrumental in its success. It is certain, every one who contributed to the campaign must feel that way.

What a feeling the business itself has taken on since its inception. Every club or association that is connected with flowers has talked about it, until it seems that the subject has been on every one's tongue. Have you noticed the dignified manner in which our campaign has been carried on in the national magazines, and how much "Say it With Flowers" is helping to create atmosphere for the florists at large.

Are you helping to effect a still broader field for more "atmosphere" that our campaign needs to aid it financially? We are going into a 1920 campaign with results that will be even more beneficial than the past year, but we must have your united effort to carry on.

Abe Martin said: "Many a man has been a failure because he nailed a horse-shoe over the door, instead of putting an advertisement in the paper." Do not wait for your neighbor, but do your part, and then the results will be still added atmosphere to our campaign and its supporters. More people are insisting on flowers in spite of higher prices.

HENRY PENN,
Chairman Nat. Publicity Campaign.

Ladies' Society of American Florists.

To the Members of the Ladies' Society of American Florists:

The gavel, your president's symbol of power, came to me today, reposing on a bed of rose leaves, all bound round with rose pink ribbons and tagged with a little silk wild rose. Your gracious retiring president, a loyal florist's wife, and ever mindful of the fitness of things, paid you her tribute, and said it with roses. The message was so significant, I am passing it on to each and every member.

The garden gate of the New Year has been opened for us, upon a rose strewn path, and it must be not only our pleasure, but our duty, to keep it rosy.

The president of the Society of American Florists, remembered us with courtesy in his message, and it is my great privilege, to extend to him, on behalf of the ladies' society, our greetings and our hearty congratulations, on his message and the very efficient manner in which he has undertaken his duties.

I am indeed proud to hold the honored position of your president, and very anxious to prove myself worthy of your trust. My success will but reflect your co-operation, without which no president can be a success.

I bespeak for your officers, your board of directors, and your committees, your loyal support and your absolute confidence.

Throughout the year, there is little of purely society matters to engage our attention. For this reason, I would greatly appreciate any items of interest from or about our members; news from the different ladies' clubs which have been formed in several cities, news from members in the widely separated localities, and from members in Canada. The United States need to hear from Canada, the north from the south and the east from the west. We do not have time for this at the conventions. Send any news to your secretary, that others may profit, and membership in the society mean more than a few days' association in the summer.

Individual effort, if focused on the single idea, to make the Ladies' Society of American Florists a force in florists' activities, must surely produce results. To this end, let every member consider herself a self-appointed committee of one, to work for the betterment of the society.

I shall be in New York during the flower show in March, and shall be very glad to meet any members who may attend, to give and receive any information helpful to our members and to our society in general.

KATHRYN BEACH TRACY, Pres't.

New York Federation of Hort. Societies.

WINTER MEETING AT ALBANY.

The Albany Florists' Club entertained the New York Federation of Horticultural Societies and Floral Clubs in a most hospitable manner, January 15. The federation was represented by about 25 delegates from affiliated societies. In the afternoon, automobiles were provided to take the guests to various commercial greenhouses and other points of interest about the city. At six o'clock a federation meeting was held in the rathskeller of the Hampton hotel, with President F. R. Pierson, of Tarry, N. Y., in the chair. The project for a horticultural building at the state fair in Syracuse was discussed, as were also plans for a more rigid campaign against insect pests and fungous diseases on florists' crops.

Following the meeting, the guests joined the members of the florists' club in one of the large private dining rooms of the Hampton for the annual dinner of the club. The room was most tastefully decorated by the committee, consisting of F. A. Danker, Edward Tracy and L. H. Schaefer. The ceiling was hung with heavy roping of laurel, and the end of the room was banked with American flags, palms, ferns and cyclamens. In front of the guest table was an attractive fountain with hidden electric lights. The tables were decorated with most splendidly-grown cyclamens from the greenhouses of Louis Menand, and a vase of 50 fine Laddie carnations from Samuel Goddard, Framingham, Mass. Between the courses of the elaborate menu, the diners were entertaind with instrumntal music, songs, monologues and various acts given by a vaudeville troup from Troy. One of the most notable numbers on the programme was the singing of the official song of the S. A. F., "Say It With Flowers," by Miss Lavina Richards, six years old, of Troy. Her sweet, strong voice, perfect enunciation and dainty interpretation quite won the hearts of the diners, and she generously responed with several encores.

After the dinner, an address on "Some Principles of Plant Breeding," was given by Dr. R. A. Emerson, head of the department of plant breeding at Cornell University. Dr. Emerson discussed in an interesting and instructive way the factors which cause variation in plants, and explained the laws thus far known that govern heredity. He told of the results which have been obtained, especially in sweet peas, carnations, beans, peas and corn, and told of the results of his own work in breeding a strain of garden beans which is immune from anthracnose.

Following the lecture, F. A. Danker, as toastmaster of the evening, introduced President F. R. Pierson, who spoke of the important work the federation is doing. One of the most valuable functions is the bringing together of the horticultural interests of the state in the four meetings of the year, and the co-operation which the florists are now showing in those matters which vitally affect the trade. He thanked the florists' club for the splendid hospitality it had extended to the delegates and hoped a large number would go to Ithaca for the farmers' week meetings February 11.

President Pierson was followed by short speeches by President Tracy, of the Albany Florists' Club; Werner Bultman, Syracuse Florists' Association; Dr. Erl Bates, Syracuse Rose Society; Louis Menand, James Larcarris and L. H. Schaefer, of the Albany Florists' Club, and Professor E. A. White, of Ithaca.

At the close of the toasts, Thomas Tracy, on behalf of the Albany Florists' Club, presented the retiring president, William Newport, with a silver-mounted carving set, and the retiring secretary, Robert Davidson, with a silver-mounted ebony set of toilet articles. Messrs. Newport and Davidson, responded with expressions of appreciation.

The banquet closed in the "wee sma' hours," with songs and a monologue by Dennis McCarthy, of Albany.

FLORISTS' CLUB BANQUETS FEDERATION.

Unusual enthusiasm and the largest attendance in the history of the organization, marked the annual banquet of the florists' club held on the night of January 15 in The Hampton hotel. What made the function notable was the presence of delegates of the New York Federation of Horticultural Societies and Floral Clubs, who held their winter meeting in this city and were entertained as guests of the local club. On account of the very cold weather which delayed trains, the visitors were five or more hours late in arriving in the city. The secretary, Professor E. A. White, of the department of floriculture, Cornell University, Ithaca, did not reach Albany until six o'clock p. m. The delegates who arrived before Professor White were taken to the esbtalishments of Frederick A. Danker, a former president of the Albany Florists' Club, and Louis Menard, on Cemetery avenue. After the two places were visited the delegates returned to the Hampton, where lunch was served about six o'clock. Those who were present included: F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, past president of the S. A. F.; Professor E. A. White, Ithaca; Professor R. A. Emerson, of the department of plant breeding, college of agriculture, Cornell University; Dr. Erl Bates, past president of the Syracuse Rose Society, composed of amateurs who grow roses out of doors; Rev. Edmund M. Mills, D. D., president of the Syracuse Rose Society; Charles R. Russell, superintendent of the estate of Mrs. Finley J. Shepard (Helen Gould), Tarrytown; J. C. Latham, superintendent for F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown; John Fetherstone, superintendent of Sleepy Hollow cemetery, Tarrytown; Werner Bultmann, president of the Syracuse Florists' Club, and Charles A. Stuart, nurseryman, Syracuse.

At the dinner at the Hampton at 8:30 o'clock, President Edward P. Tracey, of the Albany Florists' Club, appointed Fred A. Danker, toastmaster. Mr. Pierson, in response to a toast, "The Federation," said it was made up of horticultural societies and florists' clubs in order to promote common objects, chief of which is legislation affecting horitcultural interests. The speaker said the federation is adding to the social interest of the members of the bodies contained in it, and doing much to create a good feeling among all the elements in the trade. Mr. Pierson called attention to the growth of rose societies among amateurs in the cities of the state and country. These organizations are formed of enthusiasts who cultivate their favorite flower out of doors. One of these societies is in Syracuse, one is being organized in Rochester, and others are under way or planned for Utica, Troy, Albany and other cities in the state. Mr. Pierson advised the florists to be helpful to these amateurs, because through judicious encouragement of their efforts, a big business opportunity can be developed. The speaker called attention to the fact that the old days, when each group in the horticultural business "was sufficient unto themselves," are gone, and that united effort in time of stress makes such an organization as the federation important and helpful. Mr. Pierson suggested that the federation co-operate with such institutions as the department of floriculture, Cornell University, of which Professor E. A. White is the head. Such co-operation can be made very helpful to growers and others through the study by young men from the department on the grounds of the growers of the insect pests and other problems that vex the proprietors. Mr. Pierson suggested to Professor White that he take up the subject of insect pests reported from certain sections in Pennsylvania, and that the Cornell department have a good knowledge of the enemy before they appear in this state.

Professor R. A. Emerson, of the department of plant breeding, Cornell University, told of the work of producing hybrids carried on in his department. Professor Emerson has made a special study of crosses in beans and corn, but the principles established with them are the same in the realm of the plant world. With the aid of charts and specimens of seeds, the speaker showed that regularity rules in the breeding of hybrids as in other things in nature. Mendel's law, made known in 1865, is an attempt at setting forth this regularity in a scientific way. Through experiments in plant breeding, the speaker showed that advances have been made in developing varieties of vegetables and flowers that are resistant to certain kinds of diseases.

In the course of his remarks Professor E. A. White said he approved of the objects of the federation. He invited all present to profit by the programme to be given February 11 at Cornell University. The date is in the middle of "farmers' week" at the university, but Professor White and other members of the faculty have arranged the programme for the day named for the special benefit of the horticulturist and florist. As secretary of the American Rose Society, Professor White made the announcement that at a meeting of the executive committee held in New York, January 12, the Hubbard gold medal had been awarded to E. G. Hill, Richmond, Indiana, for his new rose, "Columbia." The Hubbard medal is awarded by the society to the best rose of American origin developed in five years. In 1914 it was awarded to M. H. Walsh, of Woods Hole, Mass.

The most enthusiastic speaker at the dinner was Dr. Erl Bates, of Syracuse, a physician, chemical manufacturer, an enthusiastic amateur rose grower and a citizen of power in the community in which he lives. He said that the Syracuse society, which he helped to form, is the largest organization of amateurs who grow plants out of doors in the country, and perhaps in the world. The society started with 12 men who were the objects among their friends and neighbors of some good-natured ridicule—in fact, the thorough Philistines among them used the term "nuts" in talking about the hobby of the members of the new society. The amateurs persevered, however, and in time the influence of the society in the city was most noticeable. Many people planted roses, and some did not succeed. The reasons were various and the demand for information grew so insistent that the society compiled a list of 12 staple varieties of roses which almost any intelligent person could plant and take care of with the assurance that they would come true to name, bloom, and delight all beholders. This first list led to demands for a second from those who considered themselves more advanced; a third list was also called for by those who were beginning to think they were among the elect, and for those who thought themselves most advanced, a fourth list of roses had to be prepared. The result is that Syracuse has become an unusual market for the nurseryman. The society has found it necessary to pool its orders, some of which are sent abroad and arrive in this country in a volume about equal to that of the largest importers. Dr. Bates mentioned a recent order sent to a house in Ireland that was of unusual proportions. Dr. Bates believes that there are enough enthusiasts in Albany to start a rose society, the principal thing to do being to plan the campaign in the right way from the start. In conclusion, the speaker pleaded for the co-operation of the members of the federation and the Albany Florists' Club to secure an appropriation from the state for the construction of a large horticultural building on the state fair grounds at Syracuse. Dr. Bates said that horticultural and floral exhibits in the building would be a means of educating thousands of people who visit the fair, in the use of beauty of fruits and flowers.

The business meeting of the Federation in Albany was informal—discussions about legislation and subjects of trade interest. The election of officers takes place at the annual meeting.

LIMITED SUPPLY ADVANCES PRICES.

The past week has shown a great falling off in the quantity of all kinds of cut flowers. As a consequence all wholesale prices of stock are very high. Roses come first in the shortage. What stock is arriving, however, is very good. The carnation supply is not equal to the demand by any means, and the growers are receiving good returns for their offerings. The stock of this flower is now at its best, and it is being largely used in the stores for fine work during the scarcity of roses. Violets are also on the limited list. This is due to the prolonged spell of cold weather. While prices have not advanced to any appreciable degree there does not seem to be enough stock coming in to meet the daily requirements. The shipping trade for this flower is now at its height, and much of the growers' daily cut is sold in this way. Sweet peas are coming in slowly and meet with a brisk demand. Prices for this stock are high. There is a nice supply of cattleyas to be had. The brisk demand for this stock keeps the market cleaned up every day. Prices are still high, and show no sign of getting lower. The supply of freesias is increasing every day. They are wholesaling at $4.00 per 100. In pot plants, the stock of azaleas is about gone. There is a nice lot of cyclamens to be had in various colors. Some especially well grown cinerarias are now coming in, which add greatly to the attractiveness of the stores.

NOTES.

The Lynch Nursery Company, of Menlo Park, is now shipping a fine grade of carnations and snapdragons. They have a heavy supply of smilax, which is in much demand for high class decorative work. They report the plant trade to be far ahead of previous years, and at the present time they are very busy.

The San Jose branch of the Cottage Gardens Nurseries is supplying this market with a fine lot of ericas in full bloom. Manager Clarke says his firm has had an unusually heavy demand for roses and are sold out in many varieties. They have a large lot of azaleas which will be ready for Easter trade.

At E. W. McLellan's, they are receiving a fine cut of American Beauty from their San Lorenzo greenhouses. Business is very brisk here right along, the shipping trade being excellent. They are cutting largely of asparagus, all of which is used in their shipping trade.

J. A. Axell is receiveing a splendid lot of freesias from his growers. The demand is far ahead of the supply. He is also receiving some splendid daffodils, which are in much favor. His receipts of orchids from the greenhouses of Ferarri Bros. continues steadily.

Enomoto & Co are receiving a nice supply of carnations from their Redwood nursery. They say the demand for voilets for shipping is brisk, with sufficient stock difficult to obtain. They will shortly have a nice cut of winter flowering sweet peas and freesias.

John Carboni, the orchid specialist of Berkeley, is in with a splendid lot of Cattleya trianae. The stock is large and beautifully colored. He has several thousand unflowered seedlings, of which he has great expectations.

J. Logarmarsino, one of our leading violet growers, says the lack of rains and severe cold spell is responsible for the shortage of violets. With his large acreage, he is unable to fill any orders at present.

Podesta & Baldocchi report a heavy call for American Beauty and Russell roses. They have completed several high class decorations, which called for large quantities of decorative plants.

Martin A. Poss, of San Mateo, was a visitor this week. He says he enjoyed a brisk holiday trade and sold out completely. He noted an increased demand for flowering and berried plants.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. are showing very fine cyclamen plants this week. Their store is well stocked with specimen decorative plants. Trade is keeping all hands busy here.

The Art Floral Co. has been kept very busy since the first of the year. According to Manager Matraia there is quite a shortage of all stock at the present time.

The Ferry Florists, in the Ferry building, have a very attractive stand and are doing a steady business. Of late a fine grade of stock is being carried here.

K. S. Murray is one of the growers who is in with a nice cut of freesias. This has been one of his specialties for many years.

George C. Roeding, president of the Fancher Creek Nursuries, says trade is very heavy.

JAMES T. LYNCH.

Rhode Island Horticultural Society.

The seventy-fifth annual meeting of the above society will be held in the lecture room, Public Library, Providence, R. I., January 21. All members and friends of the society are cordially invited to attend this meeting. Bring any suggestions you may have for the work of the society during 1920. Plans are now being made to make the year one of the most interesting in the history of the society. Lectures and demonstrations of unusual interest will be arranged. Three exhibitions will be held in June, September and November.

Plans are being made to hold a combined show in the state armory in November, which will include exhibits by all agricultural and horticultural societies in the state. This combined show will be the finest exposition ever held in the state. In addition to the exhibits there will be lectures, demonstrations, moving pictures, music, etc. An admission fee will be charged, but all members who have paid their annual dues of $1.00 will receive a complimentary ticket. Be sure to pay your dues promptly when the treasurer sends your bill to you in a few days.

At the annual meeting, January 21, K. E. Gillett, of Southwick, Mass., will lecture on the "Cultivation of Native Plants." This is an unusually interesting subject. There are great possibilities for starting a profitable business in propagating native plants, such as ferns, wild flowers, shrubs, trees, etc., and selling them for home decoration. Come and learn how Mr. Gillett has worked up a profitable business in this way.

Business meeting at 7:45 p. m.; lecture at 8:00 p. m.

SHORT SUPPLY RAISES PRICES.

Business has been good the past week, with a strong call for funeral work, but the scarcity of stock makes it difficult to fill all orders. Flowers have been scarce due to cold and cloudy weather and prices are again on the advance.

NOTES.

The ladies' florist club at its meeting, January 13, elected the following officers: Mrs. E. Frey, president; Mrs. H. P. Neun, vice-president; Mrs. Hiram Wilson, secretary; Mrs. C. Suhr, treasurer.

J. B. Keller Sons recently featured a fine display of fancy Japanese flower bowls.

Horace J. Head has left for a few weeks' business trip in the east.

CONSIDERABLE IMPROVEMENT IN DEMAND.

Business the past week was rather brisk with a decided increase in funeral work. Social activity also picked up somewhat. Stock has increased a little but with the gain in business it continues to be a question from day to day for the retailer to keep a supply of flowers on hand. The quality is just about the same, with a heavier cut in sweet peas and violets of better grades. Carnations are good, but not enough of them. Roses are in fair supply.

NOTES.

In the "Say it With Flowers" bowling league, the Roses continue to be the leaders. Next week, the Carnations and Roses meet again and will the competition be keen? Ask George Kuehner and Fred Hermann.

Geo. B. Windler's delivery truck had a serious smash-up with a street car January 17. The machine was wrecked and the driver had quite a few serious wounds. He will, however, recover.

F. A. Windler served two weeks on a jury. He feels that he should be exempt for at least two years, as the average juror only has to serve three or four days.

North Shore Horticultural Society.

The monthly meeting of the North Shore Horticultural Society was held at Lake Forest, Ill., December 5, President Wm. E. Fisher in the chair. Mr. Fisher, who is leaving the Cyrus H. McCormick estate and going east, gave in his resignation with regrets as president after being elected for 1920. The society voted that E. Bollinger act in that capacity for 1920.

The judging by points for the best exhibit at each month's meeting for medals for 1919 were as follows: Thos. Head 1146, gold medal; Robt. Chalmers 1108, silver medal; John F. Kiley 1100, bronze medal.

Wm. C. Rickards of New York was in attendance and gave a short talk on chrysanthemums at the Eastern exhibitions. He also gave the society $10 for the best strawberry to be exhibited at the spring show.

Florists says that during the past several weeks trade has shown a big improvement, due to the change in the weather.

Emil Niednagel, manager of the floral business of Julius Niednagel here, and Miss Sarah Meadows, daughter of Mrs. F. H. Meadows, of this city, were married January 14. Mr. and Mrs. Niednagel left immediately after the ceremony for Chicago to spend their honeymoon. They will be at home at the Niednagle residence, 927 Lincoln avenue, following their return from the north.

Thomas C. Ruston, formerly associated with the Wm. Blackman Floral Co., in this city, who now lives in Indianapolis, has been ill for the past month, but is better at this writing.

Dr. Knapp, well-known peony specialist, has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his wife, whose death occurred January 19.

George Blackman, of the Wm. Blackman Floral Co., is attending the carnation show in Chicago this week.

HAMILTON, ONT.—Plans are under way for the annual convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association to be held in this city in August.

THE Bureau of Plant Industry, Washington, D. C., has issued Bulletin No. 802, devoted to peat and its characteristics.

SENATOR PHELAN, of California, will propose a constitutional amendment barring from American citizenship children born in this country of parents ineligible for citizenship. He said also he was working on an immigration measure to exclude all Japanese immigrants, except merchants and diplomats.

DRASTIC laws are still on the increase. A bill has been introduced by Representative Brandt, of Georgia, providing penal servitude of from one to 20 years, with no alternative of fine, for fraudulent dealers in food supplies and fuel, also enlarging the number of punishable acts which are claimed to constitute fraud.

Coal Regulations Removal Asked.

A movement in Philadelphia, having for its object the prompt removal of all coal regulations, has been started by the American Wholesale Coal Association. Counsel has been engaged and negotiations opened with representatives of the government at Washington. If this does not produce results, the associations is prepared to take the matter into the courts.

Mail Addresses.

The postmaster of Chicago calls attention to the increasing delay in the delivery of mail, due to the omission of streets and street numbers in addresses. All letterheads and envelopes should bear the name, street, number, city and state of the sender. Letters not bearing street and street numbers are generally returned by the postoffice authorities for better address, as it is no part of the business of the postoffice to look up the streets and numbers.

The following communication, dated January 14, has been sent out by the federal horticultural board:

C.

HUBBARD GOLD MEDAL AWARD.

The executive committee of the American Rose Society at a recent meeting in New York voted to award to the hybrid tea rose, Columbia, registered in 1917 by E. G. Hill of Richmond, Indiana, the Gertrude M. Hubbard gold medal for the best rose of American origin, introduced during the last five years. This award was made possible by the generosity of Mrs. Gertrude M. Hubbard, of Twin Oaks, Washington, D. C., and has been awarded but once when, in 1914, it was given to M. H. Walsh of Woods Hole, Massachusetts, for the introduction of the climbing rose, Excelsa. The honor which goes to Mr. Hill is distinctive. It is the highest honor which the American Rose Society can confer on a hybridizer, and it is a recognition, not only of a variety of merit, but of the valued work of a pioneer in rose breeding—one who has devoted a half century of real service in the advancement of the rose, through breeding a type admirably suited for American conditions.

School Garden Army Plans for 1920.

Florists and nurserymen throughout the country are urged to lend their aid during the coming year to make the work of the United States School Garden Army, which enrolled two and one-half million children in 1919, more permanent and to increase its educational value. This result, says John L. Randall, director, can only be realized when gardening becomes a definite part of school work. Congress has appreciated the service of garden leaders to the country and has granted an appropriation to continue the work and this spirit of service to the education of children will result in their forming habits of industry and regularity by making use of their energies in yards and vacant lots that are now as a rule, largely unproductive. The garden army's slogan, "A Garden for Every Child—Every Child in a Garden"—is well chosen. The cooperation of the trade in this movement should be generous. There is no school subject from which more real knowledge of science, art or life's relations can be gained than through experience with growing plants. The interest now aroused will be reflected in the homes of future years. Give the garden army children in your neighborhood the benefit of your valuable experience.

PAYMENTS THROUGH CLEARING HOUSE.

A resolution adopted by the board of directors authorizing the secretary to pay all accounts that are sent to the clearing house became effective January 1, 1920. Accordingly, all accounts sent to the clearing house for collection will be paid promptly, after this office has been assured that said account is due, and no adjustments are necessary. A check for the amount, less 20 per cent, will be sent to the creditor. The florist owing the account, automatically becomes debtor to the F. T. D. A. for the full amount. All checks will be issued against the guarantee fund of the association. When the accounts are paid, they will be credited to the guarantee fund, less 20 per cent. Any surplus arising (after expenses are deducted for collection) from this procedure, will be turned into the general fund of the association.

The penalty for failure to pay the account within 10 days after due notice from the secretary, will be suspension, and the delinquent's name withdrawn from the list. (Article 11, Section 10, Cons. and By-laws). Any balance due a suspended member of his guarantee fund, after all accounts are paid, will be remitted after a lapse of the authorized time. See Article 4, Section 6, Cons. and By-laws.

The secretary has been called to account many times by members of the F. T. D. A. for not using his official right in issuing checks to cover accounts due. To avoid further criticism, the above action was declared timely.

ALBERT POCHELON, Sec'y.

Cyclamen Injury.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Will you kindly tell us what is affecting our cyclamens this year? The plants appeared to be perfectly healthy until early last fall when the leaves on many of them began to come puffy and misshapen. Believing this to be caused by aphis, we used nico-fume and sulphur in disinfecting and surrounded the pots with tobacco stems, but this seemed to have no effect, the leaves coming gnarled as before, a portion of the buds were knotty, and some of them had no leaves on the flower whatever.

North Dakota. O. H. W.

Inquirer is probably right in saying the trouble is caused by aphis or thrips. Spraying was evidently started too late. Cyclamens, to be kept free of insects, should be sprayed at least once a week with nicotine, as per formula on bottle, commencing when the plants are small. P.

Jersey City, N. J.

John F. Madden had full charge of the floral arrangement for the funeral of George E. Blakeslee, January 14. Mr. Blakeslee had been prominent in New Jersey politics, and was a close friend of Gov. Edwards. In addition to the casket cover and designs, the order of the family, Madden had orders from the White House, Washington, D. C., and from prominent people in other parts of the country. But few funerals ever held in this city showed such a wealth of fine floral work.

The retail store at 690 Newark avenue, formerly conducted by John Mantovi, has been taken over by H. & E. Nacion, natives of Cuba, and clever young men, who are popular in the trade.

May F. Kendall, who has a prosperous store at 532 Jersey avenue, had designs for the Blakeslee funeral. She is a good customer of the leading wholesalers of New York.

The range on Garfield avenue, formerly conducted by John Leach, and later by Philip Dosch, has been torn down to make room for other lines of business.

To Flower Buyers

There has been a big change in the flower market the last few days, caused by the very large funeral demand for flowers on account of the influenza epidemic. We are obliged to withdraw temporarily all advertised quotations, and will bill out stock at market values on day of shipment. Unfavorable weather has made all flowers very scarce. We will do the best we can to fill all orders in full, but we must put in some stock of long and medium lengths with orders of short lengths in Roses. We will do the best we possibly can to buy miscellaneous flowers, but please bear in mind there is a shortage of all kinds of stock.

All seasonable flowers not grown by us will be procured on orders.

STOCK CLEANS UP EARLY.

Stock of all kinds is cleaning up at an early hour each day at high prices and some of the wholesale houses are finding it to be a pretty tough job to fill all the orders that they are receiving. Short and medium roses are exceedingly scarce and the longer stemmed grades are in good demand on this account, which means that there is no surplus to speak of when the stores close at night. Columbia, Mrs. Chas. Russell and Premier are sold almost as soon as they reach the stores and the receipts of American Beauty roses are also disposed of quickly. Ophelia, Sunburst, Milady, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Champ Weiland, Killarney, White Killarney, Killarney Brilliant, Richmond, Hoosier Beauty, Maryland, Montrose and a few other varieties grown for this market also clean up fast at high prices. Carnations are in strong demand at the advertised quotations and are in short supply. Lily of the valley is having a good call and so are orchids and gardenias. Sweet peas are in strong demand and so are violets. Tulips and jonquils are commanding high figures and the same holds true for hyacinths and freesias. Some colored freesias are included in the shipments and as usual are taken up quickly. Stevia, mignonette, daisies, callas, calendulas, white and yellow narcissi and bouvardia are included in the offerings. Boxwood and galax are moving fast and there is a good call for other greens. The local health department is being swamped with appeals for nurses to combat the spread of influenza and pneumonia. The latter has taken a serious turn and the number of cases are increasing at an alarming rate. There have been over 3,600 cases of the "influenza" reported so far, with many of the patients already recovered. Dispatches from Washington say that officials of the public health service refuse to view the present influenza epidemic with alarm because the disease is of a mild type and the death rate low. The demand has been exceedingly heavy for funeral flowers the past week, especially from out-of-town points, with the Dodge funeral at Detroit, Mich., last week calling for a large supply of stock from this market.

NOTES.

C. Engelmann, of Saffron Walden, England, attended the annual meeting and exhibition of the American Carnation Society, of which he is a member, here this week. He left home last September and has since been making a tour of inspection of the trade in South America and this country. This is his second visit to this city, the first being nine years ago, when he and 11 other members of the British horticultural trade were in this country on a similar mission.

The committee representing the growers and retailers met with the wholesalers, January 19, when the Milwaukee plan of advertising was discussed. Some of the committee think that the wholesalers should pay one per cent of their gross commissions, but owing to the small attendance it was impossible to take any definite action.

Wietor Bros. are more than pleased with the demand for carnation cuttings this season, which continues to be heavy, and promises to clean up the surplus, if any, in this vicinity.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. have been filling a large number of orders for boxwood this month which is being used heavily owing to the extreme scarcity of cut flowers.

MEDIUM PRICED STOCK SCARCE.

Changeable weather has made stock an uncertain quantity, and owing to this scarcity, prices have been on an even keel. In roses, Premier and Columbia have been bringing advertised figures in all grades, the usual shortage of the lower priced flowers still prevailing. Some good Killarney in pink and white, also Russell and special Aaron Ward, have been shipped into this market, meeting with ready sale. Sweet peas are at their best now, and bring from $2 to $4 per 100. Carnations are scarce and return from $8 for splits to $15 per 100 for select stock. Princess of Wales violets move fast at $2 per 100, while the best Hudson River doubles are the same price. California stock arrives in good shape and sells for $1. Calendulas remain the same, $4 to $5 per 100. A better grade of this stock would be a welcome addition to this market. Narcissi of good quality are plentiful at $6 per 100. Every one is looking forward to a big Valentine's day business and to all appearances, judging by the general run of things, it should be a record-breaker. The principal demand will be for dainty baskets, corsages of all kinds and novelty holders and containers, emblematic of the day. The supply houses are having many inquiries for stock of this sort, and some of the conceptions are worthy.

NOTES.

Miss Betty Ferdinandsen, formerly of Washington, D. C., and now with H. W. Sheppard, spent the week-end with her folks near Champaign, Ill. The house of Sheppard contains the counterpart of many celebrities, Mr. Sheppard resembling Woodrow Wilson; Miss Ferdinandsen, Mary Pickford, and the porter is a perfect image of Charley Chaplin. Then the head designer is, like William Jennings Bryan, a hard man to keep down. Charles Ferguson, decorator and assistant designer, is a comedian and elocutionist extraordinary, and last, but not least, Miss Cunningham, the genial Celtic book-keeper—well, ask Julius Dilloff.

Gus Adrian, Jr., of Clifton, has digressed from his chosen path and is trying his hand at the Procter & Gamble soap works, famous for Ivory. Mr. Adrian says he works only eight hours a day; half-holiday Saturday, and no Sunday work, and he makes more money than the growing business ever paid him. The day will soon be here when all florists' helpers will be paid for overtime.

J. A. Peterson, of Westwood, begonia specialist, will attend the carnation society meeting at Chicago, taking with him samples of the new begonia, Peerless. It must be seen to be appreciated.

Joseph Hill and wife, Richmond, Ind., are being congratulated on the arrival of a baby girl. Joe cannot get the cigars to us too soon.

DEMAND CLEANS UP LIGHT RECEIPTS.

January trade seems rather slow, of course, after the brisk holiday business which was experienced, but there have been more than enough sales to care for the rather small receipts and prices have been well maintained. There has been an especially abundant supply of Chadwick chrysanthemums in the hands of several dealers the past week, and they have made the most of this to boost sales materially. A gold colored Seidewitz was also featured by a Second avenue dealer to good advantage. The supply of carnations has been increasing, but there has been a greater demand for this offering, so that California is still drawn on by the smaller dealers who have no glass of their own. Ophelia roses from local wholesalers lead in volume of arrivals, with Columbia, Milady and Lady Hillingdon all offered in commercial lots. There were a few Killarneys also and some Sunburst was seen in the early shipments for the week. Lily of the valley continues as scarce as at the last writing, but suitable substitutes are being developed for the corsage trade. Sweet peas are enjoying a good season, and prices have been better maintained than in any previous year. The local cut of orchids is short of current needs, and good cattleyas are bringing $4 or better per bloom.

NOTES.

More changes are reported in the sales force of the Hollywood Gardens. Miss Juanita Tromlitz, who has been with the firm for some time, has resigned because of a contemplated change of name and address. It is reported among her friends that ere long she will be Mrs. Taylor. S. A. Dunlap, late with Martin & Forbes, in Portland, and before that, in Chicago, has been added to the sales force, and Mrs. Dunlap will take Miss Tromlitz's place. A big cut of Ophelia roses and red, white and pink carnations is coming in from the Hollywood greenhouses, and cleaning up in good style.

Jack Sahlia, of Kent, has developed a carnation, a sport of Supreme, which was shown for the first time last week in Rosaia Bros.' window, and which has attracted a great deal of attention. This flower is a lovely salmon pink in color, and the blossoms range from three to four inches in diameter.

Miss Anna Burns, of the Burns Floral Co., handled a number of big decorations for lodge events during the past week. In one of these, chrysanthemums, asters and greens were used for an entire hall, three colors giving all the variety needed for the work.

Ed Schlager, Port Townsend florist, who has received his discharge from the service, stopped off in Minnesota long enough to acquire a better half, and spent a day here last week on his way home. He expects to go in heavily for loganberry culture this year.

severe cold, but completion of shop details is going ahead nevertheless. A splendid business has been reported.

A special hospital combination of Almeria grapes, oranges, red apples and various arrangements of cut flowers was shown last week by the Woodlawn Flower Shop. Good sales for hospital delivery followed.

Felix Rosaia reports a splendid sale of Ophelia and Ward roses and says that January business promises to far exceed that of the corresponding month of last year.

Rosaia Bros. report a notable increase in their cut of orchids, and for the past two weeks have been freed of the necessity of buying their stock in California.

The Woodland Park Floral Company announces that it will extend the area under glass this year to care for increased orders.

Eddie O'Neill, salesman with the Woodlawn Flower Shop, is in southern California on an extended visit.

SUPPLY UNUSUALLY SCARCE.

The demand for flowers during the past week has been a little slow, but not unusually so for this time of the year. Following the holiday season, there is always a lull, and this year it is not any more pronounced than usual. In fact, some of the florists say that the let-up is not nearly as strong as last year in comparison. Another factor which has helped to make the trade slow, is the bad weather conditions which have prevailed. Snowy and icy streets have kept people at home, and as a result the demand has been affected. There are a few parties and receptions now, but for the time being, the active social season is past. Funeral work has not been very brisk. There is a fairly good demand for loose flowers, and that is probably the best feature of the trade at this time. All of the down-town florists report a scarcity of flowers, but more especially for carnations and sweet peas. There is a fair supply of roses, which retail from $4 to $10 per dozen, principally of Ophelia, Sunburst, Killarney, Premier and Columbia. Carnations are quite scarce, and sell from $3 per dozen up. They are largely pink and white varieties. Sweet peas are moving well at 75 cents to $1.50 per bunch. The supply is fair, and the quality exceedingly good. Violets are probably the strongest point in the market, selling at $2 per bunch. They are of excellent quality and are not very plentiful. Plants are scarce and move readily at good prices.

J. W. L.

Milwaukee, Wis.

LIMITED SUPPLY AND HIGH PRICES.

Market conditions for the past week showed no improvements as to supply over that of the week previous. All kinds of cut flowers were scarce, with a brisk demand, especially for funeral work. Both roses and carnations are tight upon arrival; in fact, this has been the case ever since the recent holidays, and prospects are, that normal conditions will not prevail for some time to come, which means that the prevailing high prices will not come down. It looks as though the so-called good times will last till St. Valentine's day, which is a rather short time before Easter.

NOTES.

The Waukesha Floral Co. had a narrow escape, January 8, when a rivet head on the rear of their boiler blew out. They managed to keep out the frost by using kerosene stoves, loaned for the purpose, until repairs, which were completed at 3 a. m., again permitted firing.

The entertainment committee of the florists' club, through these lines, wishes to extend a hearty invitation to all outside florists, especially those of the Badger state, to attend the mid-winter dancing party, January 29, at the Calumet club.

The influenza is again with us. While the beginning of last week, the first cases were reported, the total number reached the 200 mark, January 17.

We are more than pleased to report that Mrs. Seaman had improved enough last week, to be able to sit up in bed a short time on several days.

SHORTAGE OF STOCK BECOMES ACUTE.

Another week has passed and the scarcity of flowers is even more acute than for the previous period. The situation is very unusual, and by many retailers considered most harmful, as prices are continuing so extremely high that they cannot afford to use flowers for display; in fact, find it very difficult to get enough for their every day needs. Such prices, for instance, as 15 cents each for the shortest grade of Killarney roses; $6 per 100 for sweet peas; $15 for carnations, and most other stock in proportion, fairly staggers the old-timers and puts everybody to the test in trying to satisfy their customers and at the same time come out whole. The end of the week saw a gleam of sunshine in the increasing size and greater frequency of shipments of sweet peas. It is hoped this improvement will continue. Cattleyas are the only flower that have declined in price, selling now at from 50 to 75 cents as against $1.50 to $2 two weeks ago. There are still a few American Beauties. Reports say these will not increase, but continue to get scarcer. Discussing prices and qualities of various kinds of stock at present appears useless, as there is so little coming in and so quickly grabbed up, irrespective of grade or condition, that no one thinks of complaining. The greatest demand is for the shorter or medium grades of all flowers, roses in particular, but not 10 per cent of the stock is what are called shorts, six to eight inches, and men pay 20 to 35 cents for roses, who never paid it before. One of the prominent retailers, in commenting on the situation, stated that people come in and price cut flowers and walk out again, not one in five making purchases. Others are continually rebelling against the high prices, laying the blame on the growers and commission men, and declaring they are killing the business. The growers say they are not getting more than from one-half to two-thirds of their usual crop, with greatly increased cost of production. In the commission houses, the help stand around half the day doing nothing, there being so little stock to handle. The great scarcity of cut flowers should help the sale of blooming and foliage plants. The cyclamens that did not make Christmas, are now coming nicely into flower, while Primulas obconica, malacoides and Townsendii are seen in all the shops. The growers of Easter plant stock are now busy with their various specialties. There will be quite a quantity of giganteum lilies, which are now up with foliage so spreading as to almost cover the pots. Rambler roses are beginning to start, and are being pruned and tied up in pyramids, globes, baskets and other fancy shapes. Hydrangeas, mostly French varieties, are a large item in nearly all the stocks. They are all now swelling their buds and will soon be in full growth. While April 3 is Easter Saturday, the stock must be ready for delivery March 29, which is a very early date and calls for a quick start and continuous growth to come in on time. There will be quite a few Azalea Hinodigiri, the Japanese dwarf small flower variety, and amoena. These are now grown by nurserymen for hardy outdoor planting, and while as yet somewhat limited in quantity, will in a few years be available in all sizes. The wholesale houses are very busy with Valentine novelties. A new tribe of cardboard Kiddies have been developed, which supporting vases for flowers can be filled to look quite artistic and suitable for valentines. There are also very pretty bisque figures with flower holders, that filled with a few choice blooms, will be sure to attract attention. There are few, if any, novelties in baskets, although there is a run on small vase baskets to be filled and used as valentines.

NOTES.

J. Otto Thilow has returned from his vacation trip to Australia. Floriculture has attained great heights in portions of that country, as in several private estates, Mr. Thilow said there were the finest gardens, lawns and greenhouse collections it has even been his pleasure to see. He took a number of photographs, which he will use to illustrate a lecture, "The Flora of Australia." He traveled 22,000 miles in two months.

Some of the retail florists believe it would be a good idea to inform the public through the advertising columns of the press, the reason for the present scarcity of flowers. Most people have little conception of the difficulties and risk there is in growing plants and cut flowers, and short talks on this subject would give them some idea of the many obstacles to be overcome.

Robert Craig changed his plans, or time of sailing to Porto Rico, to January 28, when he will have as a companion, F. M. Pennock, a resident of San Juan, who has been visiting in this city the past two weeks. Mr. Craig is going for a vacation and rest, and expects to be greatly benefited by a sojourn in this tropical clime.

Roger Peterson, of J. A. Peterson & Sons, Cincinnati, O., visited the trade the past week. They have handled a wonderful crop of cyclamen seed the past season. Their new begonia, Peerless, is the best they have yet sent out.

Th Leo Niessen Co. believes roses and carnations will be on the short side for a month to come. Sweet peas should become more plentiful. Cattleyas and white lilac are quantity stocks with them.

S. S. Pennock returned from Florida, January 17, and has again taken the helm at 1612 Ludlow street. Perhaps Alfred Barber, Cleveland, O., who conducts a chain of cut flower stores in Ohio, paid a flying visit to the city the past week.

UNFAVORABLE WEATHER REDUCES SUPPLY

Another severe cold wave during the past week further reduced the supply of stock, and also brought in some of it in a frozen condition. Yet, there seemed to be enough to supply the demand at the prevailing high prices. In the retail stores visited during the past week, indications pointed to very light business. In the past, and particularly since the war, we have heard and read much of the "new rich" and their extravagances. However they may be spending their surplus wealth, they do not seem to be plunging heavily in flowers. But thanks to our cousins across the water, we have a new phrase for another class, to-wit, the "new poor." Writing recently in the English Review, Austin Harrison refers to them in this way: "This class, our class, the salt of Great Britain, which has given the country most of its brains, art, soldiers and sailors, poetry, energy, industry and propulsion." An American writer, commenting upon Mr. Harrison's article, says: "This would cover the teachers, the literary men, the editors, the writers—those, in a word, on whom the country relies for its clear thinking and sane mental guidance; the inventors, the construction engineers, the skilled accountants, the clerks and all those submerged hundreds of thousands who work with their brains, and with skilled mental accomplishments acquired at the cost of many years training; together with those dependent on small incomes, which prior to the war, meant a safe but narrow independence, but which under crushing war-swollen expenses mean stark poverty. These are the "new poor." With this class which, in this city, is numbered in tens of thousands, luxuries are practically out of the question. Many of them are people of good taste and refinement who appreciate flowers and other beauties of nature, but the ever present and increasing terror of the high cost of living, restricts them almost to the necessaries of life. Again referring to the condition of the cut flower market, prices eased up a little the first of the past week, but the increasing cold so reduced the supply as to cause a rebound. American Beauty roses that started at the top rate of $75 per 100, advanced before the end of the week to $100 and $125. As the majority of buyers want tea roses of a lesser grade than specials, those grades brought in proportion, higher prices than the specials. A few of the carnations, Mrs. Ward, wholesaled for $15 per 100, but the common varieties—some of them very common—did not go above $10 and $12, and the reds did not clean up well at that. Just what is the cause of so many poor carnations, we are unable to state, but many now arriving, as to quality, are not so good as the productions of 20 years ago. On January 17, $20 per 100 was asked for Wards, but they hung fire. Cold and bleak weather is always unfavorable to the violet market, so they have been slow at 75 cents to $1 per 100 for the best. If any of our friends of other cities have fears that as a flower of commerce the orchid will soon be extinct, they should come to New York and be reassured. Cattleyas are about the only flowers that are plentiful and comparatively cheap. Lily of the valley has been slow at $10 and $12 per 100. The few Easter lilies that are on the market, bring 50 cents per flower, and all bulbous stock is bringing high prices. There is a fair supply of Paper White narcissus, but the supply of Golden Spurs is light. The supply of freesia is on the increase and moves well. All the tulips thus far noticed have short stems, but there should soon be an improvement in this respect. On account of the scarcity, mignonette, stevia, calendulas, wallflowers, cut flowers of the primulas and various other minor stocks have advanced to an importance not usually accorded them. Callas and sweet peas, if of good quality, sell well. Good gardenias bring $1 each wholesale. A limited quantity of cut acacia is on the market. There was a light fall of snow on the night of January 16, which, with the continued cold, tended to delay the arrivals of stock and further stiffen prices. No. 1 stock of such roses as Ophelia and Columbia has wholesaled up to $20 and $25 per 100.

January 19.—With continued, dark weather there is no prospect of an early increase in the supply of stock. Roses are taken as soon as they come in. Red carnations and violets are slow. Bulbous stock is moving freely, but the supply of yellow narcissus is light.

NOTES.

President Vincent, of the American Dahlia Society, was a visitor January 12, and attended the meeting of the florists' club. President Miller, of the S. A. F., President Henshaw, of the florists' club; John Young, secretary of both organizations; W. R. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn., and David Ward, of Queens, started for Chicago January 20 on the Twentieth Century Limited to attend the carnation convention.

R. W. Peterson, of J. A. Peterson & Sons, Westwood, Cincinnati, O., was a visitor at the meeting of the florists' club January 12. His begonia was awarded a first-class certificate.

John C. Odink, who for a number of years has been with Ferdinand Fleischman, Inc., is now manager and buyer for Frank Campbell's floral department, 1968 Broadway.

H. C. Riedel, of Riedel & Williams, intends to discontinue business for the present on account of his health. Mr. Riedel expects to resume business as soon as his health permits.

H. E. Froment, who will soon move his wholesale business from 148 West 28th street, has secured temporary quarters with Badgley & Bishop, 34 West 28th street.

The New York World of January 18 has a four column cartoon entitled, "Welcoming the New President of the Florist Club." Faces of seven members are shown.

The wholesale business of the late William Stuart Allen will be continued by his daughter, Mrs. Martin.

BURLAP is advancing.

RAFFIA prices are lower.

THE price of bags at Chicago, January 21, was $60.

CALIFORNIA seed crops are reported badly in need of rain.

A CARLOAD of No. 1 northern wheat was recently sold in Chicago at $3.50.

THE National Canners' Association meets at Cleveland, O., January 27-30.

NORFOLK, VA.—The Williams Seed Co. has opened a branch at Plant City, Fla.

TIMOTHY local demand shows some improvement, while the export demand has abated.

PHOSPHATE rock has advanced one dollar per ton. There is a big European demand.

ALBERT KOEHLER, of the American Bulb Co., Chicago, is planning a trip to Europe next month.

ROCKFORD, ILL.—The R. H. Shumway catalogue of 1920 carries low prices on onion seed.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—D. A. Sherwood, of the Sherwood Seed Co., is planning an eastern trip.

FIELD beans for table use must be slow of sale because people are not disposed to use cheap foods.

CALIFORNIA growers report that some large European seed contracts made in 1917 are not being taken.

JAPANESE seed growers are reported invading the Colorado seed growing districts around Rocky Ford.

SIOUX CITY, IA.—J. S. Michael, of the Sioux City Seed Co., is making a contracting trip through the east.

W. W. JOHNSON & SON, LTD., Boston, Eng., are celebrating the centenary of their business this year.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—The Llewellyn Bean Co. has combined with others, who have taken over the Armour elevator interests here.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.—The Germain Seed Co. reports one sale of 50,000 pounds of Germain's Proven Hairy Peruvian alfalfa seed.

SOME Japanese lily growers are predicting that the high prices of the past season will be maintained because of the scarcity of planting stock.

THE Cunard Line, it is reported, will start construction in February of a $30,000,000 terminal, on a 3,500-foot water-front in Weehawken, N. J.

DEPARTMENT of Agriculture specialists urge the sowing of all red clover possible. Good seed will command high prices for at least two years to come.

VISITED CHICAGO: A. J. Brown, of the Alfred J. Brown Seed Co., Grand Rapids, Mich.; L. W. Wheeler and Mrs. Wheeler, of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., Gilroy, Calif.; Harry W. Tracy and O. L. Coulter, representing C. C. Morse & Co., San Francisco, Calif.

THE Sherwood Seed Co., San Francisco, Calif., has taken over the growers of the Pacific Seed Growers Co., due to the retiring of the latter concern.

MRS. M. JOHANSEN, of the Johansen-Winslow Co., Elmonte, Calif., returned home from Chicago January 17. H. Winslow will continue the trip east.

PRODUCE dealers predict the price of potatoes will advance 25 per cent to $10.00 a barrel within two weeks, as result of blight which attacked the second crop.

THE British press and many merchants are showing animosity towards German business agents and German wares, but big bankers and manufacturers have no such qualms.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade, January 21, were as follows: Timothy, $10.00 to $14.00 per 100 pounds; March $15.10 bid; red clover, $45.00 to $56.00 per 100 pounds.

ONION SETS in the Chicago district remain about the same as last week, $3.50 for colors and $4.00 for whites, in carlots, prompt shipment. Contract prices with growers of 1920 crop have been advanced to $1.25 per bushel.

TOLEDO, O.—Clover was active, January 20, opening 25 cents higher than the closing price the previous day, with cash offered at $36.65, a gain of $3.35 during the week. Timothy was steady with cash, 1919, at $6.80, January $6.80, March $7.10, April $7.00 and May $6.90.

A BILL asking for a duty of four cents per pound on imported beans is now before congress, which, if passed, should encourage seed growers in various states. Michigan farmers are said to have made more profit last year on hay and grain crops per acre than on bean crops.

SEEDSMEN are urged to lend their cooperation in making the work of the United States School Garden Army more permanent and to increase its educational value during the coming year. This will only be realized, says John L. Randall, director of the movement, Washington, D. C., when gardening becomes a definite part of school work.

BIG SEED COMPANY NOW DISTRIBUTING NEW CATALOG.

AGGELER & MUSSER SEED COMPANY, OF LOS ANGELES ISSUES 27TH ANNUAL BOOK FINEST YET PUBLISHED.

The largest seed company in Western America is now distributing broadcast its 1920 seed catalog. The big Annual will exceed all previous ones and it is said is a complete course in agriculture, with several hundred interesting illustrations.

There is something of interest to the Home Seeker, the Stockman, Dairyman, Rancher, Orchardist, Poultryman and Gardener, for there are departments on Home, School, Field and Demonstration, Garden Work, More and Better Potatoes, correct tools and implements to use for best results. Marketing notes on each subject, telling how and where to market. Hints on poultry, spraying, fertilizing and the use of insecticides. The whole book of 112 pages is most interesting, entertaining and instructive—in reality it is several books in one, for it includes the important "Garden Manual." Over 1000 questions are answered.

The catalog is absolutely free, and should you have not already received it, write immediately to the Aggeler & Musser Seed Company, 620 South Spring Street, Los Angeles, California. Its city store is in the center of the shopping district and its location is a great convenience to rural customers. There is a special "Call" Department to accommodate customers in town for a short time on business. Orders left on arriving are ready when called for. The big Mail Order Department and General Offices are situated at the city store, while the General Milling, Cleaning and Warehousing is situated at the big Warehouse at Sixth and Alameda. Be sure to secure a copy at once. Write today.—Adv't.

Red Clover.

Rather large arrivals of imported red clover seed are reported at New York, but very little of this seed is being offered from Europe at this time, and large seed importers believe that the surplus stocks of European seed are nearly exhausted. There is no export demand for red clover because this country has none to spare at a price that could compete with the lower prices that have been prevailing for Italian seed.

Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Baltimore

Charles H. Grakelow, one of the most progressive members of the trade in Philadelphia, Pa., found time to attend the January meeting on the above organization and assist in making it one of the best ever held. In his very interesting address, he brought out the importance of educating the public to the fact that flowers were not expensive, a lesson which many a retailer needed to learn. He dwelt at considerable length on the matter of cooperation between the growers, wholesalers and retailers in every undertaking wherein the advancement of the trade was concerned. Several instances of this spirit were given, notably that of delivering packages of a brother florist in the machine of another, who may have several for the same locality, if not the same house. Also, supplying material needed by another to finish a rush order, and where stock could not be obtained in time from regular sources. Mr. Grakelow's plan is to eliminate all "cut-throat" competition, and if his ideas were followed out, the business would stand on a much higher plane. Mayor Broenning was another guest, and was presented with a life membership in the club. The Reverend Houck made the closing address, and summarized what had been emphasized by the previous speakers, and suggested a theme that was closest to the heart and life, that of "remembrance of God, brought about by the handling of God's creations, the flowers." The ladies were present and graced the splendor of the occasion and aided in bringing the attendance to the number of 125.

Announcement was made that the club now has a representative on the board of directors of the Society of American Florists by affiliation and President Ekas is to attend the first meeting in Cleveland, January 24. The club is now developing into one of the most wide-awake organizations in the city and it behooves all connected with the trade in any way to enroll as soon as possible and enjoy the benefits.

G., JR.

Lancaster County Florists' Association.

The regular meeting of this association was held in the chamber of commerce rooms, Lancaster, Pa., January 15, with a goodly number of the members present with their wives and friends. For visitors we had with us D. J. Keohane, of the H. F. Michell Co.; Dennis Connor, of the Lord & Burnham Co.; T. J. Nolan, of the King Construction Co., and Edward Reid and his brother, from Philadelphia, all of whom made short addresses, Mr. Reid dwelling on the fact that the commission houses are still doing business on the old 15 per cent basis, in spite of the fact that all their expenses have gone upward.

The following officers were elected to serve for the year 1920: W. B. Girvin, of Leola, president; B. F. Barr, vice-president; Albert M. Herr, secretary; H. K. Rohrer, treasurer, all of Lancaster.

The question of increasing the dues was brought up and final action will be had at the February meeting.

A letter was read from the Fort Sheridan Recall, asking that Sunday, January 25, be set aside as a day to wear a rose in honor of the Army Nurses' Corps. After considerable discussion it was left to the secretary to write, asking that the date be changed to some day in March instead, as a more likely date to secure universal observance of the custom.

P. W. DeHertogh gave an illustrated lecture on "Holland," and being a native of that country and a much traveled man, the lecture was a little beyond the ordinary and much appreciated.

An effort will be made to have as many of the association as possible attend the next meeting of the Philadelphia Florists' Club.

ALBERT M. HERR, Sec'y.

JENNINGS LODGE, ORE.—The range of Karl Stocker, near here, recently suffered damage to the extent of $3,500, when glass gave way under weight of heavy snow.

BOISE, IDAHO.—The Boise Floral Co. has been enjoying excellent business, with the holiday trade about 25 per cent greater than a year ago, and prices higher. Cut flowers have been plentiful, and there has been a better demand for plants than in former years.

VAUGHAN'S INTERNATIONAL PANSIES

Vaughan's International Pansy Mixture was first offered by us in 1889. We import from all the best European sources. Each year has added to the quality of its flowers and variety of its colors. We buy every year novelties of known merit to improve the mixture; it is always complete, always the latest and always the best mixture. We add to all Pansy Mixtures which we now buy more than 50 per cent of the choicest named kinds obtainable, each in correct proportion. This is one of the Specialties that has established the reputation of Vaughan's Flower Seeds, and one which we maintain most carefully.

Trade pkt., 50c; ⅛ oz., $1.50; ½ oz., $5.00; oz., $10.00.

Vaughan's Giant Pansy Mixture

Embraces, besides all the separate shades and colors, five special strains not listed elsewhere, and which can only be had in this and our International Mixture. This mixture includes the richest reds, coppers and bronzes, together with the most delicate rose and pink shadings, all the distinct colors of Trimardeau and the splendid, Cassier strain.

Trade pkt., 50c; ⅛ oz., 75c; oz. $5.00; ¼ lb. $18.00.

Vaughan's Cut Flower Mixture

This mixture is put up by ourselves and contains mostly light colored sorts. We have sold this mixture for several seasons to some of our Chicago cut flower growers, who have realized big returns from the sale of flowers. Pansies are as easily grown as violets, require less care and bring better results.

Trade pkt., 25c; ⅛ oz., 60c; oz., $4.00.

New Early-Flowering Giant Pansies

The new strain produces its giant flowers about four weeks earlier than other known types. In March, when the old type pansies hardly show any buds the plants of the new strain bore from 3 to 5 of their giant flowers.

Early Flowering Giant White, Yellow, Light Blue, Dark Blue and Mixed (Four Colors). Trade pkt., (500 seeds) 25c; ⅛ oz., 60c; oz., $4.00.

Vegetable Growers' Association of America.

E. A. Dunbar, Ashtabula, O., President; Louis F. Miller, Toledo, O., Vice-President; S. W. Severance, Louisville, Ky., Secretary; H. J. Cheney, Grand Rapids, Mich., Treas. Next annual convention September 1920.

SEATTLE, WASH.—Stuber & Richards are making extensive changes in their range at Kent and installing new benches for early tomatoes.—H. M.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—Two new vegetables have been propagated at the Missouri botanical garden. One has been named the "arracacha," which resembles a sweet potato, and the other the "dasheen," which tastes much like a cauliflower. Both are said to be about equal in food value to a potato.

Sweet Potatoes.

In point of production, the sweet potato crop ranks high among food staples in the south and southwest, according to the government Market Reporter. The December estimate showed 103,579,000 bushels, which is from one-third to one-fourth the usual crop of white potatoes. It is about three times the cabbage crop, and seven times the crop of onions or field beans.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, Jan. 20.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, $6.00 to $8.00; celery, Michigan, square box, $1.75 to $2.00; leaf lettuce, per tomato box, 35 to 40 cents; radishes, per dozen bunches, 90 cents; tomatoes, per pound, 15 to 40 cents.

New York, Jan. 17.—Celery, per crate, $2.00 to $7.00; cucumbers, per dozen, $1.00 to $3.00; mushrooms, 75 cents to $2.25 per three pound basket; tomatoes, per pound, 5 to 40 cents; lettuce, per dozen, 50 cents to $1.00; radishes, per 100 bunches, $2.00 to $6.00.

Sweet Potato Profits.

That sweet potatoes are capable of being made a very profitable crop is indicated by yields obtained in various parts of Missouri this year. The demand for sweet potatoes is increasing fast, and with the knowledge of how to store them successfully through the winter, the consumption will still further increase. Production is not keeping up with the increased demand in the middle west, since many growers believe that the sweet potato is strictly a southern crop. Yet on the right soil, and with proper handling, just as good yields and better prices can be obtained in the lower corn belt as in the south. Yields ranging from 200 to 600 bushels per acre were obtained from several varieties grown on the University of Missouri College of Agriculture farm this year, says J. T. Rosa, Jr.

Probably the texture of the soil is most important for sweet potatoes, a sandy or even a gravelly loam being superior. But the black silt loams will also grow good sweet potatoes if well drained. Excessive amounts of decaying organic matter in the soil, or excess moisture, cause the sweet potato to make tremendous vine growth without corresponding tuber production. A good feature of the sweet potato crop is its ability to withstand dry weather in the middle of the growing season. The main points to consider in growing sweet potatoes are: Growing the plants, setting in the field, and harvesting. About three bushels of small potatoes or "seed" are needed to produce the 10,000 plants required to set an acre. Mild hotbeds covered with glass sash or cloth covers provide the right conditions for plant production. For setting plants in the field on a large scale, a transplanting machine drawn by two horses should be used. Small patches can easily be set by hand. In sections where sweet potatoes have been grown for some time, it is necessary to control the black rot and other diseases. Methods for seed treatment to control diseases of the sweet potato can be obtained from the horticultural department of the college at Columbia.

Among the varieties found most satisfactory in the college tests, and tests in other parts of the state, are: Nancy Hall, which is a good yielder and a high quality potato; Big Stem Jersey and Southern Queen. A new variety, Porto Rico Yam, which was tested in Missouri this year for the first time, has yielded quite well, and proves to be of the highest eating quality, being sweet and having a rich salmon-colored flesh.

The Smoke Nuisance.

In our immediate vicinity, there is an exceedingly interesting legal battle going on between greenhouse men and large industrial concerns and railroad companies. The facts in the case are these: The greenhouse men were first to occupy the ground, and before the encroachments of the industrial plants were well located. But owing to excellent railroad facilities and general advantages, large manufacturing plants gradually established themselves so near to the greenhouse areas as to cause great damage by their constant streams of dense smoke. Among these establishments is one steel plant, with dozens of stacks in action day and night. One makes steel castings for railroad car wheels, and the latest comer is an immense round house for a large railroad company. This latest one is probably the greatest offender as it delivers its smoke at a very low elevation, thereby depositing all its impurities in close range. The growers afflicted have tried washing their glass, but this affords very little relief as in a few weeks, the glass is covered as bad as ever. Such washing is expensive at best. The question at issue is: Must these growers submit to this smoke nuisance or are they entitled to legal redress? The growers contend that they are at least entitled to sufficient damage to remove their plants to other parts, while the industrials, admitting their guilt, claim that the smoke nuisance is general, and none is individually to blame. The writer is one of the experts to appear in court on behalf of the growers and, of course, the outcome is of great interest; however, this shows that greenhouse men should exercise great care in locating.

"Hamburg Late Pink" Chrysanthemum

Picture was taken Dec. 28, 1919, and will give a good idea of what "Hamburg Late Pink" looks like when grown to single stems and planted six inches each way.

"Hamburg Late Pink" is an improved late pink Maud Dean, having more petals, and if grown for late will hardly ever show an open center.

The average grower of chrysanthemums must have varieties which are easy to handle, and from which he can cut as near 100% of perfect blooms as possible. "Hamburg Late Pink" has been grown for the last four years, and produces a very high proportion of good flowers. It is not an exhibition variety, but, for late pink, one of the best for commercial purposes. It can be had in bloom the latter part of November by taking an early bud, but some of the flowers will show open centers; but by selecting late buds, after October 1st, most of the flowers are cut during December, and would advise to select late buds, as the later buds will hardly ever show an open center, and some flowers can be had even in January.

Keeping qualities are excellent, and where a graceful pink flower is wanted, "Hamburg Late Pink" cannot be surpassed.

"Hamburg Late Pink" will be disseminated in the spring of 1920. Plants will be ready March 1st, 1920, and all orders will be filled in rotation.

"X" Liquid May Save You Thousands of Dollars in an Emergency

SUPPOSE you suddenly discover that an unusual cold spell has cracked the heating boiler and it leaks badly!

Do you think it necessary to shut off the heat and risk enormous damage to the contents of the greenhouse?

Not at all!

"X" Liquid will repair any leaky or cracked boiler in half an hour. It will do a job that would take two workmen a week.

"X" Liquid Will Do a $200 Repair Job for $10.

It is not necessary to locate the leaks or cracks or know how many there are.

The action of "X" is entirely automatic. When poured into the boiler it mixes with the water and soon gets to every break in the metal. It flows through—strikes the air—and then hardens right in the hole. This stops the leak or crack. The heat in the water then sets this repair, making it as PERMANENT and as SURE as any welding job. In fact, where welding won't hold—as on cast-iron sections—"X" Liquid makes a perfect repair.

Makes Boilers Rust-proof and Scale-proof. Saves Coal.

It is a remarkable fact that the same "X" Liquid used for repairing leaks or cracks will also eliminate rust and prevent scale from forming on the walls. This means greater heating efficiency with less coal.

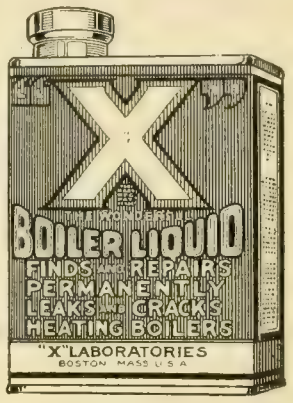
"X" contains no cement, powder or other injurious ingredients. It is an absolute liquid, a scientific process for making boilers LEAK-PROOF, RUST-PROOF and SCALE-PROOF. Beware of inferior imitations which are trading on the reputation of the genuine "X" Liquid.

A Strong Guarantee!

You take no chances in using "X" Liquid. It is unconditionally guaranteed to make good. If it fails, you get a new can—or your money back.

But your greatest guarantee of the value of "X" is the fact that it is used, sold and recommended by 99 per cent of the manufacturers of boilers and radiators. It is used by the United States Government.

If your boiler cracks or leaks this winter, you don't have to worry about your greenery—if you keep "X" Liquid handy. You can do the repair job yourself easily.



Get "X" Liquid from your steam-fitter, or we will ship, charges prepaid, on receipt of price.

The Business Meetings.

The business meetings of the American Carnation Society were opened at the Hotel La Salle, Chicago, the evening of January 21, and were well attended throughout. Vice-president C. W. Johnson introduced President Waters of the Chicago Florists' Club, who warmly welcomed the visitors, and turned the meeting over to President Dorner of the American Carnation Society for the work of the evening. President Dorner then presented his address, which was followed by the reports of Secretary Baur and Treasurer Dorner. These reports and the president's address will be found in our last issue. The president apologized for the absence of Treasurer Dorner on account of the illness of their mother, and on the motion of John H. Dunlop, a telegram of sympathy was dispatched to the family at Lafayette, Ind. William F. Gude then presented the claims of Washington, D. C., for the next convention, H. W. Sheppard spoke for Cincinnati, O., and S. J. Goddard, of Framingham ,Mass., named Hartford, Conn. The nomination of officers and judges followed. Dr. P. A. Lehenbauer, of the department of floriculture of the University of Illinois, at Urbana, then read his excellent paper on "Carnation Stem Rot and Its Control." After some comments on this address, J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., P. J. Breitmeyer, of Detroit, Mich., and others discussed the proposed new organization of growers.

On re-assembling the following day, the reports of committees were presented, and that on "Grading Carnations," which will be found elsewhere in this issue, brought out considerable discussion, but no decision was arrived at. The committee, however, was continued and will present a further report at the next meeting. W. N. Rudd spoke at length on the merits of Dr. Lehenbauer's address of the previous evening, and John H. Dunlop reported for the committee on the president's address and secretary's report and most of their recommendations were adopted. A wider distribution of the premium list was recommended, and on account of the increasing expenses, the officers were instructed to arrange for an advance of the dues to $3.00 per annum. Mrs. Ella Grant Wilson, of Cleveland, O., made a brief address on "Plant Protection," that is, the rights of the originators of varieties in their products, and a committee was appointed to investigate this matter and report at the next meeting.

Election of Officers.

Washington, D. C., was chosen for the next meeting and officers for the ensuing year elected as follows: C. W. Johnson, Chicago, president; J. Grillbortzer, Washington, D. C., vice-president; A. F. J. Baur, Indianapolis, Ind., secretary; Fred Dorner, Lafayette, Ind., treasurer; Charles S. Strout, Biddeford, Me., director for five years; S. J. Goddard, Framingham, Mass., director for two years, to fill the unexpired term of A. A. Pembroke, resigned; John H. Dunlop, Toronto, Ont., and Ernest Saunders, Lewiston, Me., judges.

Committees to prepare memorial of deceased members and final resolutions were then appointed and instructed to report at the banquet in the evening.

The banquet was held in the grand ballroom of the hotel Thursday evening, the tables being handsomely decorated with carnations. The number participating exceeded 300. A delightful musical programme was provided, which included the singing of "Say It With Flowers," by Albert Von Tilzer, the author of the song. When coffee was served, President Waters of the local club addressed the gathering, introducing Willis N. Rudd as toastmaster, who brought out some excellent addresses, the list of speakers including President Dorner and President-elect Johnson of the American Carnation Society, President A. L. Miller of the Society of American Florists, J. F. Ammann, Major P. F. O'Keefe, Chas. H. Grakelow, P. J. Breitmeyer, C. Englemann and others.

A grand lot of carnation blooms from the Fred Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette, Ind., unfortunately arrived too late for consideration in the judging, but made a fine addition to the general display.

Resolutions of Condolence.

It is with supreme regret that your committee meets to voice its sentiments upon the sad occasion of the passing from this life of our esteemed and valued fellow members Frank A. Friedley, Robert Montgomery, Henry Rohrer and Fred C. Weber.

In the midst of our success, we are by such instances as this, brought face to face with the stern realities of life. We would not carry in our memories the last act of the grim reaper, nor would we voice our regrets at the loss of the honored ones we cannot replace, but rather would we offer up our grateful thanksgiving in having been permitted to enjoy the goodfellowship, the wise counsel and the well known spirit of fairness that radiated from the departed ones during life.

Such thoughts will, we hope, return to the benefit of our society the exalted and elevated influence so appreciated while they were with us. Memories such as these, will keep forever green the privilege which was ours in having such men in our circle, and so Sirs, we repeat our sentiments of thanksgiving for the bright memory of their many hours of success and devotion, rather than the memory of the seeming tragedy of the closing of the books of their earthly existence.

CHARLES S. STROUT,
W. W. COLES,
F. C. W. BROWN,
Committee.

Final Resolutions.

The committee on final resolutions presented its report as follows at the banquet held at the Hotel La Salle, Thursday evening:

Your committee on final resolutions at this, the twenty-ninth annual convention of the American Carnation Society, begs to report as follows:

That the hearty thanks of this society be hereby tendered to the Chicago Florists' Club for the very ample and satisfactory manner in which the arrangements for the exhibition were carried out; for the entertainment tendered the visiting ladies; for the tea served each afternoon, and to all who so courteously assisted in making the stay of the visitors both pleasant and profitable.

To the Hotel La Salle for the excellent service accorded the members, for the banquet hall in which the exhibition was held, for the care exercised in maintaining a proper temperature, so that at the close of the exhibition the blooms were in perfect condition, scarcely a flower in the numerous exhibits showing any trace of wilting.

To the press of Chicago for the numerous and liberal notices pertaining to the convention.

To the Retail Florists' Association of Chicago for the excellent taste displayed in arranging the exhibits on the last day of the convention.

Therefore, be it resolved that this society hereby expresses its most sincere thanks to these several organizations for the care exercised and pains taken to bring to a successful completion this convention of the American Carnation Society, and that these resolutions be incorporated in the minutes of the society.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Grading Carnations.

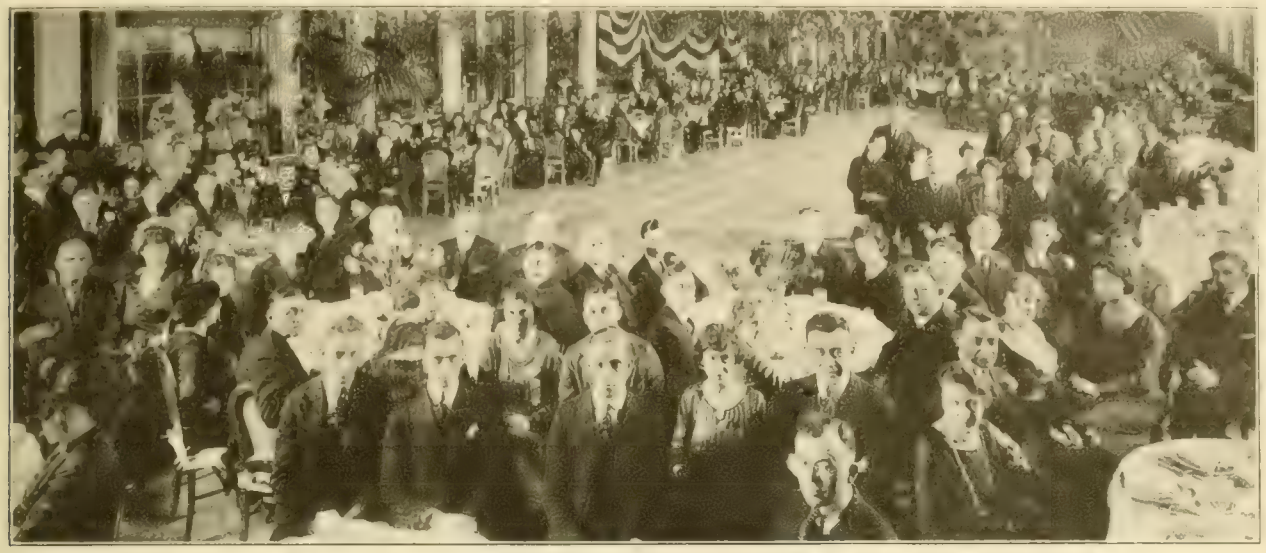
The following is the report of the committee on grading carnations presented at the Chicago convention of the American Carnation Society, January 22, 1920:

There are many obstacles that stand in the way of the recommendation of a system for grading carnation blooms that would be acceptable to all sections of the country.

First, and foremost, is the wide variation of climatic conditions throughout the country. In the more favored sections, where, in winter, bright days accompanied with moderate weather are the rule rather than the exception, a very much better quality of flower and stem can be produced than what is possible in mid-winter in localities that have dark, cloudy days during the greater part of the time. Due in part to this condition, growers of one section, grow as their standards, varieties that cannot be produced profitably in other sections,. Consequently, the highest grade blooms of some markets do not compare favorably with those of others and, though there may be growers in all sections whose products stand out above all others, as a general rule, the carnation grower's stock does not average up on the same even plane as the rose grower.

Another factor that must be considered, is that there are a number of growers who grow only their own seedlings, which having some special quality of color or size, are graded above the standard varieties.

Taking the aforementioned facts into consideration, together with investigations of the systems now in use in the different markets of the country, we would suggest the following system as a basis for the members' consideration.



BANQUET AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY, HOTEL LA SALLE, CHICAGO, JANUARY 22.

Carnation Stem Rot and its Control.

Paper by Dr. P. A. Lehenbauer, division of floriculture, University of Illinois, Urbana, read at the Chicago convention of the American Carnation Society, January 21.

In discussing the problem of the control of carnation stem rot, I shall take the liberty to include a discussion of several other soil diseases. I am doing this for a particular reason. These several soil diseases attacking other horticultural crops are similar, in many respects, to carnation stem rot. Within the last few years, plant pathologists have given them much attention, and have carried on much investigational study. As a consequence, many important facts have been discovered, which are of value in an attempt to control these soil diseases. Some of these discoveries, I believe, are applicable to carnation stem rot.

In a recent article in one of our trade papers, I discussed briefly the control of carnation stem rot, in the light of some experimental work carried out in the division of floriculture at Urbana, Illinois. In bringing to your attention, today, some facts concerning several other diseases, I hope to give you additional evidence in support of the facts and conclusions given you in this article, and in our recent bulletin from Urbana. First, however, permit me to discuss, somewhat in detail, the disease of carnations. I presume that all of you are familiar with the disease, and that you know of the losses which may result. Dr. Peltier, who made a study of the disease at Urbana, ascertained by means of a questionnaire sent to florists in Illinois, that the percentage of loss varies from 0.1 to 20 per cent. with an average of 2.2 per cent in the greenhouse, and an average of 3.25 per cent in the field.

In the houses at the Illinois experiment station, the loss averaged nearly two per cent for a period of five years preceding 1917. In a recent letter from a large grower, the writer says that in 1918 he lost from 30 to 35 per cent of his plants in the field, and later, after benching, he lost an additional 34 per cent. The percentage of loss varied widely with the varieties, in one variety there being practically no loss, while in other varieties the percentage of loss was from 50 to 90 per cent. This fact is significant, but more significant is the fact that, this year, this grower lost practically no plants from the disease.

Another large grower in another section of the country writes me that last year he lost only about 100 plants out of 20,000, a loss of only five-tenths of one per cent. However, he says that some seasons his loss is as high as 10 per cent. This important fact of the variations in percentage of loss from year to year I will mention again and comment on at greater length further on. Suffice to say at present that carnation stem rot is a serious disease. I believe that if we had data from all sections of the country, showing the average losses over a period of years, we would find justification in the statement that stem rot is the most serious disease of the carnation and that this disease needs, above all else, a most thorough study.

A study of the disease was begun at the Illinois experiment station several years ago. We devoted some time to the study of the cause of the disease, and later carried on some experimental work on methods of control. Our two bulletins on the subject contain many facts, as well as experimental data of importance. I am not minimizing the work of my predecessor when I make the confession that, thus far, only a beginning has been made, only a preliminary study. I am aware that much more careful work must be done to meet the requirements of the florists. The most difficult portion is still to be done. We still need to know more in order to make control a practical possibility. Control or eradication, of course, is our ultimate goal. The work done at Urbana, and recorded in the two Illinois bulletins, indicates that control of the disease is not a hopeless task, and that, although seeming difficult at present, we may still hope that an efficient remedy is forthcoming for the carnation grower.

FUNGUS THE CAUSE.

It is definitely known that the cause of carnation stem rot is a fungus. This fungus has been isolated many times, identified and studied in pure culture. The important fact for our discussion at present is that this fungus lives normally in the soil. So far as is known, practically all tillable soils harbor the fungus. It has been found in practically every state of the Union, and in widely different types of soils. It is very probable that every greenhouse contains it. In the soil, it may live either on dead organic matter or on weeds and other plants. This is an important fact regarding the habits of the causal fungus. It seems to live in the soil as a saprophyte; that is, it gets its nourishment from lifeless organic materials, such as dead roots and other parts of plants, but when the opportunity of a favorable host and a favorable environment is present it becomes a parasite. As a parasite, it seems to be able to attack and live on nearly any form of plant.

Another important fact in the life history of the fungus is, that it does not attack the leaves or upper portions of the plant, but enters the plant at the crown—that is, it attacks the stem at a point just below or just above the surface of the soil. This fact, together with the one mentioned above, that the fungus is found in practically all soils, must be kept in mind in any attempt to control the disease.

USUAL CONTROLS NOT EFFECTIVE.

In attempting to control a plant disease, such as carnation stem rot, one of several methods naturally is thought of. One is to spray the plants with some poisonous material, which will either destroy the fungus or leave a deposit of this poison so that when the fungus spore begins to germinate, it will soon be killed. This method is used often and proves very successful in the case of many diseases. But spraying is not efficient in the case of carnation stem rot. This is because the fungus does not make its growth on the leaves. It does not produce spores, which drift about in the air, fall upon the leaves, germinate and grow, as is true of many other diseases. The fungus lives in the soil and attacks only the plant stem at its base near the surface of the soil. Spraying the tops of the plants is, therefore, useless.

The second method of control which suggests itself is to treat the soil. Since the organism lives in the soil, it is but natural to suppose that if we can find some disinfectant which when applied to soil will destroy the parasite, the problem is solved. Many experiments have been conducted along this line. Several investigators have recommended the application of formalin to soil in order to control certain diseases; others have recommended lime. A great variety of substances have been tested, both in the field and in greenhouses, such as iron sulphate, creosote, carbolic acid, naphthalene and bleaching powder, in order to rid soils of certain fungi. On the whole, the reports are contradictory and inconclusive. At the Illinois station, extensive tests were made with sulphuric acid, lime, Bordeaux mixture, copper sulfate and formalin, but none of these substances proved efficient in controlling carnation stem rot.

STERILIZATION NOT FULLY SUCCESSFUL.

Sterilizing the soil by means of steam is recommended often, and this method is efficient in the case of certain diseases. There is no question that the stem rot organism can be destroyed in soil by means of steam sterilization. But it is questionable whether we can control the disease in our greenhouses by this method. It may be possible to sterilize all the soil before the benches are filled and planted to carnations. However, the soil of the field contains the fungus, and when we set the plants into the benches, some soil necessarily must adhere to the roots of the plants. The soil on the roots, be it only a small quantity, may contain the fungus, and this small quantity of soil on the roots, therefore, will reinoculate the sterile soil in our benches. There is still another fact we must keep in mind. The fungus may penetrate the stem of the plant while the latter is still in the field. For a time this is not noticeable. A plant artificially inoculated at the base of the stem, I have found, may live for a month and not show any effects, and then very quickly begin to wilt and die. Plants brought from the field may appear healthy, but when set into the bench of sterile soil, die after a short time from stem rot. It is quite possible that such plants were infected while growing in the field. Sterilizing the soil, therefore, is not entirely a successful method of control.

REGULATING ENVIRONMENTS.

The third method of attack of the problem of control appears somewhat more promising. It lies in the regulations of the environmental conditions in such a way that the host is kept at its optimum vigor, while the activity of the parasite is reduced. In other words, it consists in regulating the temperature, moisture and air in such a way to resist the fungus or the fungus is not strong enough to attack the plant. To the practical grower, environmental conditions are usually considered as all important. That there is a correlation between climatic conditions and plant diseases is obvious to most of us. The practical plant grower has always been inclined to blame the weather for his mildews and his rusts. The scientific plant pathologist, on the other hand, has been in the habit of giving the influence of the weather only a passing interest; he has been devoting most of his energy to the study of the causal organism. A study of both is essential if we are to be successful in the control of diseases.

Let me now illustrate this correlation between weather and disease. Also note, if you please, how observations in the field or in the greenhouse and data, that either the plant is strong enough derived from carefully planned experiments in the laboratory, supplement each other. To do this, I shall leave, for the time being, the disease under discussion, carnation stem rot, and call your attention to several diseases of field crops. In the state of Wisconsin, two destructive diseases are the late blight of the potato and the yellow disease of cabbage. These two diseases are caused by two different organisms, but both living in the soil. During the summers of 1915 and 1916, the plant pathologists at the Wisconsin station made field observations on these two diseases, with the hope of determining the factors involved in the prevalence of troubles. They report that "in 1915 the late blight fungus destroyed some millions of dollars' worth of potatoes with the worst outbreak for at least a decade. As a result, almost every lot of seed potatoes in the state carried the infection to the fields of 1916" (this fungus lives on, and is carried from one season to the next by the potato tuber), yet there was so little of the disease in 1916 "that the expert mycologist had to search the potato fields of the state with a magnifying glass to find a single incipient development of the disease." The year 1915 "was cool and moist," the year 1916 "exceptionally hot and dry." Note, if you please, the report of the cabbage disease of the same two years. In 1915, "alongside the sick potato fields, the cabbage crop was everywhere vigorous, even on the worst fusarium 'sick' soil, whereas, in 1916, these same cabbage fields were swept by the yellows disease, as if by fire." What is the explanation? The season of 1915 was cool and moist; the potato fungus destroyed some millions of dollars' worth of potatoes; the cabbage disease was harmless. The season of 1916 was hot and dry; the potato disease then was harmless, but the cabbage disease was very destructive. There is no question about the fungus parasites having been present in the fields during both seasons. But the "weather" was different during the two seasons. During one season, the weather was favorable for the cabbage disease, hot and dry; during the other, it was favorable for the potato disease, cool and moist.

Weather, of course, is a complex of several individual environmental conditions. It is the product or sum total of temperature, humidity, light, carbondioxide, air movement, etc. So when we say that the prevalence of a certain disease is due to, or influenced by, the weather, we do not know if the sum total of the conditions which constitute weather is responsible, or if any one condition is to blame. In other words, we may be certain that a disease has a relation to weather, but we are not certain if it is temperature or humidity or some other condition which produces the result. Yet it is important that we should know if we are to work out a successful method of control. This, especially, is true of diseases in greenhouses, for in the greenhouse we control, in large measure, the so-called weather.

EXPERIMENTS IN SOIL CONDITIONS.

We probably are in the habit of thinking of the soil apart from or separate from the air above soil. But in the soil we also have certain conditions of temperature, moisture, aeration, etc. The fungus lives in the soil, and the conditions in the soil constitute the environment of the fungus, as well as for the root of the plant, just as the conditions of temperature, moisture, etc., constitute the environment of the plant above soil.

Let us now return to a discussion of the two soil diseases mentioned above which attack the potato and the cabbage. You recall that one summer was cool and moist, the cabbage fusarium was harmless; the next summer was hot and dry, the cabbage fusarium this season was very destructive. From these field observations, and data of two years on both the cabbage and the potato disease, there was much evidence that the two principal factors concerned in the prevalence of the diseases were soil temperature and soil moisture. On this assumption, experimental studies were begun at the Wisconsin station to determine if this belief was correct. For such experimental work, specially devised apparatus is necessary, for in order to test thoroughly whether either temperature or soil moisture is to blame, we must be able to vary either of these conditions while all other conditions of the environment are kept uniform. In other words, we must be able to control all the conditions, and be able to vary any one at will, to the total exclusion of variability in all others.

At the Wisconsin station, such an attempt was made and apparatus set up for this purpose. The work is still in progress, but sufficient data are at hand to show that soil temperature is a very important factor in the prevalence of these diseases. Let me quote from the report on the cabbage yellows. The author says, "The appearance of the characteristic symptoms is dependent upon a temperature of 17-22° C. (62.6-71.6° F.) or above, lower temperatures preventing the occurrence of the disease. Temperatures of 12-16° C. (53.6-60.8° F.), under controlled conditions, prevented the occurrence of the trouble in the greenhouse."

Let me call your attention to another soil disease, studied in a similar way, in Wisconsin. In a recent report of this experimental work under controlled conditions, on the root-rot of tobacco, the authors say: "The temperature of the soil is undoubtedly the most important factor determining the extent of the root rot of tobacco, other factors being equal. The most favorable temperature for the disease ranges from 17° C. (62.6° F.) to 23° C. (73.4° F.). Below 15° C. (59° F.) the disease is less marked, and above 26° C. (78.8° F.) the severity is gradually reduced, until at about 29° C. (84.2° F.) or 30° C. (86° F.) it has little or no influence. At 32° C. (89.6° F.) practically no infection occurs even in the most heavily infested soils. Soil temperature records in the field for four seasons indicate that the occurrence of the disease under practical conditions is determined primarily by soil temperature."

Another investigator working on flax wilt, which also is a soil disease, says that "using badly infected soil, the flax developed normally when the soil temperature was held continually below 15° C. (59° F.), but if the temperature rose for even one day above 16° C. (60.8° F.) infection occurred, and the wilt followed." Several other illustrations could be given, but the above suffice to show the point I wish to emphasize—namely, that there is a definite relation between soil temperature and the prevalence of the disease. A certain maximum range of soil temperature seems to be necessary; when the temperature is above this range, the parasite becomes destructive; when below, it loses its power and lives only as a harmless saprophyte.

You will note that the illustrations given above are all of diseases of field crops. In the field, of course, the soil temperature is not under our control. Let us now return to the carnation, a plant which is grown, for the greater part of the time at any rate, in the greenhouse. Does the same relation hold between soil temperature and the prevalence of stem rot? At the Illinois station we followed up the relation of environmental factors to stem rot, and we also came to the conclusion that temperature is the important factor in the prevalence of this disease. You, no doubt, know of our results and conclusions, from reading the trade papers. If you care to have the details, the bulletin can be had free by writing to Urbana for it. We found that the stem rot organism grows normally at high temperature; the carnation is grown at a relatively low temperature. Infection occurs only when the soil temperature approaches the optimum temperature for the fungus. Unfortunately, we were not equipped, while this work was in progress, to get these temperatures accurately. The reason is that we were concerned with an attempt to find if the disease could be controlled by some other means, such as soil disinfectants, soil sterilization, etc. In this attempt, we found a negative answer, but, on the other hand, as a result of the work, we have been assured that temperature is a very important factor in the prevalence of the disease. It is quite probable that what seems to be true of the diseases of cabbage, potato, tobacco and flax is also true of carnation stem rot.

Our duty now is to verify this and support the work by means of carefully planned experiments. Such experiments involve the construction of special apparatus by means of which we can control soil temperature, soil moisture and other conditions. The devising and building of such apparatus is slow and costly, but I feel that the expense and effort will be worth while and bring results that are of value.

The probability that we are going in the right direction in our analysis of these soil diseases I might verify by means of statements of practical growers. Only a very short time ago, I had a letter from a grower of sweet peas. He had trouble with root rot, and in writing me, this is what he said: "The trouble occurs when the seed has been sown in August; if the same seed is sown in October, the trouble does not occur." Doesn't this suggest a temperature relation? I might give you similar statements from letters concerning carnation stem rot, were it not for the fact that my paper is already too long. What then is the application of our discussion? If we conclude definitely that our method of control lies in the control of soil temperature, will this solve our problem? Is the method practicable?

During the cold months, we can control the temperature of our greenhouses readily enough. But during the warm months of early fall, the problem is not so simple. However, I believe that we shall solve this difficulty, in a measure at least. Just as we are hoping to solve the temperature relation, so we must also solve another condition which influences growth of both plant and fungus. I refer to the relation of soil moisture to plants and fungus. Our knowledge along this line is less complete; however, we have some experimental data which are suggestive. It has been found at Wisconsin, for instance, in the case of the tobacco root rot to which I referred above, that "increasing the moisture content of the soil up to three-fourths of its water-holding capacity does not materially increase root rot. Saturated soils are, however, considerably more favorable for the disease than unsaturated ones." At the Illinois station we also found evidence that losses from carnation stem rot were high when the soil moisture was high. We did not find that the losses were low when the soil moisture was low, but I am convinced that this was due to our method. All the experiments were performed at relatively high temperatures, and high temperatures, we said above, are conducive to infection. I believe that infection takes place if the soil moisture is high; if, however, the soil moisture is low, less infection takes place. It is quite likely that the fungus is active over a certain range of soil moisture and when the moisture content of the soil is below this range, other conditions being uniform, infection is less likely to occur.

As I said above, we have not yet much data to substantiate this view. Our problem, of course, is to determine at what soil saturation infection takes place. This must be done by means of well-planned experiments and apparatus especially constructed for the work. When we are able to say at what range of temperature and in what range of soil saturation infection can take place, we can, I believe, shift either one or both of these conditions in our greenhouses in such a way that control of the disease is possible. At any rate, I believe that we can reduce the losses to a minimum.

As a matter of interest, I might add a statement from a letter which I received several weeks ago. I quote from this letter because it substantiates, in a way, the view I have given above. This writer says: "Our extremely heavy loss in the benches last year was practically all due to overwatering." And again in the same letter, "the big surprise is that this year we have lost not more than 300 plants out of 55,000 and about 250 of these were taken from that part of the field which had overflowed."

The control of the disease in the field, of course, is the most difficult proposition. I have no solution to offer. However, permit me to point out than 22° C. (71.6° F.) with 15° C. (59° F.) to 22° C. (71.6° F.) as the optimum for the development of the smut. In accord with this conclusion, the farmers of the Pacific northwest are finding that by sowing their winter wheat either very early (warm soil) or very late (cold soil) they can reduce the loss from smut to an almost negligible percentage."

In conclusion: Some of the views given you in this paper concerning carnation stem rot are largely theoretical. I have attempted to give you some facts, based upon experiments, and from these facts I have made certain deductions. In order to prove these deductions, we must continue our investigation along two different lines. One is careful investigation by means of elaborate apparatus; the other is the collection of authentic data from all sections of the country. In the latter, the carnation growers can take an active part. We need data from all sections of the country for a period of several years. We need to know not only the actual losses in number of plants, but also whether these losses occurred in the field or in the greenhouse. If in the latter, we need to know the temperature and soil moisture conditions at the time of and just previous to the losses. And especially do we need to know at what time of year; better still, we need to know the losses for each day of the month. Such data from a few growers in each section of the country would be of much value. For it would enable us to analyze the conditions which are responsible for the losses, and it would supplement whatever investigations we are able to carry on in the greenhouse laboratory. Such co-operation ought to have far-reaching results towards our ultimate goal.

Illinois State Florists' Association.

The annual meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association was held at the Hotel La Salle, Chicago, January 22. After the address of President Keimel and the report of Secretary Ammann, which will be found in last week's issue, Dr. P. A. Lehenbauer, of the department of floriculture, at the University of Illinois, reported progress in experiments on selection in roses and carnations, with a view to producing more flowers of better quality. He also told of investigations on orchid seed germination and drop of sweet pea buds. Prof. H. B. Dorner spoke of the instructional work going on at the university, and the greatly increased number of students, emphasizing the need of extended facilities and more funds.

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: W. J. Hembreicker, Springfield, president; Joseph H. Kohout, Libertyville, vice-president; J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, secretary, and F. L. Washburn, Bloomington, treasurer.

Selection and Flower Production.

Dr. P. A. Lehenbauer, of the division of floriculture, University of Illinois, Urbana, reported as follows at the Chicago meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association, January 22, 1920:

The experimental work is being continued along the lines of the previous two years.

1. The experiment on the relation of selection to flower production, when the vegetative method of propagation is employed, is still in progress. This being only the second year of selection, the experiment has not gone far enough to state any conclusions. Several important facts have been brought to light—to be sure only tentatively, for the evidence is by no means complete.

(a) By knowing the number of flowers which a plant has produced by the last of January, and then counting the buds on the plant at this time, we have a fairly accurate figure of production of that plant for the year.

(b) The condition of the crimping of the petals seems to be inherent in the plant, and is not dependent upon growing conditions.

(c) The splitting of the calyx seems to be due to the nitrogen relation of the plant. Sudden, rapid growth seems to be instrumental in producing split calyces.

2. It has been found previously, that by the liberal use of acid phosphate, flower production can be increased—(about two flowers per plant for roses, five per cent for carnations). We have evidence that much of this phosphorus is not used by the plant during the first year, but reverts in the soil. We are attempting to find if this phosphorus in reverted form is as efficient in producing increased production as is a new supply of acid phosphate.

3. We have begun an experiment to test the effect of using the same soil in the benches continuously for several years. Most growers discard the soil after one year and refill the benches with new soil each year. This involves much labor and expense, and possibly a loss of fertilizers.

4. Several apparently new and important diseases have come to our notice recently, and we are attempting to follow up these diseases and determine methods of control.

5. A study is being made of the germination of orchid seed and the conditions involved.

6. We are collecting data, and following up the drop of buds on sweet peas. The statement has been made by writers that the trouble takes its origin in the soil. There is a theory to the effect that it is a phosphorus problem; others claim that it is a nitrogen problem. We are not following up this phase, for another experiment station is doing this, but we expect to attack the problem from another angle, namely, temperature and moisture.

7. Much time is being devoted to the devising and construction of apparatus, by means of which we hope to control certain conditions, such as temperature, moisture, etc., so that we may take up more accurately a study of certain problems of greenhouse plants.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IA.—The Gardiner Floral Co. has moved to new quarters at 545 West Broadway.

SPRINGFIELD, O.—Frank McGregor, a veteran florist of this city, died January 12, age 81 years.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—During the recent holiday period, sales at the establishment of Wm. Schlatter & Son were greater than last year with prices also increased. Cut flowers as a rule were plentiful with the exception of bulbous stock. Flowering plants also showed a gain in popularity.

LINCOLN, NEB.—C. H. Frey, in commenting on the recent holiday trade, says sales were about 30 per cent greater than in the corresponding period a year ago, with an advance of but five per cent in prices. The principal demand was for roses and carnations. Plants were not as popular as in former years, due to weather conditions and poor delivery.

Japanese Beetle Quarantine Extension.

At a hearing before the federal horticultural board at Washington, D. C., January 27, relative to an extension of the Japanese beetle quarantine in Burlington and Camden counties, New Jersey, so as to cover all plants and plant products, there was very little opposition. Although in the past the quarantine has been confined to sweet corn it has been found that the insect also infests other plants, and it is planned to extend the prohibition so as to include all nursery and greenhouse products, including trees, shrubs, plants of all kinds, bulbs and flowers, hay, forage and grain crops and perishable foods of all kinds. It is proposed also to enlarge the territory affected by the quarantine order although still keeping it within the confines of the two counties upon which it was originally placed.

In opening the hearing, Dr. H. L. Quaintance, of the bureau of entomology of the department of agriculture, told those present that the department will have a total of $200,000 with which to fight the beetle this year and next. Request for permission for the New Jersey department of agriculture to administer the quarantine, so far as it pertains to nursery stock, was made by Henry B. Weiss, of the department, but he was told by Chairman Marlatt that the board could countenance no splitting of authority, and that the nurserymen need feel no fear that the administration of the quarantine by the board would do any more harm to injure their business than its administration by the New Jersey department.

While present indications are that nursery stock will be no great problem, so far as the quarantine is concerned, cut flowers will have to receive a great deal of attention, said Mr. Weiss. Soil from greenhouse stock, in his opinion, comes mostly from beetle free areas and, accordingly will require but little attention. If, however, any of the soil is found to come from infested areas, it will be necessary to make inspections to be sure there are no grubs present. His department, he said, will insist that nurserymen get their soil from free areas, and handle it in such a manner as to keep it uninfested.

John J. Davis, whose work for the department of agriculture is confined chiefly to the district about Riverton, N. J., declared that the quarantine in that section this year will be handled along the lines followed last year, in respect to corn, except that it will take in the added crops. He told the board that the farmers had found that the quarantine inconvenienced them only slightly, and expressed the opinion that the nursery men and greenhouse growers would have the same experience. While he has not had any experience with nursery stock under the quarantine order, he said that he believed pot plants and other similar stock grown in the affected area, should be shipped only between November 1 and June 15, and only when all soil has been removed from the roots of the plants, or inspection shows them to be free from living beetles and grubs. Soil, itself, he declared, would be the most serious problem, and a thorough inspection would be necessary before permission could be given for its shipment. It would be necessary to give a great deal of attention to cut flowers during the warm months, but during the winter, when the trade is heaviest, they would require but little regulation, because of the absence in cold weather of the beetles. Greenhouse products are all included in the proposed order, because of the fact that much of the stock is grown in the fields for a part of the time, and in being transferred to the houses, takes with it infested soil. He emphasized the fact that the proposed orders would not prohibit the movement of any stocks, except that in which grubs are present, and from which the soil cannot be removed. It it not a plant regulation, but a restriction of the movement of soil.

Nurserymen in the affected territory have no opposition to the order, the necessity for which they are willing to admit, declared J. D. Eisele, but they strongly preferred its administration by the state department, and urged the use of the term prohibition instead of quarantine, which word was likely to give a wrong impression to persons not thoroughly acquainted with the situation. Greenhouse products, it was pointed out, are not greatly affected by the beetle, since, although it was supposed to have been brought in as far back as 1911, it was not discovered until two years ago, despite the fact that large numbers of plants had been transferred in the affected territory during the intervening period. Mr. Eisele told the members of the board that it was not the custom of his concern to grind all soil in a machine similar to those used for grinding bark in the manufacture of tanning extracts, which would chop any grub that might be in the soil into very minute pieces. He declared also, that in his opinion, the beetle is nowhere near as destructive as the department declares it to be, and that so far as he knew, it had never done any damage.

Quarantine Regulation No. 37 was responsible for the ruin of his business in Holland, declared P. M. Koster and he was very anxious to know whether his business, which he has since established in New Jersey, is again to be ruined.

During the progress of the hearing, there was considerable discussion as to whether the beetle really did any damage or not, growers declaring that it did not, while representatives of the government were equally positive that it is a destructive pest, to curb which no measures can be too severe.

J. G. Saunders of Pennsylvania also appeared at the hearing, and urged the adoption of the quarantine, in view of the fact that it was possible that the beetle might spread to his state.

Those present were: C. L. Marlatt, Karl F. Kellerman, George B. Sudworth and W. A. Orton, of the federal horticultural board; P. H. Evans, bureau of plant industry; T. E. Steele, Pomona Nurseries, Palmyra, N. J.; John J. Davis, United States department of agriculture, Riverton, N. J.; J. G. Saunders, director of plant industry, Harrisburg, Pa.; Thomas B. National Publicity for Flowers.

There has been a steady influx of orders at the secretary's office for poster stamps and posters for St. Valentine's day, which augers well for business on this day. As has been previously pointed out, the cost of this material is very small, and co-operation in a wide use of it must certainly produce direct results. The February magazines selected for the page advertisement in colors featuring this day are already in circulation, and should exert considerable influence in the direction of sales. In addition to all this, our promotion bureau has supplied enough electrotypes to florists in all parts of the country to insure that our slogan in connection with pictorial matter bearing suitable reference to the festival will have attention in over 2,000,000 homes—which means engaging the interest of five times that number of people. To avoid disappointment, florists should order at once. Orders will be filled the same day they are received at the point of distribution.

CAMPAIGN GIVES SATISFACTION.

That the campaign, so far, has given the best of satisfaction is evidenced in the kind comments being received at the secretary's office from subscribers in all sections. There is much enthusiasm shown in the conduct of the campaign, and the opinion is freely expressed that we should push our work even harder than before. As one subscriber puts it: "We have got the public going; let us keep them continually in mind of our products." The number of people who miss an occasion for expressing a sentiment with flowers is less than it used to be, because they can hardly escape the necessary reminder, thanks to our publicity work. It is up to us to see that the reminder is perpetuated.

But we cannot accomplish this without support to our fund. It does not matter where you are situated, you receive benefit from our publicity work. The idea of deliveries of flowers in distant cities has been greatly encouraged by our magazine advertising. You will have noticed that in all our magazine advertising, particular reference has been made to the possibilities in this direction, and business by telegraph is getting to be as common as it was once rare. There is not a town or community in the United States where such business is impossible. Few families have not relatives and friends at a distance, and all have birthdays and anniversaries during a year, which may be fittingly remembered by floral gifts. Flowers are the same everywhere, so there is a standardization hardly possible in any other line of gifts.

If you have not already subscribed to our fund, let us have your support at once. Our publicity committee is now planning its work for the remainder of the year, and with your support pledged, their plans will be better prepared and better carried out. You need no longer feel that you might be subscribing for something that at best was a "forlorn hope." The campaign has proved its value; its very many friends admit the tremendous impetus it has given to our business.

Help us to help you—you will not regret it.

Portland Rose Test Garden Awards.

The rose test garden at Portland, Ore., conducted under the auspices of the Portland Rose Society under the special direction of City Commissioner C. Pier and Park Superintendent C. P. Keyser, and which is planted under the supervision of the American Rose Society, with the judging in the hands of a local committee, with J. A. Curray as chairman, has announced its awards in the international competition as follows:

E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., won first prize with his world's champion outdoor-grown Columbia, which was developed two years ago. Second prize for outdoor-grown roses went to George C. Thomas, Jr., of Philadelphia, Pa., for his "Seedling 4-A." Mr. Thomas also received for this rose the award for the best variety developed by an amateur. This rose will be formally named by the Portland Rose Society during the coming rose festival.

First award for climbers was given to Elisha J. Hicks, of Hurst, Burks, Eng., for his Climbing Lady Hillingdon.

Howard & Smith, of Los Angeles, Calif., received first award for their Lolita Armour and second prize for this class went to Clarke Brothers, of Portland, for their Oregon Ophelia.

The Portland rose test gardens are becoming famous throughout the world, as shown by the great amount of interest being manifested in them by noted rose culturists. All roses receive three different tests. In the first garden they are given special care and attention to develop them to their fullest possibilities. In the second garden they are given ordinary care and treatment, such as the average householder gives his roses, and in the third garden, which is far removed from the other, they are given little care or attention, so their disease-resisting qualities can be ascertained. During the entire growing season, from April to November, a reading is taken at least once each week of every plant under test and a record is made of the number of blooms, the condition of the foliage, the length of stem and other facts.

Plant Quarantine No. 37.

The following was received from the Royal Tottenham Nurseries, Dedemsvaart, Holland, extensive growers of herbaceous perennials and other lines of nursery stock, January 24, by a well-known American firm:

"We hope that your nurserymen's and florists' organizations will take strong action with congress in order to get modifications of the present quarantine. We fear, however, that unless these modifications will soon come, it will be too late to save the position of hundreds of hard working nurserymen, who are now struggling against ruin. They are fighting the last fight, and the end will be that millions of plants, which are badly wanted in the United States, will have to be burned, and the owners be totally ruined and come to despair. According to our opinion your federal horticultural board ought also to prohibit people entering the United States in order to prevent diseases among men to spread. We fervently hope that the steps your committees will take will meet with the success it deserves and common sense will again rule with your officials, who seem to at present have the international horticultural trade by the throat."

"The costs of production of plants are here at least double what they were before the war, and the high value of the Dutch guilder makes it impossible for many countries, which were the best customers in pre-war times, to buy anything. We went around Boskoop, Ghent, and other plant exporting centers and everywhere we found the same sad conditions. It is a heavy moral responsibility which your federal horticultural board has lightly taken up, and the world will lose much if it will be impossible henceforth to get lots of plants, which add so much to make the lives of people bright."

N. Y. Wholesale Florists' Protective Ass'n

Forefathers' day, the eleventh anniversary of the Wholesale Florists' Protective Association, was celebrated by a dinner and entertainment at the Hotel Breslin on the night of January 24. Frank H. Traendly, president of the association ably filled the post of presiding officer and toastmaster. The dinner committee consisted of W. G. Badgley, A. H. Langjahr, and W. F. Sheridan, and their arrangements were most satisfactory. Invited guests were: A. T. De La Mare, A. F. Faulkner, W. H. Duckham, C. H. Totty, Eugene Dailledouze, President Miller, of the S. A. F., F. R. Pierson and J. H. Pepper. On account of previous engagements, President Miller and F. R. Pierson were unable to be present. Others connected with the association, who were present, were: Ward W. Smith, attorney for the association; P. F. Kessler, Percy B. Rigby, John Gunther, E. C. Horan, Maurice Glass, Geo. Hildenbrand, Chas. Schenck, Jos. S. Fenrich, Clarence Slinn, Paul Rigo, Herman Weiss, Lawrence R. Kervan, and J. E. Morichard. After a bounteous menu had been disposed of, Toastmaster Traendly, who was in fine form, with his usual clever and witty sallies, called upon C. H. Totty, who made felicitous remarks on the good fellowship of the occasion. He added that the aims of the association were beneficial to both wholesalers and growers, and that a complete understanding between the two branches of the trade was sure to be helpful to both. A. T. De La Mare spoke of the serious effects of the quarantine being put in force against various states, which has followed Quarantine No. 37, and urged the necessity of cooperation in combating the quarantines. Charles Schenck read a suitable resolution on the death of William Stuart Allen, which was adopted. Brief remarks expressing good wishes for the association and the trade in general were made by W. H. Duckham, Eugene Dailledouze, W. G. Badgley, Jos. S. Fenrich, Ward W. Smith, A. H. Langjahr and A. F. Faulkner. Logan's entertainers gave musical selections and recitations.

SHORT SUPPLY BRINGS HIGH PRICES.

Stock is extremely scarce and very high in price in this market. It is only rarely that an occasion like this arises where flowers reach a higher figure than is paid during the Christmas holidays. Of all the roses, probably the greatest advance is noted in the case of Ophelia and Russell. American Beauties are just about able to meet the demand, but this is the only sort that enjoys that distinction. Red roses are hard to secure. Chrysanthemums, no matter how poor in quality, are in great demand for funeral work. There are quite a few late white and pink still coming into this market. Carnations are now enjoying a wonderful demand, owing to the shortage of roses. Prices have stiffened along with all other stock. Quite a lot of seconds and splits are coming in, all of which find their way into floral designs. The warm weather has brought out the crop of violets more freely. They are in brisk demand, both for shipping and the local trade. Prices rule about normal for this flower. Daffodils are very scarce this week. Sweet peas are becoming more abundant every day. The stock is especially fine. They are bringing from $2 to $2.50 per dozen bunches in the wholesale market. Cattleyas are quite plentiful. The call for them is as strong as ever, and they sell at high prices. The supply of gardenias is just about equal to the demand, with no change in prices. Pussy willow is now plentiful and receives much attention for decorative work. Cotoneaster pannosa is frequently met with, and is in demand for window decorations. Its red berries make it very effective. The supply of asparagus is very limited. Ferns are also hard to secure in sufficient quantities for all needs. In pot stock there is a fine lot of cinerarias this season. Quite a few primulas are to be had as well as the usual supply of cyclamens. Very little bagonia stock is arriving.

NOTES.

The Chinese chrysanthemum growers who produce their stock in locations that are not visited by frost, have had a most profitable season. They are now selling small, white and colored chrysanthemums at $1.00 per dozen blooms, and when it is considered that very often they grow as many as a dozen flowers to the plant, it will not require a great amount of figuring to learn that this is quite a profitable industry. They are all grown in the open, and in sheltered locations which receive practically no protection from frost.

Henry Maier, manager of the Hillsborough Nurseries, at Burlingame, is enthusiastic over his new violet, Anna Evans, which is described as a pale lilac with a small white eye. It is a sport of Swanley White, and originated over 12 years ago. It is being sent out this season by Mr. Maier. While the rose houses at this establishment are a little off crop just now, there is every indication of a large cut again in a few weeks.

The orchid range at Ferrari Bros.' establishment is producing a heavy cut of the finest trianæs. All the plants are in a very healthy state and flowers of the largest size are seen everywhere. All this stock is consigned to J. A. Axell's wholesale store on Bush street. The rose houses will soon be in with another good cut, which will help to relieve the shortage now felt.

Angelo J. Rossi, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., has been elected president of the Downtown Association, which is composed of the prominent merchants of the city. He is also prominent in other civic affairs, being a member of the Rotary Club, Advertising Club, and is also a member of the playground commission.

G. Rossi & Bro. report much difficulty in supplying the demand for asparagus. Out-of-town trade is quite heavy. The greenhouses of the firm are unable to keep up with the call. They have a large lot of bulbous stock coming along, which looks promising. They will have a heavy cut of tulips later on.

At the Mayfield nursery of S. Schwerin, many thousand bulbs have been planted for the coming season. Tulips, hyacinths and narcissi in great variety are all grown here for this market. The greenhouses have been supplying a steady cut of carnations all season.

J. Kruse, of Piedmont, is one of the few rose growers who is sending in Cecile Brunner. His fern houses are now producing a good supply.

ANNUAL CONVENTION PROGRAMME.

The sixth annual convention of the Tennessee State Florists' Association will be held at Knoxville, February 5-6. The officers of the organization have been untiring in their efforts to make this the best meeting ever held by the association, and the following programme indicates the meeting will be both interesting and profitable: "Office Management and Collections," by W. Cleveland, Memphis, Robert E. Mapes, Knoxville, and Thomas H. Joy, Nashville; "Our Credit System, Its Uses and Abuses," by S. S. Skidelsky, New York; "The Florists' Business of Today," by George Asmus, Chicago; "Local Publicity," by Z. D. Blackistone, Washington, D. C., and George Schulz, Louisville, Ky.; "Why Every Florist Should Join the F. T. D.," by Philip Breitmeyer and Albert Pochelon, Detroit, Mich.; "A Talk on Carnations," by A. F. J. Baur, Indianapolis, Ind.; "Can Carnations Be Grown in the South Successfully?" by Harold Joy, Nashville; "Advertising—How to Tie to the National Campaign," by Henry Penn, Boston, Mass.; "The American Embargo on Plants and Bulbs," by J. Keur, Hillegom, Holland; "Legislation," by Wm. F. Gude, Washington, D. C.; "Relation of Flowers to Music," by Wm. H. Crouch, Knoxville; "Make-up Demonstrations" and "Modern Salesmanship of Flowers," by Mrs. Edith Goetz, Chattanooga; "Floral Accessories," by Robert Schoch, Philadelphia, Pa., and C. E. Critchell, Cincinnati, O.; "Greenhouse Construction," by Philip J. Foley, Chicago; "Artificial Irrigation," by R. R. White, Troy, O.; "In What Way Does the Ornamental Grower Benefit the Florist?" by Bruce Howell, Knoxville.

On the afternoon of the second day the visitors will be taken for an automobile trip to growing establishments in the city and vicinity, followed by the banquet of the Knoxville Florists' Society to the state association and visitors at the Whittle Springs Hotel in the evening. As in former years, the exhibits will doubtless prove an interesting feature of the meeting.

The committee on arrangements includes Karl P. Baum, chairman; A. J. McNutt, William H. Crouch, W. R. Ryno, A. H. Dailey, Bruce Howell and Mrs. A. H. Dailey. Robert E. Mapes is chairman of the publicity committee.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

TRADE CONDITIONS UNCHANGED.

Local market conditions remain about the same as they have been since the first of the year—stock scarce and demand heavy. The same conditions must prevail all over the country as the wholesale houses are receiving long distance calls and telegrams from districts that they have never served, but it has been impossible to take care of any but the regular buyers, and even then, no order is ever filled in full, but what stock is received is simply divided up, and it makes no difference what it is—it all looks alike. While there has been no recurrence of the influenza, here as yet, and we all hope there will not be, still it has affected this market to the extent that Philadelphia and Chicago, which usually help out during a shortage, have nothing to offer. Stock is more plentiful than it has been, especially sweet peas and bulbous flowers. The former have been of extra fine quality and have brought from $2.50 to $5 per 100, according to length of stem and condition on arrival. Tulips are also in heavy supply, but the stems are short. Paper White narcissi are coming stronger and bring from $6 to $8 per 100. The receipts of snapdragons, mignonette and baby primroses are getting heavier every day, and are bringing good prices. White lilies are of good quality and clean up daily. Violets and orchids, while good, seem to be the only items that do not move easily. The rose and carnation situation is still the same, and the supply short of the demand. Of the roses, there are very few shorts, and not many of the fancy grades, while the supply of carnations is small and of poor quality. The present high prices have played havoc with the small retailers, who claim that they are selling stock at a very small profit in order to hold their trade until there is a reduction in prices, and while a week or two of bright weather will bring an increased supply and a drop in prices, conditions will never get back to where they were several years ago. With the local and national advertising, the demand has increased faster than production, and the sooner these retailers realize this and adjust themselves to the new conditions, the better off they will be.

NOTES.

The next meeting of the florists' and gardeners' club will be held on the evening of February 3 in the lecture hall of the north side Carnegie library. The club has invited the general public to hear an illustrated talk on, "Central Florida in Mid Winter," by D. E. Jennings, Ph. D., curator of botany of Carnegie museum. The regular business and election of officers will be held after the lecture.

John C. Walley, foreman of McCallum Co's. greenhouses at Evans City, Pa., and Ed. Blind, of the Blind Floral Co., attended the carnation convention in Chicago last week.

Geo. C. McCallum, sales manager of The McCallum Company, is on a two-weeks' business trip in the east.

GENERAL SHORTAGE HERE AS ELSEWHERE.

With a shortage of stock and high prices prevailing, trade has been inactive, but some improvement is indicated in the arrival of spring bulbs. Anemones, jonquils and hyacinths are in great demand. Violets are quite plentiful, but owing to the cold weather do not sell freely. Roses and carnations hold up in price. Sweet peas are now arriving in large numbers. Callas move well at $4 and $5 per dozen.

NOTES.

J. J. Cassidy reports business far ahead of last year in funeral orders.

The Beacon Florists are enlarging their quarters in the Houghton building. This firm has doubled its business since last fall and is well on its way to another successful season.

At Philip L. Carbone's some very attractive windows have been noted recently. A shipment of fine Italian ware consisting of 79 cases of Ventian glass, pottery and baskets has been received.

B. A. Snyder & Co. report good business in spite of high prices.

BUSINESS EXCEPTIONALLY GOOD.

The past week was one of very good business in the flower shops, augmented by the demand resulting from the annual stock show which attracted many visitors to this city. Cut flowers cleaned up daily and there was a brisk demand for flowering plants.

NOTES.

The Park Floral Co. is supplying this market with very fine pot stock of Freesia Purity. They also have a fine lot of Primula malacoides. Both find ready sale.

Joseph Miller, formerly of the Cudahy Floral Co., Milwaukee, Wis., is now in charge of the rose section of the Mauff Floral Co.

The Boldt-Lundy House of Flowers has been doing a big business in fancy baskets arranged with sweet peas and roses.

Manager Benson, of the Denver Wholesale Florist Co., reports a serious shortage of carnations and roses.

F. B. Tinker, well known in the trade in this vicinity, is now with the Boldt-Lundy House of Flowers.

S. R. Lundy and Conrad Lingenfelder returned from their Pacific coast trip, January 25.

Wm. Kash has leased the Western Greenhouses and will take charge February 1.

Fred Hall, proprietor of the Mont Clair Greenhouses, is reported seriously ill.

C. F. Males is sending in some pans of excellent daffodils.

Mr. and Mrs. Boldt are visiting in Idaho Springs, Colo.

Visitors: J. W. Watson and J. Morin, Grand Junction, Colo. F. D.

Indianapolis.

A lack of uniformity in prices asked for the same grade of stock in different shops in this city, varying in some instances from 50 cents to $2 per dozen is a matter of comment at present and one which will doubtless be taken up in the near future.

Mrs. Margeret Dorner, widow of Frederick Dorner, of Lafayette, Ind., and well known and highly respected in this city, died January 25 in her seventy-fifth year. Further details will be found in this week's obituary column.

Local florists are more than casually interested in the fight on the Dean truck law effective January 1, which removes the old registration fee of $5 and substitutes a sliding scale ranging from $6 upward.

Coming to St. Louis as a young man, he entered the employ of the late Henry Shaw, as gardener, and was identified with the early work in the Shaw Gardens, now the Missouri Botanical Garden. Throughout his life, Mr. Gurney gave special attention to aquatic gardening, and raised a number of meritorious water lilies. He was a genial, kindly man with a host of friends throughout the country. Two sons survive, James and George, the former now superintendent of Tower Grove park.

SMALL POX is reported in the Wisconsin sphagnum moss district.

REPORT of the Japanese beetle hearing, held at Washington, D. C., January 27, will be found elsewhere in this issue.

THE Illinois good roads authorities are experiencing considerable difficulty in securing sufficient cement, not only to carry out the 1920 programme, but to finish last year's work.

ATTORNEY GENERAL PALMER says the 14 per cent increase granted coal miners has not been passed along to the public by operators. Evidently the attorney-general has not heard of the advances made by the Chicago coal dealers.

THE great shortage of cut flowers, due to sunless weather and unusual demand, is spread over a wide territory, and includes nearly all the larger towns in the east and middle west. In many cases, advance orders are being refused.

WALKER D. HINES, director general of railroads, calls attention to the fact that there will be an extraordinary demand for cars during February.

THE internal revenue department has not completed the audit of 1917 tax returns, and has just begun on the 1918 returns, according to a dispatch from Washington. The delay is hampering corporations which are forced to keep big reserves to cover the possible difference of opinion as to tax liability. The estimated money thus tied up may aggregate $1,000,000,000.

Lower Prices Predicted.

Professor F. W. Taussig, Harvard economist, and during the war, chief of the United States tariff commission, predicts an overturn in the present state of international trade, saying that it may come with something of a crash and with familiar accompaniments of a commercial crisis. "Foreign payments for our exports were all on paper," he says. "In effect, the payments were made by one set of people to another set. This state of things cannot persist. The process of ever-repeated loans will inevitably come to an end. With it the enormous excess of exports over imports will come to an end. We may expect a fall in prices and declining incomes.

Warning to business men throughout the country that the nation is perilously near the end of its credit resources and that productivity must be promoted in every line of industry, was given recently by Francis H. Sisson, vice-president of the Guaranty Trust Co., before the annual convention of National Boot & Shoe Manufacturers in New York. He emphasized the necessity on the part of manufacturers to refrain from unproductive, speculative or economically unnecessary ventures.

National Growers' Association.

During the meetings of the American Carnation Society and the Illinois State Florists' Association at Chicago last week, January 21-22, J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., former president of the Society of the American Florists, made a vigorous campaign for a national organization of growers, having for its purpose, the giving of proper publicity to the products of its members. Mr. Ammann claimed the growers had been backward in this matter, and that their large investment demanded liberal publicity in times of depression or glut, calling attention to numerous instances of producers and other lines of business paying large sums for the exploitation of their manufactures. A number of prominent growers in attendance favored the movement, including August Poehlmann, Chicago; Wallace R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.; F. C. W. Brown, Cleveland, O.; John H. Dunlop, Toronto, Ont.; P. J. Breitmeyer, Detroit, Mich.; S. A. Anderson, Buffalo, N. Y.; Carl Hagenburger, West Mentor, O., and James Hembreicker, Springfield, Ill. Many more handed in their names as members, and a temporary organization was formed, with F. C. W. Brown as president, and J. F. Ammann, secretary. These officers, with Wallace R. Pierson, R. C. Kerr, Houston, Texas, and C. E. Gullett, Lincoln, Ill., proposed to frame a constitution and plan of operation, which will be presented at the annual convention of the Society of the American Florists' in Cleveland, next August.

Orchid Conference.

John E. Lager, the well-known orchid specialist of Summit, N. J., writes under date of January 20, urging as many as possible orchid growers to attend the conference to be held at the office of the chairman of the Federal Horticultural Board, Washington, D. C., February 10, to consider Plant Quarantine No. 37 in its relation to orchid imports.

FOR SALE

Fleischer's Greenhouses, Pueblo, Colo.

Owned by G. FLEISCHER, Life Member of the Florists' Association and F. T. D.

This entire property, including land, greenhouses, residence, retail store, in fact everything belonging to a first-class florists' establishment. Reason for selling, owner came into possession of valuable mining property near Silvercliffe, Colo., and must devote his entire time to development of the same this coming spring.

The price, if taken soon, is $37,000; $22,000 cash, balance as agreed on, or 10% for cash.

I own 37,000 square feet of modern glass, constructed and shipped by J.C. Moninger Co., Chicago, with 34½ adjoining lots in residence section; these lots are equipped with Skinner irrigation system and used for outside cultivation: residence adjoining greenhouses, modern, 7-room, steam, hot air, gas and electric light; greenhouses are well stocked and well kept up, running in full capacity; modern, heated by 90-horsepower boiler with one 60-horsepower as reserve; clear title to all property, no debts whatsoever; steam heated brick garage, truck and equipment. Flower store on Main street, well stocked with all supplies and fixtures; over 12 years at present location. If this proposition is too large for you to handle, my advice will be to start a large corporation; remember I have a larger glass area than all other florists' establishments together in the city of Pueblo, a city of 65,000 inhabitants with a large future; carnation and rose section can easily be extended to full length of property; houses were constructed accordingly.

It pays to investigate and write for particulars, but don't do it unless you have the money. I made my money in the business I now offer for sale. Can you do it?

LIMITED SUPPLY OF POOR QUALITY.

The most welcome thing in this city at present would be some good, warm sunshine. For the past two weeks, nearly every day has been dark and gloomy. Consequently the few flowers that are to be had are off color and weak specimens. This week finds the market even more barren than last. One of the wholesalers reports that never, considering times when the demand has been great, has this situation existed. When roses at $10 per bunch are very difficult to secure, we must admit that flowers are a little scarce.

NOTES.

The publicity committee for this city is undertaking a campaign which, if carried through, will mean more for the good of the local trade in general than anything that has been accomplished in years. Already 90 per cent of the growers have signed an agreement to the effect that on any of their floral products, sold by any wholesale house, said wholesale house shall deduct one-half of one per cent from their returns before same are remitted to them. The retailers are to be canvassed to secure their signatures on an agreement of one per cent addition on the same basis.

M. Tutor, of the firm of Grandy, The Florist, Norfolk, Va., was a visitor last week.

LIMITED SUPPLY BRINGS HIGH PRICES.

The market is thoroughly demoralized. Stock of all kinds is very scarce and prices high. Business has been brisk with a constant worry to the retailer trying to fill his orders. The stock that is coming into the market is only fair in quality. Carnations loom up best, with sweet peas and violets coming next. Roses, aside from being scarce, are of inferior quality. A few good callas are seen. Narcissi, calendulas and stevia make up the bulk of the other stock, with prices all high. Greens of all kinds are in good supply.

NOTES.

The florists' dance, January 23, was a huge success. In spite of extremely disagreeable weather, the event drew a large attendance and everybody seemed to have a good time. The hall was tastefully decorated with southern smilax by Chas. Haun, Andrew Hoffman, Oscar Ruff and Andy Bourdet, the decorating committee.

From all indications, and reports of the growers, the present scarcity of stock will continue for a few more weeks. What is needed is a few weeks of bright weather to be of any material benefit. It does not look as though the florists are going to have enough stock to go around for St. Valentine's day business.

The past week has been exceptionally hard on the delivery departments. The streets have been covered with a coating of ice and snow, and numerous accidents have resulted from skidding. Fortunately none have been of a serious nature.

A number of the local florists are under the weather, mostly with the influenza, among them A. W. Gumz, Oscar May, as well as Art Beyer's wife and baby.

Giant Comet Aster

Burpee for Aster Seed

ASTERS are growing in popularity with the American public every year, and good full-centered flowers on long stems bring prices which guarantee profits. The best Asters can be grown only from carefully selected seed.

Burpee's Aster Seed is grown in those sections of the United States which produce the finest seed. Our stocks are true to type. Every care is exercised to keep them free from off colors and yellow centers. They will produce the largest and finest flowers on the longest stems.

The four types of Asters listed below are those which we recommend for florists' planting for a continuous supply throughout the season:

Queen of the Market Asters

The earliest of all cutting Asters, universally planted for first crop. Flowers profusely, and is always a money maker. We offer the following colors:

1682—Shell Pink	1688—Light Blue
1683—Rose Pink	1686—Dark Blue
1680—Crimson	1684—Purple

Any of the above. ¼ oz., 35c; oz., $1.15; postage extra.

Early Branching Royal Asters

A recently developed type which makes a perfect succession crop to Queen of the Market, as the first flowers appear just as Queen of the Market has finished blooming. Of strong, upright growth, two feet high, with large, full-centered flowers.

1639—White	1640—Crimson
1641—Rose Pink	1638—Purple

Any color, ¼ oz., 50c; oz., $1.60; postage extra.

Crego's Giant Asters

A mid-season type, filling in the season between the Royal and Late Branching Asters. The Crego Giants are a great improvement on the Asters of the Comet type, having large flowers, with loose, elegantly curled petals. They always bring highest prices.

1610—Rose Pink	1607a—Dark Blue
1611—Crimson	1608—Purple

Each color, ¼ oz., 55c; oz., $1.75; postage extra.

American Late Branching Asters

Extensively used to fill in the gap before the Chrysanthemums come into the market. The most vigorous in growth and producing the largest flowers, with broad, incurved petals, fully double. Our stock of this popular type is unsurpassed.

1577—Light Pink	1571—Azure Blue
1584—Rose Pink	1580—Deep Blue
1573—Crimson	1581—Purple

Any color, ¼ oz., 40c; oz., $1.35; postage extra.

We will supply ¼ lb. of any of the above for three times the ounce price, and 1 lb. for ten times the ounce price.

Aster Seed is one of our specialties, and we handle many other types. Write for prices on these and other flower seed, or ask for a copy of Burpee's Blue List, our Florists' Wholesale Catalog for 1920.

We are in a position to serve you well. Your orders and inquiries will be given prompt attention.

To Flower Buyers

The great demand caused by the influenza epidemic is still in effect. We have managed to fill all regular orders in full and in addition have helped our regular customers with extra lots of flowers when wanted, besides giving some roses to new customers. We are having a good cut of roses; probably the largest in the market and of most excellent quality. Our roses are now coming in splendid crop. We can take care of some additional orders of long and long medium stem roses, besides our usual good service with regular customers. Prices will not be any higher; on the contrary we look for a gradual return to normal values as the plants come into full crop. Carnations will still continue short, as will the shorter length grade of roses. To those who visited our greenhouses while in attendance at the American Carnation meeting, we wish to thank for their kind words of appreciation and praise of the quality and quantity of stock they saw.

All miscellaneous Flowers are very scarce, but we will do our best to buy any stock wanted which we do not grow ourselves and have on hand.

STOCK IS AS SCARCE AS EVER.

Stock is as scarce as ever and the market is cleaned up completely in all lines of cut flowers at any early hour each day at high prices. The dealers are finding it impossible to fill anywhere near all the orders that are being received and are having trouble in taking care of their regular customers. American Beauty roses are disposed of early at high prices and the same holds true for Mrs. Chas. Russell, Columbia and Premier. Ophelia, Sunburst, Hoosier Beauty, Champ Weiland, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Killarney, White Killarney, Killarney Brilliant, My Maryland, Montrose, Richmond, and all the other varieties clean up almost as soon as they reach the store. Carnations find ready buyers at prices ranging from 8 cents to 15 cents each, and in some instances 20 cents for special stock in varieties such as Laddie, etc. Orchids are in strong demand at prices ranging from 75 cents to $2 each. Sweet peas are bringing from $3 to $5 per 100 and more in the extra fancy grades. Lily of the valley is having a good call and so is stevia. White and yellow narcissus command high prices and the same holds true for freesias, jonquils, and hyacinths. Violets are high in price and miscellaneous stock such as daisies, calendulas, mignonette, pansies, bouvardia and callas are moving at top-notch figures. The demand is so much greater than the supply that the retailers in some instances will not take an order for funeral pieces at less than $5, which has resulted in a great many cases of the customers not buying. There are enough orders, however, so that the retailer can command the price, which he has to do, owing to the prevailing market quotations. cinity, is exceedingly heavy. Greens are in strong demand. Blooming and foliage plants are selling well, owing to the great scarcity of cut flowers.

NOTES.

Every concern in the trade should use the valentine stickers on its letters, packages, statements, etc., and display the large poster for this occasion. The profit made in sales of this material, above expense of handling, will revert to the national publicity fund. No one should overlook this opportunity to tie up with the national campaign, "Say it With Flowers," and those who have not already secured their supply of strickers or posters should do so immediately through their wholesale house.

The florists' club will meet at the Hotel Randolph next Thursday evening, February 5, at 8 o'clock. This is "novelty night" and every grower who has any new stock of any kind is requested to arrange an exhibit. Growers throughout the entire country are invited to participate and all stock should be sent express prepaid.

Peter Douvry, proprietor of the Stewart Floral Co., has leased the store at 61 West Randolph street for 10 years. The Central Refrigerator & Equipment Co. has the contract to furnish the store complete, which it is expected will be ready for occupancy in the near future. Mrs. Douvry is seriously ill at this writing.

The growers, wholesalers and retailers will meet at the Hotel Randolph next Monday evening, February 2, when everyone in the trade is urgently requested to be present.

Walter Rupp, of the John C. Moninger Co., who has been confined to his home with the influenza, is much better and expects to be able to return to work next week.

M. C. Gunterberg, 159 North State street, reports a splendid demand for rooted carnation cuttings, which are of splendid quality this season.

Guy W. French, formerly with Poehlmann Bros. Co., and later of French & Salm, is now with the American Bulb Co.

George Stollery, of Stollery Bros., is again attending to his duties after being confined to his home with the influenza.

Otto Ganzert, who has been employed in the trade here for many years, died last week.

Fritz Bahr, of Highland Park, was on the sick list last week.

THEN— "For many years GROWERS AND RETAILERS have been dissatisfied with the conditions of the CHICAGO MARKET. My ambition was to embody certain principles of conducting a WHOLESALE COMMISSION HOUSE under growers' supervision that would KEEP US OUT of any criticism of GROWER OR RETAILER. The beginning was made in adopting, in 1916, the recommendations as made in the FAMOUS GROWERS' PETITION."

NOW— SINCE 1916 up to NOW the resolutions as formulated in the GROWERS' PETITION have been carried out in spirit—in practice—in cooperation.

WE LEAD THE MARKET with every one of these recommendations, which were accepted successively by associations that were organized later—

WHOLESALE FLORISTS, RETAIL FLORISTS, COMMERCIAL FLOWER GROWERS.

About 25 members of the trade, representing the retailers, wholesalers and growers, met at the Hotel Randolph, Wednesday afternoon, January 28, when a campaign was mapped out to consult everyone in the local trade in regard to the Milwaukee plan of advertising so that it will be possible to take some definite action at the next meeting, to be held at the Hotel Randolph, Monday evening, February 2.

Peter Reinberg suffered some damage from the heavy snow storm at his range last week, which was quickly repaired without any great loss to the stock. Herbert Hansen says that this firm is taking good care of its regular customers, but that it is impossible to give any serious attention to the new business that could be booked at present.

Wietor Bros. report that the demand for carnation cuttings was never so brisk as this season, and that large quantities of this stock have already been delivered. The demand for cut flowers cleans up their receipts almost as soon as they reach the store, notwithstanding the fact that they are cutting heavily in carnations.

John Poehlmann says that it was necessary for a team of horses to bring in Poehlmann Bros. Co's. flowers from Morton Grove the early part of this week, owing to the heavy snow storm which made it difficult for the trucks to get through. The roads for nine miles were exceedingly bad.

Edward J. Reynolds, retail florist, formerly of Denver, Colo., or anyone who knows of his present whereabouts, will confer a favor by communicating with the office of this paper, Telephone, Harrison 7465. Mr. Reynolds was with one of the south side florists for a number of years.

E. C. Amling arrived here from California, January 24, and expects to return in the near future. He is completing arrangements for his new business venture in that state, mention of which was made in these columns a few weeks ago.

R. E. Miller, of Racine, Wis., was a visitor during the convention last week. Mrs. Miller and children left January 22 for an extended tour of the west, and expect to be away for about eight months, making quite a stay in California.

Fred Lautenschlager was a busy man during the conventions last week, but he managed to find time to book and fill immediately an order for a large Kroeschell boiler to heat a range in Ohio.

The stockholders of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association met at the firm's store on North Wabash avenue, Tuesday afternoon, January 27, when the capital stock was increased from $30,000 to $60,000.

Henry M. Hirsch has rented space in the Atlas building, and will make his headquarters in room 218, which is on the same floor with 11 other concerns in the trade.

Miss Charlotte Paradise, of A. L. Vaughan & Co., was unable to report for duty the early part of this week, owing to a severe cold.

Allie Zech says that business is good at Zech & Mann's store, with the demand cleaning up the supply at an early hour each day.

Miss Clara Burkhardt, of Pochlmann Bros. Co's. supply department, is on the sick list.

Joseph Ziska & Sons received an importation of artificial flowers from Germany last week.

Clarence Ellsworth, of the J. F. Kidwell Co., is confined to his home with the influenza.

Vaughan's seed store reports the seed and bulb demand unusually heavy for this date.

L. Koropp, of the Bergmann-Koropp Co., is back from a business trip to Cuba.

Visitors: Calvin Kinsman, Austin, Minn.; Chas. Schwake, New York.

North Shore Horticultural Society.

The first meeting of the year of the North Shore Horticultural Society, held at Lake Forest, Ill., January 2, was poorly attended, due to inclement weather. At this session there was considerable discussion about asking the park commissioners to set aside one of the parks for a general collection of trees, shrubs and evergreens and plants suitable for this locality, the same to be properly labeled with the botanical and common names, so that people could find the varieties best suited to beautify their homes. The collection could be brought together at a very small cost as many nurserymen would be glad to donate specimens. The society would be pleased to hear from some of the residents on this subject and any letters addressed to the corresponding secretary will be read at the regular monthly meetings.

In February the installation of officers will be held and Messrs. Head, Kuehne and Benson are arranging for a smoker-concert in the near future.

J. R. CLARKE, Cor. Sec'y.

Richmond, Ind.

E. G. Hill was prevented from attending the American Carnation Society's convention at Chicago, by a stubborn cold, which he caught on his eastern trip.

Mrs. Earl Mann had the misfortune to slip on the ice January 27, breaking her leg.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.—George B. M. Croy, Jr., reports excellent closing business for 1919, with sales during the holidays about 25 per cent better than the previous year. Prices showed an advance of 50 per cent.

PRICES HIGHER THAN AT HOLIDAYS.

The conditions existing in this market are no doubt much the same as in other cities. Not enough stock to go around and prices, if anything, higher than at Christmas. January is living up to its reputation of high prices and scarcity of stock. Orchids seem the only exception, as fine flowers are now bringing one dollar, and inferior grades even less. Sweet peas are very good and clean up at advertised figures. The commission men have little work to do; everything is grabbed off in a hurry, and their principal duties are confined to answering phone calls for stock that they cannot supply. Roses are sold out quickly, fancy stock in all varieties, as well as other grades, bringing the top of the market. The best carnations are cleaning up at $15 per 100. Bulbous stock is still on the slow side; home grown tulips and daffodils have not made their appearance as yet. Narcissi and freesia are in good supply, and holding firm at from $6 to $8 per 100. Since corsage work has been on the short side, California grown violets have not moved as well as other stock. Home grown stock finds ready sale at $2 per 100. There is little change in other offerings. The same may be said for green goods. The retailers are looking forward to Valentine's day and expect the largest demand for corsages and baskets in the history of the business. With this prospect in view, every one is stocking up heavily. The unsatisfactory weather conditions of the past week brought added woes to the retailer. The streets on the hills of the city were covered with mirror ice, and this condition made delivery by boy or auto almost impossible, many accidents of minor importance being reported.

NOTES.

An auto belonging to H. W. Sheppard sprung a bad radiator leak in a recent delivery trip. The timely assistance offered by the chauffeur of Edward Forter's car saved the undelivered packages from freezing.

Wm. Murphy & Co. are fortunate in having their carnation growers in good crop. Extra fine sweet peas are also seen here.

E. G. Gillett is receiving fine Princess of Wales violets, which are all spoken for.

FLORISTS' CLUB MEETING.

The club meeting, January 20, at Hotel Statler, was the most interesting of the season, and those members who were, by the blizzard raging that night, deterred from attending, certainly missed an evening of enjoyment and instructive addresses. The date of the meeting was arranged to suit the gathering here, January 19-20, of the board of directors of the F. T. D., and the local florists had the benefit of their presence and participation in the proceedings. The scheduled speaker of the evening was S. A. Anderson, of Buffalo, N. Y., who addressed the club on "Some of My Experiences in the Florist Business," and this was followed by an address by W. W. Gammage, of London, Ont.

Mr. Anderson's address was replete with reminiscences of his work as a boy, starting with the firm of W. J. Palmer many years ago, and continued up to the time of his engaging in the business for himself, and reviewed most interestingly the epochs of the gradual development of the business in all its branches to the present time. W. W. Gammage's talk was along the lines suggested by Mr. Anderson, and he, too, could relate similar experiences across the border.

W. F. Gude, Washington, D. C., was the next speaker, who, in his forceful manner, gave an account of the latest work of the federal horticultural board, which he said was still insistent upon the line of action regarding plant importation that has characterized its drastic work the past year.

Interesting indeed were the remarks of Herman Knoble, who analyzed the present condition of the florist business, and made suggestions as to the methods the trade should employ to meet the changing conditions that all are now confronted with. A general discussion followed, participated in by W. J. Palmer, Karl Baum, Irwin Bertermann, H. G. Dillemuth, W. L. Rock, W. J. Smythe, Philip Breitmeyer, A. Pochelon and M. Bloy.

Other visitors at the meeting were Hilmer V. Swenson, Chicago, and W. E. Cook, Cleveland; Miss Gude, Washington, D. C., and Mrs. Herman Knoble, Cleveland. A party from this city left that night for Chicago to attend the carnation meeting. They were: George Doemling and wife, Philip Breitmeyer, William F. Gude and daughter, Herman and Mrs. Knoble, W. W. Gammage, Irwin Bertermann, W. J. Palmer, W. J. Smythe and W. L. Rock.

F. T. D. DIRECTORS HOLD SESSION.

A meeting of the board of directors of the F. T. D. was held at Secretary A. Pochelon's office, 153 Bates street, January 19-20. All the members of the board were present except Mr. Borden, Los Angeles, and Mr. Grakelow, Philadelphia. Those present: President Philip Breitmeyer, Vice-President Irwin Bertermann, Treasurer W. L. Rock, Secretary A. Pochelon, Edward Sceery, Karl Baum, W. J. Smythe, W. J. Palmer, W. W. Gammage, H. G. Dillemuth and Wm. F. Gude. The work of the board was very extensive, and all of executive nature. The greatest facilities were afforded the board's work because of having at hand all the data of the secretary's office, and a previously drafted programme of work, which engaged the board constantly for two days, not being interrupted by luncheon, which was served in the secretary's offices. Monday night, President Breitmeyer and Secretary Pochelon entertained the party at the Detroit Athletic Club. The next meeting of the association will be held in connection with the S. A. F. convention, Cleveland, August next, and followed by the regular annual meeting at Indianapolis, October 12-13.

LADIES' AUXILLIARY DANCE.

The ladies' auxilliary of the florists' club gave its annual ball at the Hotel Statler, January 23. Nearly 300 were in attendance, and the affair was a pronounced success. The ballroom was handsomely decorated for the event by E. A. Fetters, William Dilger and Michigan Cut Flower Exchange. A substantial fund was realized, which will be donated to charity. The officers are: President, Mrs. John Warncke; vice-president, Mrs. A. J. Stahelin; secretary, Mrs. M. Bloy; treasurer, Mrs. Robert Rahaley.

PLANTS BIG HELP IN FLOWER SCARCITY.

The cut flower supply is far below requirements with prices higher than usual at this period. Roses are scarcely available in any quantity, very few being received. Carnations fare somewhat better, but still insufficient. Narcissi are arriving in larger quantities, but clean up daily. Stevia is plentiful, and, with asparagus, is a great factor in funeral work. Combination baskets and pot plants made up in various forms sell fast and there is a strong demand for artificial wreaths for funeral work. There is a brisk call for hospital orders, filled mostly with flowering plants.

NOTES.

W. J. Barnes is well prepared to meet the call for funeral orders with a fine supply of pot plants in addition to artificial wreaths and a limited number of carnations, narcissi, snapdragons and stevia.

The Muehlebach Flower Store reports excellent orders in decorations for the numerous weddings and luncheons. Funeral work is heavier than it has been for some time.

Arthur Newell reports a busy week. Among his orders for the period was a $200 blanket of lily of the valley, orchids, mignonette and sweet peas.

T. J. Noll & Co. report a scarcity in all cut flower lines and as a result artificial flowers have taken quite a boom.

Samuel Murray reports a very busy week of funeral work, but much difficulty is experienced in getting sufficient stock.

The Wm. L. Rock Flower Co. are moving large numbers of wreaths and made-up basket arrangements.

CUT FLOWER SHORTAGE UNRELIEVED.

One record-breaking week appears to follow and outdo another in the shortage of cut flowers, as all kinds of stock was scarcer the past week than at any previous time in the history of the business. Each week of cold, cloudy weather, with rain and snow, which has been our lot since the first of the year, was hoped to be the last, but the next seven days continued the same—or worse. When the sun does break through, it should be pretty strong, and then all kinds of flowering stock will come forward fast and relieve this very trying situation. Nothing in any of the wholesale houses gets into the storage boxes, there being orders ahead, or at least five customers ready to grab up the stock that is not sufficient for one. Prices remain about the same, with the exception of sweet peas, which are about $1 higher in the various grades. Cattleyas are probably the most plentiful item. Roses are still off crop; fully 10 times the stock of short and medium stemmed grades could be sold. Carnations are still very scarce, while freesia, which was counted on to help out, appears to be late. Callas are in great demand, as are the few Easter lilies now coming in. Snapdragons, mignonette and calendulas sell on sight. Violets, particularly doubles, are rather plentiful, and at $1.50 per 100 are as cheap as anything offered.

January 26.—The market opened this morning in worse condition than ever, mere handfuls of stock coming in, rather than the increase which was hoped for. The retailers are afraid to take orders for anything in advance as there is no certainty of being able to get the flowers. There is a slight advance in prices, but for the most part they are stationary, as by common consent the limit seems to have been reached.

NOTES.

A good judge of the market gave it as his opinion that much of the shortened production of flowers was due to economy of labor during the summer, when plants did not receive the skilled attention necessary to get them in the best condition for the winter campaign. He believes also that a few dollars a week extra would secure a competent fireman, one who would save fuel and at the same time keep a flower-bearing temperature in the houses. The grower strives for quality in his cut flowers, and should see that he has men capable of getting the best results. There is a greater money outlay, but this is more than offset in the increased returns.

The February 4 meeting of the florists' club is to be a carnation night. There will be a display of new varieties and the best of the standard sorts. The club will have as guests members of both the Lancaster and Reading florists' clubs. Alfred M. Campbell will make a report of the carnation society meeting in Chicago. F. C. Farnsworth, Morristown, Pa., will illustrate a new automatic steam trap, while J. Edward Moon, president of the American Association of Nurserymen, will speak of quarantine problems which florists as well as nurserymen have in common. It should be a meeting every minute of which will be full of interest.

The retailers who handle Primula malacoides, and others of this type, find them a great help in adding assortment to their meagre stock. Either singly or planted several together in plant baskets or pans, they are very attractive, and surely the most profitable article in the shop. There is a wonderful difference in the various stocks. Several growers who make a specialty of this primula are able to produce abundantly flowered plants in four-inch pots, frequently carrying 20 to 25 well-flowered spikes. The cyclamens that missed Christmas are now well flowered, and quite a number are seen in the stores.

John Westcott and wife celebrated their golden wedding anniversary, January 22. It was a quiet gathering, including only members of the family. A surprise was a handsome basket of flowers, delivered through the

1127 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association, sent from Detroit, the card with hearty congratulations, containing the names of all the directors of the association then in session there. The gift was a great surprise, as Mr. Westcott had not announced the event to any of his friends. He passed his seventy-ninth milestone in December, and both he and Mrs. Westcott are enjoying good health.

John Horn, of Allentown, Pa., was a recent visitor. In commenting on the growing of greenhouse plants for cut flowers, he cited the snapdragon as being almost sure to go rusty, if grown on the same table two years in succession, particularly if ever so little had been developed the first season. Calendulas were a good crop, in his opinion, but offer a favorable breeding ground for the white fly, which is one of the worst of greenhouse pests.

A commission dealer states that in looking over last year's January business he was surprised at the quantity of stock on the market as compared with this year. There was easily four and five times as much with corresponding low prices, such as sweet peas, 75 cents to $2.00 for the best; carnations, $6.00 to $8.00, while cattleyas sold for $20.00 to $25.00 per 100. There were at least five times as many roses as at this time.

Edward Reid declared that everybody should look ahead these days, particularly out-of-town buyers, and get their orders in on time. Those who send telegrams after 10 o'clock a. m., expecting to have stock shipped at once, are almost sure to be disappointed, as by that time, in the present scarcity, it has all been doled out with nobody getting a third of what they wanted.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons are continually busy with balls and receptions, many of them quite elaborate. The decorations of a large military ball at the Bellevue-Stratford the past week were greatly admired.

Alfred M. Campbell and wife attended the carnation convention in Chicago, where Mr. Campbell won a first prize with a vase of 100 Laddie. His house of 10,000 plants of this variety is looking very fine.

Charles H. Grakelow was in Detroit and Chicago last week attending the meeting of the directors of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association and the carnation convention.

UNFAVORABLE WEATHER LIMITS SUPPLY.

There has been little change in the condition of the market since our notes of January 24 were written. Steady winter weather has continued, with light falls of snow and practically no sunshine. As a consequence, the supply of stock continues limited, very noticeable in roses, of which there has not been enough to supply the demand. The increasing supply of bulbous stock helps out, and it is hoped that in another week or two there will be a more regular supply of roses. So far as we can learn, roses are off crop at almost all the ranges. That, coupled with the long period of unfavorable weather, accounts for the shortage. The color in pink roses has also deteriorated. Tulips are now arriving with a fair length of stem. Freesias, as compared with some other stocks, are in moderate supply. There is also an increase in the shipments of Trumpet Major narcissus, but it is not yet plentiful and holds around $2 per dozen. Considering the shortage and the high prices, many of the retailers are to be commended for keeping their ice boxes so well filled. As might be expected, they receive sarcastic remarks from some customers, but they do their best to keep up stock.

January 26.—The situation in cut flowers is almost critical if the retailers are to continue to do business with natural flowers. There is less complaint about high prices than there is about the inability to secure enough stock at any price. There is an increased demand for funeral work with a minimum of stock. It is a condition in which one branch of the trade is as badly off as the other, as the growers are burning a lot of coal to get a few flowers.

NOTES.

A new organization, the Wholesale Florists, Inc., is now holding the attention of the trade of this city and vicinity. The capital stock is $50,000, and the following officers have been elected: Horace E. Froment, president; Edward C. Horan, treasurer; A. M. Henshaw, secretary. Others in the corporation are: J. K. Allen, P. J. Smith, F. Dolansky, McDonald Co., Henshaw Floral Co., M. C. Ford, J. J. Coan, Roman J. Irwin, Jos. S. Fenrich, Samuel Gilbert, Clarence Slinn, Barney B. Jacobs Co., and I. Goldstein. All these firms and individuals are now in West 28th street, and excepting E. C. Horan and Jos. S. Fenrich, are located between Sixth and Seventh avenues. As outlined in THE AMERICAN FLORIST some weeks ago, the encroachments of other lines of business has made a removal from West 28th street imperative. The new corporation has leased what was formerly known as the Siegel-Cooper, and later as the Greenhut, building, located at Sixth avenue and 18th street. They will have ample space for their business on one floor, the remaining floors being occupied by other lines of business. It is expected that the necessary changes in the building will be completed by April 15, when they will take possession. We will add that the majority of these men are veterans in the wholesale business. The others, who have not been so long engaged, have shown themselves active and enterprising. The officers are men of long experience and high standing in the trade. THE AMERICAN FLORIST extends to this enterprise its sincere congratulations and best wishes.

At a sale of real estate, formerly the property of the late Mrs. Russell Sage, there was spirited bidding on the former Sage home, located at 604 Fifth avenue, between Forty-eighth and Forty-ninth streets. It has an assessed valuation of $430,000, and was finally knocked down to Mr. Dreicer for $441,000. It was later stated that the buyer was acting for Charles Thorley, the well-known florist.

Fire in the Ritz-Carlton hotel, on the night of January 22, broke up a wedding celebration, and also spoiled the decorations—floral and mural—of the grand ballroom, which was flooded with water and so filled with smoke that one fireman was overcome.

Frank Millang, Sr., and wife started January 14, by steamer, for New Orleans. They expected to visit Cuba, and, returning to New Orleans, proceed from there to Los Angeles, Calif. They will be absent from home about three months.

Roman J. Irwin, who has a thriving seed and plant business at 108 West 28th street, will be compelled to move by February 1. Other removals have been brought about by changes in ownership and increased rents.

Friends of Harry Riedel will regret to learn that ill health is forcing him to relinquish business, at least for a time. He will go to an agreeable resort for a long rest, and we hope eventually to see him again on the job.

E. Allen Pierce, of Waltham, Mass., stopped in this city, January 26, returning from the carnation meeting and exhibition at Chicago. He thought the exhibition was good, but limited in extent.

The next meeting of the florists' club will be held in the Engineering building, 25-33 West 39th street, on the night of February 9. A good attendance and interesting session is expected.

Charles H. Tolty came in from Ithaca, N. Y., January 20, where he had delivered a lecture before the students of the horticultural department of Cornell University.

A. C. Barber, of the Park Floral Co., Cleveland, O., was recently in this city, and called on A. M. Westwood, the Pennsylvania Terminal florist.

We have received an invitation to attend the annual dinner of the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society at Morristown, January 28.

W. R. Nicholson, of Framingham, Mass., is reported ill with influenza.

Tomato Breeding for Seed.

Breeding tomatoes has demonstrated the principle that the plant as a whole is the unit of selection, according to the Pennsylvania State College agricultural experiment station in Bulletin No. 147. When seed is selected, fruit should be used only from those plants which produce a large percentage of desirable fruit, rather than from the very superior fruits on poor plants. To obtain best results, the seed from each plant should be planted separately since not all plants which appear desirable are able to transmit their superior qualities.

POTATO growers in the Red River valley report but few stocks left in storage at the end of January. Prices, however, are lower at present than two weeks ago, the change being from $6 down to $4.75 per 100 pounds.

FIRM belief in the future prosperity of the United States is splendidly supported by the East Coast Hothouse Operators, Inc., vegetable growers of Millington, N. J., in the recent placing of an order with the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., Chicago, for 54 greenhouses, 36x333 feet, representing an investment of some $800,000.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, $4.00 to $6.50; celery, Michigan, square box, $2.75 to $3.25; leaf lettuce, per tomato box, 35 to 40 cents; radishes, per dozen bunches, 90 cents; tomatoes, per pound, 15 to 40 cents.

New York, Jan. 26.—Celery, per crate, $3.00 to $10.00; cucumbers, per dozen, $1.00 to $3.00; mushrooms, 75 cents to $2.25 per three pound basket; tomatoes, per pound, 5 to 40 cents; lettuce, per dozen, 50 cents to $1.00; radishes, per 100 bunches, $2.00 to $6.00.

Vegetable Markets.

Reports to the United States department of agriculture for the period, January 20-27, indicate fair values were upheld with decreasing shipments. The general tone of the potato market was strong with prices showing somewhat irregular gains. Haulings continued generally light. Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota No. 1 round whites, sacked, advanced about 15 cents at shipping points, closing at $4.50-$4.60 per 100 pounds and strengthened in middlewestern markets to a range of $4.75-$5 for sales to jobbers. Colorado white stock closed strong at $3.80 to $4 per 100 pounds, wagonloads cash to growers. Idaho Rurals also advanced closing at $3.75 to $4, a gain of about 20 cents, while Russets closed at $4 to $4.10, and Russets held during the week in Chicago market at $5.75 to $6. New York sacked round whites closed at $4.50 to $4.75 f. o. b. with movement improving, a gain of about 25 cents over last week. Consuming markets advanced irregularly to $4.50 to $5.15 for this stock. Maine Green Mountains closed at $3.90 to $4 bulk per 100 pounds, f. o. b. shipping points compared with $3.80 to $3.85 last week. New York jobbing market closed at $4.85 to $5 per 100 pounds bulk as against $4.15 to $4.60 last week. Cabbage prices advanced slightly in consuming markets with values at shipping points generally maintained. Demand and movement were moderate. Western New York Danish seed stock ranged during week $95-$110 per ton bulk f. o. b. with $95-$100 prevailing. This stock ranged in consuming markets mostly at $110 to $130 per ton bulk. New Florida Wakefield held firm at $3 to $3.50 per 1½ bushel hamper. California Winningstadt closed at $5 to $5.25 compared with $4.25 to $4.50 last week. St. Louis quoted Texas cabbage steady at $7 per crate of 100 pounds.

Columbus, O.

SHORT SUPPLY LIMITS TRADE VOLUME.

There is a strong demand for all cut flowers in this market, but the scarcity of stocks is restricting the volume of business to a large degree. This is becoming more marked as the influenza grows more general. As a large part of the supply of flowers comes from the Chicago market, the epidemic has caused a restriction in the supply. The scarcity is principally in roses and carnations, where there is an exceedingly strong demand. Roses are very scarce, and sell from $6 to $12 per dozen. They are mostly Ophelia, Russell, Ward, Columbia and Sunburst. The quality is exceedingly good. Carnations sell in the neighborhood of $3 per dozen, and are also of excellent quality. Some calls for sweet peas are reported, and the supply is more plentiful than for roses and carnations. Violets are also in good demand and the receipts are adequate for all needs. They retail at $2 per bunch. Plants are in good favor and the sales run largely towards cyclamens and primroses. Prices on all varieties are high. Some of the spring flowers are now appearing and find ready buyers. They are mostly jonquils and freesias. There are quite a few receptions and weddings scheduled in the near future and a good demand is anticipated as a result. Funeral work has been especially active, and a large part of the cut flowers have been used in that way.

NOTE.

The Acme Floral Co. is the name of a new concern which has opened for business, with the McDonald & Steube Grocery Co., on East Gay street. The concern is operated by Edward Stoughton and William Holstein. The latter was formerly in the retail business in Toledo, O. A space of 75 feet on one side of the storeroom, on the first floor, is turned over to flowers, and in addition the entire basement will be used.

"Hamburg Late Pink" Chrysanthemum

Picture was taken Dec. 6, 1919, and will give a good idea of what "Hamburg Late Pink" looks like when grown to single stems and planted six inches each way.

"Hamburg Late Pink" is an improved late pink Maud Dean, having more petals, and if grown for late will hardly ever show an open center.

The average grower of chrysanthemums must have varieties which are easy to handle and from which he can cut as near 100% of perfect blooms as possible. "Hamburg Late Pink" has been grown for the last four years, and produces a very high proportion of good flowers. It is not an exhibition variety, but, for late pink, one of the best for commercial purposes. It can be had in bloom the latter part of November by taking an early bud, but some of the flowers will show open centers; but by selecting late buds, after October 1st, most of the flowers are cut during December, and would advise to select late buds, as the later buds will hardly ever show an open center, and some flowers can be had even in January.

Keeping qualities are excellent, and where a graceful pink flower is wanted, "Hamburg Late Pink" cannot be surpassed. "Hamburg Late Pink" will be disseminated in the spring of 1920. Plants will be ready March 1st, 1920, and all orders will be filled in rotation.

Rooted Cuttings (by parcel post)...$16.00 per 100; $150.00 per 1000

SHREDDED CATTLE

MANURE

PROTECTS YOUR CROP

It is direct heat dried and sterilized, weed seeds, grass seeds, fungus and disease germs destroyed in a direct heat rotary drying process that does not change or destroy any of the valuable elements in crude manure.

Air dried manures cannot be sterilized and usually carry excess moisture that actually makes them cost more per ton than WIZARD BRAND even at the same or a lower price.

Look for the WIZARD BRAND Trade Mark tagged or printed on every bag. If it is not there you are not getting WIZARD BRAND protection for your crop and pocket book.

Your dealer can get WIZARD BRAND for you if you insist or we will quote with freight rate on any quantity from a bag to a carload promptly.

Valentine Plants and Flowers.

Large Field For Artistic Work.

This floral festival ranks about sixth in importance, as compared with other flower days, coming now next to Mothers' day in the volume of business it brings to the flower shop. As the sentiment of this quite generally observed holiday can best be expressed in, or with flowers, it affords a great opportunity for exploiting business in all the products of the flower shop. Instead of being sixth in the race, it could, with earnest co-operation of the trade, be moved up to third position, coming in ahead of Memorial, Thanksgiving and Mothers' days.

The possibilities are wonderful, the orders being limited only to the number of the fair sex, the daughters of the nation—each, somebody's sweetheart and valentine. It is a business which cannot be built up in one year, but if the trade became awakened to the opportunity, and worked together, the day could be made so popular that the custom of sending flowers to every sweetheart, old and young, would become universal. The way to bring this much desired condition about is for each to do his share, and a little more. In the first place, work up, in one's own mind, a confidence and enthusiasm that such a demand is possible. Enthusiasm is the mainspring in all great undertakings; one must have faith and belief in their work or there will be no progress. The day must be so featured in connection with flowers and their effective use in carrying the message of St. Valentine, that the public generally will become interested. To purchase and send flowers will then be thought the right thing to do, and soon become the custom. Then all energies will be concentrated not on how to get, but the best way to manage the great business developed.

In connection with well arranged displays in the flower shops, there should be appropriate circulars calling attention to the use of flowers as being most fitting for valentines and that February 14 is "Sweethearts' day," when every heart, both old and young, should be gladdened with its gift of blooms. A great help will be effective propaganda through the columns of the daily press. It is work that should be intelligently done by capable newspaper writers. The cost would be very small, indeed, as compared with the great benefits to be derived from such publicity.

The Flowers Available.

The cut flower supply this year bids fair to be less in quantity and variety than ever before. All the short-stemmed, small-bud roses, such as Pink Killarney and Mrs. Aaron Ward, are so scarce as to be almost out of the market. These were formerly depended on for small baskets and corsages. Carnations are very high in price, with only half the production of last season. Sweet peas that are now so popular, while in larger supply, will not nearly equal the production of a year ago. Calendulas will help some. Early spring bulbs, daffodils, tulips, etc., will be seen, and there will be a fair amount of freesias and forget-me-nots. Cattleyas, gardenias, violets and lily of the valley about complete the list of available flowers.

Vase baskets, small hampers, "kiddies" and other figures supporting or concealing vases for cut flowers, are the up-to-date arrangements for filling. Some of the baskets and hampers are quite elaborate, being hand-painted and decked with choice ribbons.

There are all sorts of combinations possible in the filling of the various receptacles, the main object being to make a good showing with the least flowers. Of great assistance, will be plants of the Primulas malacoides and Townsendii; with the soil shaken or washed from the roots, and bound with a little moss, they can be used to good effect in place of some of the flowers, their wealth of bloom and foliage toning in well with those of any other color. Almost any combination of flowers will be found acceptable to some one. The ribbon finish, with a red heart seal or two, or a valentine card showing conspicuously, marks it as a valentine gift.

The corsage is always popular. A bunch of violets, single or double, while beautiful in itself, can have, as a finish, a spot of Sweetheart roses, a cattleya or two, some gardenias or lily of the valley. Sweet peas, when nicely arranged, are as satisfactory as anything. They, too, can have, as an addition, any of the above flowers. Cattleyas are, of course, very choice, and can be made to go farther with sprays of the baby primroses or malacoides, as the colors blend well together. The accompanying ribbon can be stamped with small heart or cupid seals, which come in various designs. They also look pretty on the outside of the box or package, when tied up.

Plants for Valentines.

Flowering plants can be turned to good account and used as valentines the same as the flowers, where it is desired to remember a friend or relative. Cyclamens and primulas are now at their best, and these can be featured in a number of ways. Small to medium-sized handle baskets, suitable for a four to six-inch pot, will, with a plant to fit, and a touch of ribbon on the handle with valentine seals, look very attractive. Several of the primulas may be grouped in a fern pan, which when decorated with paper, mat or wicker cover, will suit the customer who wants something a little better. The small rectangular wicker box, with handles at the ends, which holds one row of four-inch plants, makes a good showing planted either with cyclamens or Primula malacoides. Bows of ribbon at each handle, connected across the front with a loop of the same dotted with hearts, makes it an appropriate gift. A basket of foliage and flowering plants is made more attractive with a small heart-shaped box of candy, showing more or less conspicuously.

Window Displays.

For at least a week or 10 days before the event, the window and store interior should reflect the coming of St. Valentine in no unmistakable manner. The windows, particularly, should be so attractive that every passerby will want to stop and take a look, even coming across the street to do so. A large hollow, heart, frame, with vases to hold bunches of sweet peas, making, when filled, a huge heart of these flowers, is a good window piece. A number of the arrangements described above can be used to make a very noticeable and attractive window. Heart shaped boxes for corsages are appropriate, and look well in the window, or grouped with other features, in the store.

The valentine posters and small posterettes being issued by the national publicity committee should be used freely. They are far ahead of anything ever introduced to feature the day. All letters and packages should carry one of the posterettes, while the large posters should be used on the delivery autos, in the window, and about the store. They cannot fail to make an impression on everyone who sees them.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

It now looks as if the great shortage of flowers, the most remarkable the country has ever experienced, is over, at least for this year, the shipments the past week having increased perceptibly and give promise of soon returning to normal for the season. Fact is stranger than fiction, as the wildest dreams of the grower could never have believed Golden Spur daffodils could be sold for $3.00 per dozen, yet they brought this figure in the wholesale market a week ago. However, while the past month has been one of great trial, it is not without its compensations, as florists have learned how to make the most of their scant material, and a new value has been placed on flowers that it is hoped will be maintained at least to a degree. While a certain class of people are attracted by reduction or bargain sales, resorted to as selling devices by merchants in many lines, there is little of profit to the buyer, as very few are genuine. People who feel they are getting value for their money, will pay the price. What they want is value and service. It is not difficult to give just a little more than is expected, which trifling extra is productive of much good will that is the greatest asset in business.

As flowers become more plentiful, every effort should be made to keep customers posted. Values will recede to lower levels, and the patrons of the store are to be encouraged to buy freely at prices that will not seem forbidding, and at the same time, show a good profit. The florist who is afraid to ask a price for his plants and flowers, that will insure a good profit, is a detriment to business; he makes no money himself, and prevents others from giving a better service.

This will be valentine week, which event should be the feature to be displayed and kept prominently to the front until the day is past. There are thousands of buyers in every large city, and to a less extent in smaller communities, who should, but seldom, if ever, pay any attention to the day. Sentiment is the soul of Valentine's day, and flowers give expression to affairs of the heart and carry the tender message direct and true. It is sweetheart's day, when all lovers, both old and young, should be remembered with flowers. It is a charming custom that if properly featured, and kept before the public, would in time become universal.

Almost everything in plants and flowers, and their combinations, can be made into suitable valentines. Pots of all kinds of blooming plants, if placed in pot covers or baskets, or decorated with paper, tied with colored cords, and given a valentine touch with cardboard hearts or arrows and other like novelties, will be just the thing to send to an aged relative or friend, who will be sure to appreciate such a gift. Small vase baskets with sweet peas, a knot of ribbon at the handle stamped with valentine seals, are good for sale at a nominal price. Corsages of all the standard flowers are first choice with many, to be delivered in heart shaped boxes. A display of these in the window, together with decorated plants, will draw attention to the day. Heart-shaped hampers filled with choice flowers are also popular. There should be a good use of the S. A. F. stamps and posters.

VALENTINE FLOWERS AND PLANTS.
Small Vase Basket of Assorted Flowers and Valentine Chiffon.

Pussy willows and forsythia sprays should be carried in stock; they help out in basket work, and give a spring time look to boxes of cut flowers.

Sweet peas are now more plentiful and can be depended on until the season closes. The higher grades are choice enough for the best work, while shorter lengths of stem are a great help for all sorts of designs. Freesia is at its best. It is a great favorite with many, the delightful fragrance and white waxy flowers on long stems, arranging well with many other flowers.

Pansies are popular. Any florist making a specialty and carrying a stock of these little blossoms, will soon work up a profitable trade in them. Wreaths of pansies are distinct and stand out in any collection. They make a very showy corsage bouquet, and are especially useful in topping off a box of flowers.

This will be a good opportunity to get out-of-town business through the F. T. D. "Send Floral Valentines by Wire" will attract and suggest to some persons an opportunity to remember a distant friend.

Initiative.

One of the greatest forces of the successful business man is—initiative; the power to originate, to look ahead and foresee the trend of public demand in his line, and in this way, keep a step or two in the lead, ahead of his competitors. While they are waiting for something to turn up, or making up their minds what to do, he has long before made his decision, stocked up with goods, and is busy creating a demand for articles that others find difficult to get, or imitate.

To the man with this creative ability, one new idea follows another in rapid succession. Originality is seen in every move he makes. The retail florist who is imbued with this progressive spirit, is always working up something attractive, this he hopes will interest his customers; a novel window display, featuring a new arrangement of cut flowers, or something original in filled plant baskets. The interior of the store will present such a changed appearance over that of the week before, that customers will comment favorably on how much better it looks, when as a matter of fact, it is only the same stock and fixtures differently arranged.

Every made-up arrangement of cut flowers that goes out of the shop, is nearly always sure to have some little distinctive feature that will make it noticeable in a collection of similar pieces. The box of cut flowers is always given a finishing touch, an outside decoration that costs but a trifle, but makes it distinctive. The inside also has a topping off or finish that is also sure to get an admiring look before being disturbed. These things do not have to be done; they are not on the order sheet, but the man with the initiative cannot help but give these finishing touches. It is second nature to him, and it is returned many times, both in money and prestige.

VALENTINE FLOWERS AND PLANTS.
Corsage of Cattleyas and Primula Malacoides.

Men with this progressive spirit are never satisfied; they are always going out of the beaten path. This is especially noticeable in their methods of advertising, every opportunity being turned to good account. There are notable examples in this line shown by celebrated retail florists of Boston and New York, whose originality in publicity methods has made them famous, and leaders of the trade in their communities.

In the greenhouse, men with initiative keep up the most intensive use of ground or table space, having a new crop as far advanced as possible, so as to immediately replace the one just sold out, thus keeping every foot of bench room pulling all the time. Little cultural wrinkles that advance the flowering period, or produce a better grade of stock are always being tried out. The man who first pinched the forcing rose to get a longer stem, and perhaps a better market season, had initiative, and introduced cultural methods that entirely changed the "let well enough alone" system. It took the initiative of an amateur rose grower to build the first large rose house, and which was the forerunner of the mammoth houses that are now considered standard.

There are many who are satisfied to take things as they come, to let well enough alone, but the world moves. There is a progressive spirit in every community, and more or less in every one of its business interests.

Men with initiative made possible the auto delivery car, which has displaced the one-time good enough horse and wagon. A noted and successful florist has said, that the way to do a better business, is to do business better, which means that every facility, both of head and hand, should be brought to play in planning and promoting the education of the public to the various uses for plants and flowers, by up to date publicity ideas in local and national advertising. Perfected methods in display in stores and improved service in all the various manipulations, from the grower to the ultimate consumer, are necessary to success. In short, put your best foot forward. Keep everlastingly at it. Make a bid for the business, and it will come to you.

Store Interiors.

The greatest incentive in winning patronage is a well arranged store in which the various articles of stock are displayed so as to show them at their best. It is said that "clothes make the man," and it is equally certain that the well dressed store is, in its effect on all visitors, together with its enhanced selling power, well worth all the time and attention given to it.

In the first place, it should be kept clean, particularly the floor, the covering of which, be it tile, mastic, linoleum or just stain, will, if kept rubbed up and new looking, add much to the neat appearance of the show room.

All plants and flowers, and most of the accessories of the business, show to greater advantage against a light background, so all fixtures should be white or, except in contrast, such shades that will not absorb, but reflect light. A good, bright light is necessary to show goods to the best advantage. Many flower shops are greatly handicapped for want of the light necessary to show their stock off to advantage. Those who work there day after day, become accustomed to the dull illumination, but to the caller from the bright street outside, the lack of light is very noticeable. The effect or contrast is the same as seen in the dull or brilliantly illuminated windows, the first being passed by almost without notice, while the eye catches at once the goods displayed in the other.

Articles that people are not particularly interested in or new things it is desired to bring to their notice, should be featured or given the best publicity that location and light can afford. They must be seen to be sold.

In many shops, plants stand around in irregular groups without any thought as to their decorative arrangement. The same stock, with pot covers and stands, will present a very much better appearance. Ferns in jardinieres, particularly specimens that stand apart by themselves, are much more attractive and salable. Everything in the flower shop, especially that displayed in the show room, should be in the best possible condition for sale. All passe plants, those with damaged leaves or out of flower, should be at once replaced with fresh stock. So often they are doctored up and kept standing around just to fill in, a positive detriment, doing much more harm than good.

Frequent rearrangement of the movable tables, stands, and groupings of the plants add a newness to the interior that is well worth while. Many articles in which it appears hard at times to interest customers, will, in various combinations, stand out and become more noticeable. Small printed cards, calling attention to their good points or utility, are helpful.

Whenever the condition of the market will permit, there should be exhibitions of arranged baskets or vases of flowers. Many vase baskets hold long stemmed roses or other long stemmed sprays, and display them as well or, even better, than in the stock jars. Combined with green or in combination with other flowers, they present a decorative effect that will prove very attractive, and at the same time are salable as loose flowers, or to be used in any other manner.

A cheval floor mirror is an almost indispensable article of store furniture, as it can be changed about, and always adds a finish to any grouping. Folding screens are also decorative. They lend themselves to any kind of manipulation, and make a good background for small groups of flowering plants.

It is always best to make any rearrangements in the evening, as if attempted in the morning, early orders are apt to interfere, and it is shopping time before things are straightened out.

Reminder System for Anniversaries.

Every business man has certain anniversaries which he must observe and the florist who sets out to help him observe them will render a real service to all concerned. Too many business men now lose prestige with their families and their friends by overlooking dates which they have had in the back of their heads for some time past, but which, unfortunately, failed to assert themselves in time to do any good.

One florist in a middle western city has adopted a form which promises to eliminate this forgetfulness on the part of his patrons. A circular letter was sent his mailing list of customers, which yielded rich returns. It read:

"There are a number of anniversaries which may slip your attention unless you apply the same system which you use in your business. Our business is to take care of yours, at least as far as social affairs are concerned. If you will fill out the enclosed card, we will notify you several days in advance of each date, so that you can make the necessary preparations. This does not obligate you to buy flowers. The information you give us will, of course, be held as strictly confidential. We wish only to help you."

The enclosed card gave a list of the legal and sentimental holidays in that state, with the question: "Is there any particular person you wish to remember on these dates? Shall we notify you several days before each?" Some of the questions on this form were: "Married? If so, please give date and name of wife. What is her favorite flower?" "Birthdays. Have you a mother, wife, sweetheart? Please give dates, names, addresses and favorite flowers of each. We will notify you several days before the anniversary."

Response from this letter and card was really startling. It indicated that business men feel the need of such a service in the keenest possible way. The florist has taken over something which was a burden to the individuals, but which may be easily handled by the simplest tickler system. He also has minimized "rush" orders, which in many establishments, are of such volume that they thoroughly upset the working schedule which has been made and result in toil in the late hours of the night.

All of this rush business can not be systematized, of course, but the plan indicated has done much to minimize it. Funerals are without the scope of any system yet devised, but if all of the business which can be is regulated, the big volume of business which attends many funerals can be absorbed without difficulty.

TAX ON CUT FLOWERS PROPOSED.

Every sale of flowers amounting to more than 20 cents will be taxable, under the terms of a bill which has been introduced in the House of Representatives by Congressman Bacharach of New Jersey. The measure provides for the repeal of the present taxes on luxuries, soft drinks, profits, etc., and the substitution therefor of a tax on retail sales, raw materials and real estate. The new tax on retail sales would be one cent for each dollar or fraction thereof on sales between 20 cents and $500, and of five cents for each dollar or fraction thereof on sales of more than $500. No tax would apply on sales of less than 20 cents, and where more than one article is sold in one transaction, the tax would be computed on the total of all articles sold. The tax would be collected in the same manner as the soda and other taxes; that is, the customer would pay it to the merchant at the time of the sale and the latter would report and make payment to the treasury department under regulations which the bill provides shall be promulgated by the secretary of the treasury. A retail sales tax, in the opinion of Representative Bacharach, would do much to reduce the present high cost of living, which he declares is due in large measure to the excess profits and other taxes which are "pyramided" by every dealer through whose hands a taxable commodity passes until the consumer is forced to pay four or five times the amount contemplated by the revenue law, while every merchant adds on his "bit" to the price to cover the profits tax. "While this tax is to be paid by the consumer at the time the purchase is made," he said, "the amount of the tax is so small that it will be very much cheaper for the consumer to pay it than to pay the excess profits tax which is now in force and which pyramids through each sales operation."

It is confidently expected in many quarters that Congress will repeal the excess profits tax, but as it will be necessary to devise some means of making up the revenue which that levy brings in, members of the house committee on ways and means, of which Mr. Bacharach is a member, have been casting about for a tax which will bring in the money, and yet not be as distasteful to the public. In Mr. Bacharach's opinion, a retail sales tax is the most advisable of these measures, since it will raise even more than is received from excess profits, while at the same time eliminating all profiteering in taxes by merchants.

HORTICULTURAL SALES IN URUGUAY.

Seeds, plants and farm stock and equipment may be sold in Uruguay through the government of that country, according to information which has just been received by the department of agriculture. The Uruguayan government has created a number of departments for the protection and development of agricultural, dairying and stock-raising industries in that country, through which American concerns may distribute catalogues and advertising matter. Matter of this nature should be sent to the governmental departments only for their distribution, and not with the idea of making sales to them, it is pointed out. "If well illustrated and attractive catalogues were issued in the Spanish language, and mailed to appropriate sections, it would be a very effective means of advertising American products," it is declared in the report received by the department of agriculture.

Following are the names and addresses of the departments which will handle these matters: Seeds: Comision Oficial de Semillas, Cerrito 572, Montevideo. Trees: Vivero Nacional de Toledo, Estacion Toledo. Montevideo. Planting and Sowing: Inspeccion Nacional de Ganaderia y Agricultura, Cerrito 572, Montevideo. Forest, fruit and shade tree culture: Same as for planting and sowing. Fine seed (pedigreed), wheat, corn, linseed, etc.: Semillero Nacional de La Estanzuela, Estanzuela, Departamento de Colonia, Uruguay.

TRAVELING EXPENSES AND INCOME TAX.

A bill to permit traveling salesmen and respesentatives of business concerns to deduct their road expenses, when preparing their income tax returns, has been introduced in Congress by Representative Jacoway of Arkansas. At the present time, business men when on the road are not permitted by the revenue law to deduct their ordinary living expenses, even when paid out of their own pockets, and in addition to the maintenance of a permanent home. Under the terms of Mr. Jacoway's measure, Section 214 of the revenue law would be amended so as to permit the deduction, in paying income tax, of "all the ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred during the taxable year, in carrying on any trade or business, including a reasonable allowance for salaries or other compensation for personal services actually rendered; traveling expenses, including meals and lodging while away from home, incurred in the pursuit of trade or business, and rentals or other payments required to be made as a condition to the continued use or possession, for purposes of the trade or business, of property to which the taxpayer has not taken, or is not taking title, or in which he has no equity." Legislation of this nature has been sought by business men for a long time, upon the ground that traveling expenses were legitimate expenses incurred in connection with the operation of a business and, as such, should be deductible from income tax returns.

NATIONAL PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

The publicity committee held a two-day meeting, January 21-22, at Chicago, at which working plans were formulated for the 1920 campaign, and in greater part adopted. There is to be no let-up in the activities of the campaign, and the magazine advertising is to be as persistent as ever. The committee was greatly pleased at the reports it had received as to the results of the campaign. Many florists making these reports had taken particular pains to record conversations had with new and old customers, from which it was quite evident that the campaign was producing good business. Some of these reports referred to a noticeably great increase in the demand for flowers for anniversary gifts. The request that our slogan appear on the cards sent with such gifts was very general, and showed a disposition on the part of the public to adapt the slogan to their own use.

We surely have a wonderful slogan, one serving two purposes. We can easily understand why publicity experts consider it to be an asset we should value at more than a million dollars. It is really worth many millions to us, and properly perpetuated it should produce business each year equal to its valuation. It would not be wrong to say it is doing it already. And yet, there are thousands of florists who, through their negligence in the support of our campaign, do not appear to value the slogan very highly. Or is it that they are careless, or quite content to let their more generous brethren bear the expense of making the slogan a "household phrase?" We would ask these careless ones, just what it would be worth to them to have "Say it With Flowers" quoted or suggested in every good family in their respective communities daily, or even a portion of these families. Our advertisements in the magazines should be doing this very thing, and to be sure that they are doing it, the slogan should appear in every magazine of consequence. It would, if the proper support were given the publicity committee. The committee is limited only by the amount of the funds at its disposal. If it could have the support which now it has right and reason to expect it could accomplish its full purpose instead of having to be content with what, at best, is only a good scratch in the field of publicity.

Now is a good time to come into the campaign. The committee is assured, by subscriptions already pledged, of being able to carry out plans within a certain scope, but without a prospect for the advance which it hopes to make when the required support is available. It should be placed in a position to at least double the results already obtained, the possibility of which cannot be questioned. The benefit sought is not for the individual, nor for any particular section of the trade, but is for the whole craft, the whole industry. Florists who link up with the campaign through their local publicity, aided by the various helps furnished by our promotion bureau, get a full measure of the general publicity. Display the slogan sign wherever possible; use the electrotypes featuring the magazine advertisements, and help to spread the message of the slogan at every opportunity.

Above all, if you have not already subscribed to the campaign fund, let the secretary have your pledge, in whatever amount you can afford, to support the campaign during 1920.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Generosity of Purpose.

Who will doubt the generosity of the florist of today, if the purpose be worthy? Those who went to Chicago to see the carnation display, despite the fact that carnations were bringing the highest prices, and also the scarcity of blooms with which every exhibitor in the show was handicapped, saw at the La Salle hotel, one of the finest exhibitions of carnations, which proved conclusively the generosity of purpose on behalf of those who exhibited. And out of all this, does it not prove that we have men within our ranks who put purpose and development ahead of the almighty dollar, which too many of us feel is one of the purposes of life.

How about further development of flowers, whether it be carnations or roses, or all other flowers and plants? How many of us consider the higher purpose and the further progress of flowers, by doing something for this cause? Of course, we cannot all exhibit prize winning blooms at exhibitions, as at Chicago or elsewhere, but we can do our part in sharing in the expense of the national campaign, which is merely another form of progressiveness, where everyone joins in the general good thus created. This you can do, and incidentally, you are helping yourself.

The carnation exhibition at Chicago was a credit to the organization who felt the importance, and willingly showed they were big enough for their job. It was an effort well worth its energy. More success to you.

ELEVENTH ANNIVERSARY DINNER NEW YORK WHOLESALE FLORISTS' PROTECTIVE ASS'N, JANUARY 24, 1920.

Now, it is up to us to continue our generosity of purpose, and help with our contribution for the furthering of "Say it With Flowers." As Marcus Aurelius said: "As a horse when he has run; a dog when he has tackled the game; a bee when he has made honey; so a man when he has done a good act, does not call out to others to come and see, but goes on to another act, as a vine goes on to produce again, the grapes in season."

Your giving is an incentive for so much more good to follow, that you will reproduce the biggest harvest you have ever garnished. Try it.

Chairman Nat'l. Publicity Campaign.

D. G. Grillbortzer, Washington, D. C.

VICE-PRES. AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

David G. Grillbortzer, vice-president elect of the American Carnation Society, head of the Washington Floral Company, of Washington, D. C., is soon to celebrate his twenty-fifth anniversary as a florist, and it seems peculiarly fitting that the industry with which he has been identified for that number of years, should at this time honor him with the second highest office at its command.

Mr. Grillbortzer when hardly 16 years of age entered the employ of J. Louis Loose, then a prominent grower of Alexandria, Va., his native city. After serving a five years' apprenticeship in the business, he joined his brother, H. Fred Grillbortzer, in a small undertaking under the firm name of Grillbortzer Bros. They had four small houses, 30 x 100 feet. Today he controls more than 100 times that amount of glass. Three years later the brother died, and the business continued under the name of David G. Grillbortzer. Another interesting contrast is, that when he first started out for himself, he had a capital of $300. Today, besides this large area of glass, he controls the business of the Washington Floral Company, and is handling a large volume of wholesale and retail trade, marketing his own production, and enjoying a growing telegraph delivery business. When, in June, 1918, he had an opportunity to buy out the business of J. Louis Loose, under whom he learned the business, he had approximately 150,000 feet of glass. His purchase about doubled his holdings, and added the store of the Washington Floral Company, on Fourteenth street.

The greenhouses are located in Alexandria, Va., about five miles from the store. While he still specializes to a considerable extent in carnatoins, having as good a stock of these as can be found in this section of the country, he grows a variety of flowers on his large range. For instance, he has 3,000 orchid plants, and he is practically the only grower of cattleyas in the vicinity. In the houses are more than 40,000 rose plants, and of other stocks, it is said: "If it is obtainable at all, Grillbortzer will have it."

He has built up his business by honest dealing. His ability and integrity have been recognized before—some years ago he was made president of the Florists' Club of Washington, D. C., and he has always been an active participant in the affairs of that organization. He has taken great interest in the campaigns of the S. A. F. He is a member of the Alexandria chamber of commerce, and of the retail merchants' association. Some years ago Mr. Grillbortzer was granted membership in Alexandria-Washington Lodge of Masons, of which George Washington was the first master, and in the lodge room in Alexandria, the gavel he used, is still wielded to make noisy members subside. He also belongs to Old Dominion Commandery, Scottish Rite, and Acme Temple (Richmond) Order of the Mystic Shrine.

Express Combination to Continue.

The American railway express company, a voluntary organization of the big express corporations of the country for war operation under the railroad administration, will continue as a combination under private operation after relinquishment of government control March 1, it was announced February 3, by George C. Taylor, the president. The probability is that the American railway express will continue to exist indefinitely, as it offers opportunity for more efficient and economical operation of the various companies which comprise it, Mr. Taylor said. It represents in the transportation of express packages what the United States postoffice does in the handling of the mail, he pointed out.

Florists' Organization for Southern Illinois

J. W. Ross, Centralia, Ill., secretary of the pre-organization meeting of florists of southern Illinois, to be held at the city hall, Centralia, February 25, at 1:30 p. m., has addressed the following communication to the trade in that section:

"While at the carnation convention in Chicago, several of the florists of southern Illinois from Springfield and Bloomington south met together, and had a formal session at which it was decided to call a meeting of the members of the trade to meet in Centralia, February 25 for the purpose of organizing, one of the objects of which will be to try to standardize retail prices as near as practical. The high cost of coal, labor and supplies of all kinds used by the retail florist make it imperative that something be done along this line. The milkmen, carpenters, plumbers, painters, coal miners and coal operators are organized. Why not the florists?

"This will be the most important meeting for the florists of this section ever held, and we are asking you to make an extra effort to be here. It is a matter of dollars and cents to every one of us to get together. Why should one florist sell 4-inch geraniums at 15 cents, and his neighbor get 35 cents for one no better; or $1.50 per dozen for carnations, and his neighbor be selling for $3.00, as has been the case this winter?

"Let us get together and standardize prices. See every grower and every retail florist in your district, and try to get them here if possible. Please let me know if you will be able to attend.

"Remember the date, February 25, 1920, at the city hall, Centralia, Ill., one-thirty p. m."

Pittsburgh, Pa.

INCREASED DEMAND HITS MARKET HARD.

Conditions the past week have been worse than anything that was ever experienced in this district, not that the supply is smaller, for there really has been as many, if not more, flowers on the local market than usual for this season of the year, but the demand is so much larger. The orders from the smaller towns have been heavier than ever before, and high prices do not check it, as the cost is no object, so long as they receive the stock. Some of the local retailers are complaining about the high prices, but there is not a day that the wholesale houses could not clean out the transient and out-of-town trade at a much higher price than the regular buyer was billed. The wholesale houses simply take their supply in the morning and divide it up among the regulars and call it a day. They are not taking on any new customers as they have their hands full trying to satisfy the ones they have. The influenza is on the increase, causing a big demand for funeral flowers which can not be furnished. As a consequence, most of the retailers are mixing artificial flowers with the natural wherever possible. The American Beauty shipments arriving here are so small that they are not noticed. Of the roses, Premier and Columbia, in the longer grades, still hold the lead, both in quantity and quality. Carnations are still small in number and of poor quality. Callas are more plentiful, and bring from $3 to $5 per dozen. Some very good snapdragon is arriving ing daily and sells readily at from $2 to $4 per dozen. Jonquils, Paper Whites, tulips and freesia are more abundant and bring high prices. Sweet peas are of fine quality, but have been off crop the past week, but from all reports there should be plenty of them in the near future. Other seasonable flowers arriving include mignonette, calendulas, baby primroses, violets, lilac and orchids, all of which find a ready market on arrival. The trade in this district is now planning for a banner Valentine day, and from all reports, there should be enough stock to take care of it especially in violets and sweet peas, the two most popular flowers for that occasion.

NOTES.

E. J. McCallum, president, and Hugh Boyd, auditor of the McCallum Co., are on a trip of inspection of the Cleveland, Detroit and Cincinnati branches.

At a meeting of the directors of the Mendel Corrugated Paper Box Company of Oakmont, Pa.; E. J. McCallum, was elected vice-president.

John C. Harris, of Harris Brothers, is confined to his bed with influenza, and at last reports he was doing nicely.

The epidemic has hit the McCallum company hard, as four of them are down with the disease at the same time.

Denver, Colo.

JANUARY SHOWS GOOD ENDING.

Business during the past week was better than at any time during January. The call for both cut flowers and plants was very brisk, due to the great amount of sickness prevalent and the volume of funeral work was in accordance. The weather has been exceptionally good, with warm sunshiny days, but the demand for all kinds of stock exceeded the supply.

NOTES.

The New York Flower Store had a good window of flowering plants and baskets of sweet peas, with large ferns for a background.

The American Flower Shop has been attracting attention with tastefully arranged windows of cut flowers and flowering plants.

Louis Kintzele has been supplying this market with excellent long-stemmed, pink, white and yellow snapdragons.

The Boldt-Lundy House of Flowers has been featuring spring plants in quantity which make an excellent display.

At the Alpha Floral Co's. store, there was noted attractive baskets arranged with flowering plants and Pteris Wilsoni.

Iver Erickson is a new addition to the staff of the Mauff Floral Co's. Logan street greenhouses.

Zeal Neff, formerly with the Barteldes Seed Co., is now with the Boldt-Lundy House of Flowers.

Ben Boldt has been showing first-class red tulips in pans.

Nassau County Horticultural Society.

The monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held in Pembroke hall, Glen Cove, N. Y., January 14, President Thomas Twigg occupying the chair. John MacGregor, Maurice Fuld, Thomas Proctor, Norman Bruce and J. M. Brown were elected active members and 10 applications were placed on file. President Twigg appointed Charles Young, Benjamin Sutherland and Frank Watson as judges of the monthly exhibits and their awards were as follows: Twelve carnations, Thomas Twigg; three cut poinsettias, Frank O. Johnson; 25 freesias, Thomas Henderson.

It was decided at this meeting to hold a dinner and President Twigg appointed E. J. Brown, Jack Everett and Ernest Westlake a committee of three to make arrangements and set a date. Harry Goodband was elected trustee to serve for two years to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Robert Jones. Messrs. Wm. Young, Manda, Sperling, Popp and MacGregor were visitors and each made a short talk which the members enjoyed. The exhibits for the next meeting will be 12 roses, mixed; 50 single violets and 12 mushrooms.

LIMITED SUPPLY HOLDS PRICES FIRM.

Trade is in splendid condition as far as demand is concerned. The high prices still continue. Roses are scarce, and the wholesalers are getting stiff figures for all offerings. Practically the same quotations are in force as last week. There seems no immediate relief in sight according to well informed wholesalers and growers. While American Beauties are perhaps more plentiful now than at any other time during the season, the shortage of Russell makes them quick sellers at fancy prices. The supply of carnations is gradually increasing. They are in constant demand these days and are bringing good figures. Matchless is a popular variety, owing to its keeping qualities. The past week has been a most favorable one for the violet growers, owing to the warm weather and a heavy cut is being handled in the wholesale market every morning. Shipping trade for this flower is brisk, while the heavy local demand helps to clean up the supply daily. Paper Whites are more plentiful, and are in much demand for funeral work. The supply of freesias has increased considerably with a corresponding drop in prices. Colored varieties, however, still bring high returns. There has also been a largely augmented supply of daffodils. The call for these is so consistent that prices remain as last quoted. Sweet peas are becoming more plentiful, but are still bringing $2.00 per dozen small bunches. There is now an ample supply of cattleyas, and stock of the finest quality is seen everywhere. The prices have dropped a little, owing to the large supply. Gardenias are also more in evidence than for some time past. The stores are now receiving the first outdoor flowers of the year of Acacia Baileyana, probably the finest of all acacias. It is moving fast, as it has always been a favorite in this market. The heavy demand for funeral flowers has brought galax and mahonia leaves to the fore, and this stock is moving fast. In pot plants, cinerarias, primulas and cyclamens are about all there is to select from if flowering plants are wanted. There is an ample supply of all other decorative stock.

NOTES.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co. is showing a fine assortment of pot plants at their Powell street store. They find ericas to be great favorites. All this stock is grown at the firm's greenhouses in San Mateo. A fine stock of rhododendrons and azaleas is also being grown here for the Easter trade. Dan MacRorie, who spends most of his time at the greenhouses, says the plant trade is in much better condition this year than since 1916. They are doing a large amount of planting this year.

At the greenhouses of Eric James, at Elmhurst, all hands are busy on Easter stock. Many thousand roses are being grown in various designs this spring. They are all in the finest possible condition, and promise to be as good as in former years. All the houses containing foliage plants and nephrolepis are being rapidly brought into condition.

H. Plath, of the Ferneries, is supplying the market with a splendid lot of primulas. They are of sturdy growth and full of flower and are meeting with ready sale. He says the out-of-town demand for ferns and other foliage plants is brisk, keeping his shipping force busy at all times.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. have their store artistically arranged with a great variety of foliage and flowering plants. Frank Pelicano says funeral trade has been quite heavy of late, many large designs being turned out daily.

The wholesale house of J. A. Axell is a busy establishment. Shipping trade is keeping up here steadily, and shows no sign of abating. Some very fine colored freesias are being received here, which are decidedly popular.

The Western Evergreen Company is handling a fine lot of Acacia Baileyana and flowering eucalyptus in variety. They report a good demand for these spring flowers. The call for asparagus is far ahead of the supply.

John Carbone, the orchid specialist at Berkeley, is cutting a large crop of cattleyas daily for this market. All his plants are in vigorous growth, showing Mr. Carbone's skill as a grower.

JAMES T. LYNCH.

State Florists' Association of Indiana.

The monthly meeting of the State Florists' Association of Indiana was held at Indianapolis, February 3, Herman Junge, of the Smith & Young Co., of that city, presiding in the absence of President Anders Rasmussen, of New Albany and the vice-president. Mr. Jung paved the way for active work in the entertainment of delegates to the meeting of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association at the Indiana capital next fall by naming Irwin Bertermann chairman of the local committee with instructions to appoint his colleagues, and the social features of the fall meeting will be given attention as soon as this committee can be organized in the near future.

The following were admitted to membership in the state association: William Julius, Jeffersonville; Adam Scheidler, Muncie, and Clarence H. Hirth, Indianapolis. Other names were passed to be acted upon at the next meeting.

Secretary Oliver E. Steinkamp was authorized to take up with F. Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette, the question of a special meeting to be held in that city in February. If the association's members there find it convenient to receive the visitors at their ranges at that time, the trip will probably be made as the seedling carnations are reported to be in unusually fine condition. If held, this special meeting will take the place of the regular March gathering.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Eliza Steincke.

Mrs. Eliza Steincke, widow of the late A. W. Steincke, died at her home, 2450 Fort street west, Detroit Mich., January 30, at the age of 81 years. Mrs. Steincke established the florist business near the entrance of Woodmere cemetery over 40 years ago. Here she and her husband labored hard, and succeeded in building up a large business with patrons from all parts of the city.

Mrs. Steincke was born in Germany, and there she acquired in her childhood the inherent love of flowers that followed her through life in the cultivation and arrangement of them. A few years ago, she relinquished the active management of the business, which was acquired by her son, John H. Warncke, whose father was Mrs. Steincke's first husband; she, however, still persisted up to a short time ago, in assisting in the work of the store.

Mrs. Steincke was possessed of a kindly disposition that won her many friends, and her industry and devotion to her life's work, were well known to the local trade and thousands of patrons. She is survived by her son, John H. Warncke, and stepsons, Charles and Joseph. The funeral was held Monday afternoon, February 2, from her late home. Services were held at St. Stephanus Lutheran church. The local trade was well represented, and the floral emblems were many and beautiful, testifying the high esteem in which she was held. Interment was in Woodmere cemetery.

W. Frank Jones.

W. Frank Jones, for 50 years in the seed business at Hartford, Conn., died at St. Petersburg, Fla., January 26, the cause of death being angina pectoris. He had been spending the winter in the south as had been his custom for many years and news of his sudden demise was a great shock to many friends.

Mr. Jones was born in Meriden, Conn., in 1852, but at an early age moved to Chester, locating soon after in Hartford where he received his education in the public schools. As a boy, he was employed by R. D. Hawley in the seed business, eventually becoming one of the partners in the business, conducted at the time of his death as Cadwell & Jones, having occupied the same location for half a century.

Samuel Cape.

Samuel Cape, well known florist of Pittsburgh, Pa., died at St. Margaret's hospital, in that city, January 31, after two days' illness of double pneumonia, age 34 years. The deceased had been in the florist business for several years and at the time of his death conducted an establishment at 40th street and Butler avenue, where he made his home. He was born in Pittsburgh and the greater part of his life had been spent in that city. He is survived by three brothers and three sisters.

WOBURN, MASS.—C. B. Johnson has replaced two old houses with one modern structure.

ELLWOOD CITY, PA.—The Hennon Floral Co., of New Castle, will open a branch store in the Chamber of Commerce block on Fifth street in the near future.

DALLAS, TEX.—The Lang Floral & Nursery Co. has increased its capital stock from $70,000 to $200,000. Additional land will be purchased and capacity of the range increased.

LINSEED oil has nearly trebled in price since before the war and is now at the highest figure on record, $1.77 per gallon.

FLOWER TAX.—Retail sales of plants and cut flowers will be taxed under a bill before the house of representatives, for details of which see "Washington Rulings and Regulations" elsewhere in this issue.

MOTOR trucks valued at $80,000,000 saved from the wreckage of war, together with vast quantities of material no longer needed by the war department will soon be employed in highway work throughout the United States.

THE Belgian window glass output is now running about 16,000,000 to 19,000,000 square feet a month, about one-half of the pre-war figure. Labor costs 150 per cent more with further advances expected. None of the product is being shipped to the United States.

Violets for St. Valentine's Day.

Rhinebeck, N. Y., February 4.—There will be a fair crop of good violets for St. Valentine's day. Most of the pick has already been sold to the retail trade at $2.00 to $2.50. The demand is strong.

DEPARTMENT OF REGISTRATION.

The following registrations of varieties of roses have been approved by the registration committee of the American Rose Society, and unless objections are received in the secretary's office within three weeks of the publication of this notice, the registration will become permanent.

Name: Doctor Huey. Class: H. W. Parentage: Ethel x Gruss an Teplitz. Description: Habit of plant, climber; character of foliage, good; freedom of growth and hardiness, good; flower large semi-double, dark maroon in color. A free flowering variety with good lasting qualities. Introduced by George C. Thomas, Jr., Chestnut Hill, Pa.

Description: A strong-growing, bushy plant with red double flowers of strong fragrance; petalage, over 50; freedom of bloom and lasting quality, very good. This rose is similar to General MacArthur, but differs in habit, size and form of flower, having superior qualities, as it holds the center better and is larger than General MacArthur in hot weather. Introduced by George C. Thomas, Jr.

Name: Bloomfield Abundance. Class: H. W. Parentage: Sylvia x Dorothy Page Roberts. Description: A bushy plant three to six feet in height with dark green glossy foliage, not susceptible to mildew; flowers, salmon pink, double, produced singly and in sprays. This rose is similar to Cecile Brunner, but is hardier and of a larger bloom. Introduced by George C. Thomas, Jr.

Name: Bloomfield Perpetual. Class: H. P. Parentage: Iceberg x Frau Karl Druschki. Description: Habit of growth, bushy, three to five feet in height with good green foliage; flowers, white, single, resembling Cherokee; a very free-flowering variety with good keeping qualities. The rose is similar to the Cherokee in flower, but differs in having a bushy growth, which is hardy in Philadelphia, and blooms until November. Introduced by George C. Thomas, Jr.

Prohibition of Plant Auction Dumping.

The general secretary of the Horticultural Trades Association is informed from the Hague that the queen signed the new decree absolutely prohibiting the exportation of Dutch plants for the purposes of auction sales in this country. This new law will come into operation January 10. After that date, auctions of Dutch plants will be impossible in the United Kingdom, because every Dutch exporter will have to sign a contract that his plants are intended for a bonafide English buyer, and not for auction sales; otherwise no government license will be granted him. The contract provides a heavy penalty against the Dutch exporter who breaks this law, and further export licenses will be refused to him.

The Holland Plant Exporters' Association, to whose strenuous efforts in alliance with the Horticultural Trades Association the new law is due, has asked to be informed of any auctions of Dutch plants in England after the date in question, so that penal proceedings may be taken. The secretary of the Horticultural Trades Association has written to the Holland association, thanking them for their efforts in speeding up the passage of this new law, as requested by the Horticultural Trades Association.—British Horticultural Advertiser.

[Why not enact the same law with reference to the American bulb shipments.—ED. AMERICAN FLORIST.]

Illinois Plant Quarantine.

Referring to the quarantine against corn, broom corn, celery, dahlias, chrysanthemums, gladioli and geraniums, grown in the states of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and New York, on account of infestation by the European corn borer, effective in Illinois after January 20, 1920 by proclamation of Governor Lowden, mention of which was made in our issue of January 17, page 10, P. A. Glenn, chief inspector of the state department of agriculture, Urbana, says the proclamation applies to all portions of the plants of dahlias, chrysanthemums, gladioli and geraniums, except the seeds. Although Illinois does not have jurisdiction over the shipments between other states, persons in Illinois who receive shipments originating in the states quarantined, will be liable to penalty under Section 19 of the plant inspection act.

SHORT SUPPLY STILL FELT.

Since our last report a fortnight ago, market conditions have changed for the worse. While, with the addition of more sunshine and more moderate weather, the supply in some lines increased, still the ever increasing demand has more than offset the difference. Roses and carnations still are on the short side, and with prices up, the daily cut of sweet peas and bulbous stock saved the day for many a retailer. Calendulas are more plentiful and sell well. Stevia, which around the recent holiday was an eye-sore and moved slowly at low prices, is gradually diminishing and bringing fancy figures. While we are pleased to report that the influenza epidemic is on the decline, and has not caused as many deaths as in 1918, still the amount of funeral work is simply astonishing. While a great many artificial flowers are being used, due to the inability of securing fresh flowers, we have heard of retailers who lost quite a bit of trade due to this fact.

NOTES.

We greatly regret to report the death of Mrs. Oscar Golin which occurred January 29, at the age of 25 years, after a week's illness of influenza and pneumonia. Mr. Golin has charge of the decorating department of the A. F. Keelner Co., which firm he has served faithfully for over 10 years. We extend our sincere sympathy.

In spite of the fact that a good many of the local craft were on the sick list, the midwinter dancing party of the florists' club, held January 29, was a great success. George Asmus and wife and Allie Zech, of Chicago, came up for the occasion.

With an enormous lot of funeral orders of late, the force of the A. F. Kellner Co. dwindled down to one man, all the rest being on the sick list the greater part of last week.

Edward J. Hamme, who was seriously injured, December 26, while not completely recovered, manages to be around and tend to the rush of work which is a daily occurrence.

Miss M. Skinner, who conducts a flower store at 401 Eleventh avenue, had the misfortune to break an arm last week.

The regular florists' club meeting will be held Thursday, February 5, at 8:30 p. m.

JANUARY CLOSES WITH GOOD RECORD.

January made a terrific ending as far as weather and business were concerned with trade for the period about as good as in any corresponding month in many years. Social functions were in full sway and this activity will continue until Lent. Prices continue high with few complaints as the stock is very good. The only item upon which there is a question is carnations, quotations on many offerings being excessive. Roses, lily of the valley and freesias are good sellers. Bulbous stock is coming in well and will help to relieve the monotony as primulas, cyclamens and a few azaleas about complete the plant list, so that tulips, hyacinths and jonquils will be welcomed.

NOTES.

W. J. Palmer & Son have been showing some attractively trimmed plants in their store which met with ready sale. L. H. Neubeck has been featuring a nice lot of cyclamens and freesias, while Stroh's have been fortunate in having enough carnations for all requirements even during the dark weather.

As Valentine's day comes on Saturday this year, there should be excellent business and the trade is making full preparations to handle it.

E. A. Slattery will be one of the speakers at the meeting of the state federation during farmers' week at Utica.

S. A. Anderson's staff enjoyed a dancing party January 31. All credit is due "Jimmie" for the catering.

Robert Scott has been shipping fine daffodils to both eastern and western markets.

D. J. Scott is sending some excellent mignonette and calendulas to this market.

Jerry Brookins & Son are cutting fine sweet peas as usual.

SUPPLY LIMITED BUT TRADE GOOD.

Business in this city and central Ohio has been quite brisk during the past week. Flowers are rather scarce, although most of the shops have been able to get sufficient to take care of their demands. Some scarcity is reported in certain varieties, but this is not serious at the present time. The big feature has been funeral work, which is quite active. Social events are not as numerous as formerly, although there are quite a few small parties. Illness is causing quite a demand for flowers also. Generally speaking, the market is in good shape and future prospects are considered bright. Roses are still in extra good demand and the supplies are limited. They are principally Russell, Columbia, Ophelia and Sunburst, and sell from $8 to $12 per dozen. Sweet peas are steady, and the supply is slightly better. They sell from 75 cents to $1.50 per bunch. Carnations are quite scarce, and prices are high. The better varieties sell in the neighborhood of $3 per dozen. Violets are also in excellent demand, selling around $2 per bunch. The supply is fairly good and the quality excellent. Spring flowers, such as jonquils and tulips, are also coming in and find a ready sale. Plants are moving well. The available supply is easily disposed of at good prices. They are mostly primroses and cyclamens. Greens are plentiful.

NOTES.

The annual meeting of the Ohio Horticultural Society was held recently in the horticultural building on the campus of the Ohio State University. Matters of laws relative to horticulture in Ohio were discussed and several recommendations were made. Frame C. Brown, of Worthington, was elected president; W. W. Ellenwood, vice president; R. B. Cruickshank, Columbus, re-elected secretary, and Paul Thayer, treasurer. The executive committee for the coming year consists of Professor Wendell Paddock, V. H. Davis, H. J. Speaks and U. T. Cok.

A big formal dance of the local rotary club was held at the Deshler hotel recently, when flowers were used in profusion in the decorative plan. More than 600 red carnations, which were quite scarce, were secured for the occasion. T. J. Ludwig had charge of the arrangement.

SUPPLY SOMEWHAT INCREASED.

The supply of stock during the past week was limited, although a slight increase was noticeable the last days, due to full sunlight and higher temperatures. Roses, especially Mrs. Russell and Columbia showed improvement in supply with prices ranging from 35 to 40 cents, while Ophelia ran from 25 to 35 cents, and the quality in all cases was good. Carnations showed an increase also and were very good property, moving at 12 cents wholesale, and are filling the big end of the demand. Sweet peas were considerably more plentiful and of extra good form, considering the long period of dark weather. Both yellow and white narcissi are off crop and their shortage is felt as they shouldered much of the cheaper grade of work. Lily of the valley is quite plentiful. Stevia is very scarce. Pot plants of all seasonable varieties are moving faster than usual and are often taken as substitutes for cut flowers when the latter are not available.

STOCK SCARCE AND HIGH IN PRICE.

The outstanding features of the local trade at present consist of a great scarcity of flowers of any kind and a corresponding increased call for them with the inevitable high prices which, however, are becoming quite natural, and with most patrons, endured with complacency. The epidemic of influenza is responsible for most of the funeral work, and the call for plants for the victims who survive. Many florists and their employes are down with the malady, but so far no fatalities are reported. Among those afflicted are Robert Rahaley, A. Sylvester, P. Reuss, Harry Taylor, Mrs. Gray, John Berlin and Norman Sullivan. J. J. Karins and J. P. McCarty, of Philadelphia are at the Hotel Statler, also victims. Their recovery is sure according to latest reports.

Morristown, N. J., Florists' Society.

ANNUAL DINNER GREAT SUCCESS.

The twenty-fourth annual dinner of the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society held at the Mansion house, Morristown, N. J., on the evening of January 28, was a most enjoyable affair. This society is noted for the large number of good growers in its membership, for its fine autumn exhibitions, and also, for its good dinners that are always made interesting by addresses of leading citizens, not connected with the business, but who show a fine appreciation of the work of the organization. The Morristown Daily Record, a live paper, gave the dinner a column and a half in its issue of January 29. Extracts follow:

"The fine work being done by the society was touched upon by the various guests, who praised the organization for its activities. The keynote was struck by County Collector George W. Downs, when he quoted from an address given just a year ago to the society by the late Dr. Britton D. Evans, in which the famous alienist said the florists were doing a humanitarian work in trying to relieve the sufferings of others.

"The origin of the slogan, 'Say it With Flowers,' was told by Charles H. Totty, of Madison, former president of the Society of American Florists.

"A. F. Faulkner, an eastern representative of THE AMERICAN FLORIST, the representative paper of the florists, urged that there should be a greater study of flowers in the schools by the young people. The florists' trade is as good as any other class, and possibly better than some.

"Edward Reagan, one of the 'hardy perennials,' who has been secretary of the organization for many years, and with three of the other active veterans, has not missed a banquet, told of the growth of the society. It has grown steadily and consistently, and not spasmodically, and today it has about 75 members. It is appreciated, Mr. Reagan said, by the people of the community, their employers and the press.

"The annual flower show this year was started without a dollar, the money made in the last couple of years having been donated to the American Red Cross, but the public responded, and it went through successfully, the secretary said. They had a good show, that cleared expenses and resulted in a neat little sum being acquired. If continued on the same lines, Mr. Reagan predicted that it would go on year after year.

"The florists helped put Morris County on the map, said County Collector Downs, for their products are known in all sections of the country, and it is the best county in the state.

"The society is a necessity to the town and county, Prosecutor John M. Mills stated, and all are proud of it. The county started out to be a residential community, and it is as necessary to cater to the influx of monied people, as it is necessary to have manufacturing. Nothing can be complete without flowers, he said, and the efforts of these men are to be beneficial to all, and not alone to those on whose private estate the flowers are raised. If all the people were engaged in as helpful an industry as the florists, there would be no need for prohibition, he said.

"William H. Duckham, of the Duckham-Pierson Company of Madison; Louis A. Noe, of Noe & Ruzicka of Madison; Alderman Charles W. Bodine, representing the town; Dr. Marcus W. Curry, temporary medical superintendent of the state hospital at Morris Plains; W. R. Dudley of Madison, and William P. O'Niell, of The Record, also spoke."

President Samuel Golden presided, and introduced the chairman, Frank H. Traendly, of New York. As the latter was obliged to leave early, Arthur Herrington, of Madison, presided at the latter part of the gathering. Edward W. Bowton, who might easily be taken for a professional entertainer, created great merriment with his clever impersonations and songs. Anthony Sailor entertained with his violin, and Fred Boniface and George Babbitt showed fine vocal talent in solos. Norman Zeck accompanied on the piano. The tables were handsomely decorated with cut flowers and flowering plants. Including guests, about one hundred were in attendance. Among the guests not previously mentioned were Eugene Dailledouze of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Harry Baldwin, Mamaroneck, N. Y.; W. A. Sperling, and S. Salzeberger, New York. The menu was all that could be desired and at the conclusion an ovation was given the host, John C. Sweeney, and all joined in singing "for he's a jolly good fellow." The gathering closed with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne."

SUPPLY AT LOWEST EBB.

Never before in the history of the trade in this city has there been such a scarcity of cut flowers, with no help available from outside markets and prices practically prohibitive. Most of the funeral orders consist of arrangements of bronze galax leaves with a small bunch of flowers at one side. The cut of roses at all local growing establishments is pitifully small, due in some cases, it is reported, to the heavy supply sent in at the holiday season. Carnations also refuse to come in satisfactorily, but there was quite a few white narcissi, some sweet peas and a limited number of calendulas. The weather can hardly be blamed unless the cloudy days have retarded roses and carnations, for the temperature has been mild and pleasant most of the time. There has been a superabundance of rainfall, and outdoor narcissi have started to come up, and even roses have put out a few leaves. Of course, all will be killed later.

NOTES.

The Joy Floral Co. recently had a very pretty window with vases of splendid orchids and mignonette against a background of pale blue satin. They are showing a fine lot of calendulas, which help out greatly in the cut flower trade. They are now cutting 1,500 to 2,000 roses per day, but this number allows no surplus after supplying their local and Chattanooga stores.

Geny Bros. have few roses and carnations, but plenty of orders, largely for funerals. Their windows, however, are very attractive, with a fine showing of pot plants, of which this firm has a bountiful supply.

The L. H. Haury & Sons Co. has moved its store to 715 Church street, one block from the former location. They are offering very good plants and a few carnations and roses.

The McIntyre Floral Co. have a fair supply of both roses and carnations, with pot plant offerings hard to excel. Trade with them has been very good in all departments.

To Flower Buyers

The great demand caused by the influenza epidemic is still in effect. We have managed to fill all regular orders in full and in addition have helped our regular customers with extra lots of flowers when wanted, besides giving some roses to new customers.

Our prices charged on shipping orders have averaged less than what we could have sold the stock right here in the market. We have endeavored to help our customers in the matter of prices as much as possible, even at a loss to ourselves. This will continue to be our policy. The supply of roses will depend largely upon the weather conditons, and with a more moderate spell of weather than we have had lately, a larger supply of roses can be expected. For St. Valentine's day, we urge our customers to send in their orders early, as there will no doubt be a great shortage.

Carnations will still continue short, as will the shorter length grade of roses.

All miscellaneous flowers are very scarce, but we will do our best to buy any stock wanted which we do not grow ourselves and have on hand.

DEMAND GREATER THAN THE SUPPLY.

The demand for cut flowers is still greater than the supply and it is impossible to fill all the orders in full. American Beauty roses are in strong demand and the same holds true for Mrs. Chas. Russell, Premier and Columbia. Ophelia, Sunburst, Milady, Hoosier Beauty, Killarney, White Killarney, Killarney Brilliant, Mrs. George Shawyer, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Champ Weiland. Montrose and all the other varieties are having a brisk call and clean up early especially in the short and medium stemmed grades, fancy stock being taken last but always cleans up owing to the general scarcity. Carnations are holding their own at the advertised quotations and are in exceedingly short supply. Fancy callas command as high as $5 per dozen. Sweet peas are moving as fast as they reach the stores at $3 to $5 per 100. Daisies are selling at $2 to $4 per 100. Freesias are more plentiful and have dropped somewhat in price the past week. Tulips and jonquils are bringing high prices and the same holds true for white and yellow narcissi. Violets, both single and double, are disposed of at good prices and there has been a strong demand for calendulas. Mignonette is in fair supply and some very fancy stock in this line is obtainable. Stevia is in shorter supply. Orchids are seen in larger numbers but appear to be holding their own at the prices advertised. A few hyacinths and cyclamen blooms are included in the list of cut flower offerings and come in handy during the great shortage. Pansies, gardenias and lily of the valley are to be had. Greens are in heavy demand and at times in very short supply. The death rate due to the Spanish influenza and pneumonia continues to be very heavy, consequently the demand for funeral flowers is keeping ahead of the supply. The warm weather the past week has caused stock to become a trifle more plentiful but it appears as if the demand will continue greater than the supply for some time to come. Everyone will do well to place their orders as early as possible for St. Valentine's day so as to protect their supply, for everything points to a great shortage of stock for this occasion if the demand is at all brisk.

NOTES.

The building in which A. L. Vaughan & Co. is located is likely to be torn down this spring, which means that this firm will be in the market for a location in the near future. The rent on the stores in the Atlas building has increased from $1 per square foot to $1.25 per square foot, which means that some of the wholesale houses located in this building whose leases expire May 1 will be forced to pay from $300 to as high as $1,600 each more per year than formerly. Some of the wholesale houses in the Le Moyne building have also had their rent raised considerably.

Gust Alles, of Wietor Bros., has the sympathy of the entire trade in the loss of his mother, whose death occurred February 1 at the age of 76 years. The funeral was held the following Wednesday at 10 o'clock with services at St. Henry's church and interment at St. Henry's cemetery. The floral offerings from the trade were many and beautiful.

Mrs. Josephine Frish, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Psenicka, Gross Point, died February 1 at Davenport, Ia., from pneumonia. The funeral services were held from the Psenicka home at Gross Point the following Tuesday morning with interment at the Bohemian National cemetery.

Ove Gnatt, president of the Ove Gnatt Co., Inc., La Porte, Ind., returned last week from a most successful business trip in the east. Mr. Gnatt reports that his firm's many customers have enjoyed a very prosperous year and are making preparation everywhere for big business the coming season.

George Paulus and wife, 3950 North Clark street, have the sympathy of the trade in the loss of their four-year-old daughter Catherine whose death occurred February 2. The funeral was held from the late residence the following Wednesday at 10 a. m., with interment at Calvary cemetery.

Philip J. Foley, Sr., returned home this week from the south with a nice bundle of orders for greenhouses for the Foley Greenhouse Manufacturing Co. One of the orders recently booked was a vegetable range of eight houses 250 feet long to be shipped to the state of Pennsylvania.

Wendland & Keimel have a new sport of Ophelia which originated at their greenhouses at Elmhurst that looks very promising and made a great impression with all those who saw it at E. C. Amling Co.'s store early this week.

W. J. Kidwell is able to be about again after being confined to his home for several weeks with the Spanish influenza. Mrs. Kidwell and two daughters were also victims of the same malady.

Joe Einweck, of the Bassett & Washburn force, will join the ranks of the benedicts in the near future.

Mike Berkel, of Berkel & Redding, Wilmette, died February 3, from pneumonia.

George Weinhoeber has added a new Dodge truck to his delivery service.

The American Greenhouse Manufacturing Co. held a monthly meeting and luncheon, January 31, at 2 o'clock in room B of the men's cafe, Marshall Field & Co.'s annex, which was in the nature of a "get acquainted" meeting. The guests of honor were J. D. Purdy, Jr., vice-president, and J. M. Brown, eastern manager. Mr. Purdy spoke on the "Making of Pipe" and Mr. Brown on "Greenhouse Standardization and Its Future." They were both welcomed as members of the AGMCO organization and given a vote of thanks for their helpful talk. H. O. S. Nichols of this firm has been confined to his home for over a week with the Spanish influenza.

Mrs. Peter Douvry, nee Lamporter, wife of the proprietor of the Stewart Floral Co., was called to the eternal beyond, January 29, following an attack of influenza and pneumonia. She was well-known to the local trade, having been employed in several of the loop retail stores before her marriage, and was assisting her husband at his establishment up to the time of her illness. The funeral was held Sunday, February 1, at 1:30 p. m., from the residence of her parents, 1017 West Fifty-ninth street, to Mount Greenwood cemetery.

John W. Ensweiler, 19-year-old son of Jacob Ensweiler, 5341 Morgan street, died February 1 following an attack of appendicitis. The funeral was held from the home the following Wednesday, when the trade was well represented with many beautiful floral designs.

B. Chadwick and Miss Anna Brice of Vaughan's Seed Store, who have been on the sick list; are again at their posts. All hands at this establishment are busy in the shipping of gladiolus, caladium, tuberose and other spring bulbs.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is cutting a splendid grade of Columbia roses, which are attracting the attention of all the visitors at its establishment. A new crop of lily of the valley will be in just right for St. Valentine's day.

Zech & Mann point with pride to the splendid mignonette that is included among their offerings. Matt Mann is able to be about again after suffering from a touch of the influenza.

State authorities plan to place through the Illinois Highway Association within a few months, good road contracts covering 500 miles of permanent highways to cost $16,000,000.

Bassett & Washburn have increased their contribution to the national publicity fund, making a grand total of $500.

Ernest Wienhoeber and daughter expect to leave for California, February 8.

August Poehlmann made a business trip to Kentucky last week.

H. C. Wendland made a business trip to Oklahoma this week.

A. F. Amling and wife are visiting in California.

Visitors: A. E. Kunderd, Goshen, Ind.; H. Heepe, Akron, O.; Morris Le Vine, New York.

Allied Floral Association of Illinois.

The meeting of the growers, retailers and wholesalers at the Hotel Randolph, Chicago, Monday evening, February 2, was largely attended and was one of the most enthusiastic ever held in that city. The Milwaukee plan of advertising was thoroughly discussed and met with the favor of everyone present. A corporation will be organized not for pecuniary profit and without capital stock and the members have agreed to abide by the articles of organization and by-laws adopted at the meeting by the corporation which provides for accruments to be made on the following basis: Growers marketing their product through commission houses to be assessed one-half of 1 per cent of their sales to be deducted from their returns. Retailers to be assessed 1 per cent on all purchases from wholesalers and commission men. Commission houses to be assessed 1 per cent of their gross commission, and in addition provide for the collection and accounting necessary in making returns to the treasurer of the corporation on all assessments levied against the growers and retailers. Some of the commission houses thought that their tax of 1 per cent was rather high but did not want to see the plan fall through so they decided to join in the plan with the understanding that the cost of the clerical work providing for the collection and accounting necessary in making returns to the treasurer of the corporation on all assessments levied against the growers and retailers, be charged to the general fund, the cost not to be greater than 50 per cent of their assessment.

The allied trade industries and the supply houses and possibly others will be asked to join in the good work and it is expected that every branch of the trade will be represented in the great movement in the near future.

A great deal of work has been done the past few weeks by a large number of members in the trade and the territory, which was divided into sections under efficient captains, was thoroughly canvassed and practically everyone called upon signed in favor of the movement, many districts reporting 100 per cent and others close to it, especially among the growers. It will only be a question of time when every firm in all branches of the trade of any importance will be a member of this corporation, and those who have not already joined should do so immediately for their individual good. The time has come when everyone must do their part toward local publicity and avoid the gluts as much as possible which have been a great detriment to everyone in the business for many years past.

DECATUR, ILL.—Henry Daut, of the Floral Nursery Co., has purchased a 10-acre tract at Hickory Point, five miles from the city, to which he will remove in July. He has ordered material for one Moninger house, 36x125 feet, which will be built at the time his present range of four houses is removed to the new location.

NORMAL PRICES EXPECTED SOON.

At this writing, prices have not taken a decline, but the near future ought to see several items get back to normal. From the wholesaler's viewpoint, prices could be still higher, and they would not object, but we must all do our bit toward keeping a standard that will eliminate us from the gouging class when the big break comes. Roses are still selling at advertised prices and the same may also be said of carnations and sweet peas. In fact, no change is apparent in any of the listed items. The week started out slowly, but picked up towards the end. The early slump gave every one an opportunity to see the ice box well filled with flowers for the first time since the holidays. The florists of this city that are loyal to the carnation, and also loyal to their city, are disappointed in the fact that Cincinnati did not land the meeting of the carnation society for next year. Were everyone as enthusiastic as the chosen few who carry the burden and expense, no difficulty would be found in being successful in landing the event. Too many are willing to participate in the glory when there is any to pass around; too few willing to take the chance connected therewith. Too much credit cannot be given to those who assumed the obligation, as they are men that would also assume most of the expense. The chamber of commerce, as well as other civic organizations, had given their sanction to bringing the meeting to this city, and no doubt the visitors would have been given a great reception. Well, here's hoping for the year after.

NOTES.

J. A. Peterson and wife expect to leave at once for Florida, making the trip via New Orleans by boat. Mr. Peterson will not take his new Reo, but will find some serviceable car when he gets to his destination.

C. E. Critchell, J. A. Peterson, and son, H. W. Sheppard, and Ray Murphy have returned from Chicago, after detouring via Cleveland and other cities.

The Wm. Murphy Co. is still leading the market with the largest cut of carnations. Sweet peas are also handled in large quantities.

The South Park Floral Co., of Newcastle, Ind., has been shipping some fine rose stock to C. E. Critchell.

E. G. Gillette is having a big call for white enameled easels; also, some fine Princess of Wales violets.

SHORT SUPPLY KEENLY FELT.

Scarcity of stock has caused serious complaint during the past week, California being off-season, with very small shipments, while local growers fall far short of meeting requirements, jonquils, sweet peas and violets comprising the list of offerings shown in any reasonable number. The shortage of roses is notable. Portland has proved of no help in remedying the situation, although both that city and Spokane have come to the relief of the trade here in the matter of carnations. Laddie and Aviator are unusually fine and excellent prices are being received on both. One local range reports a fair cut of Ward roses and Ophelia has been in moderate supply. Columbia has been used quite freely. The arrival of the first early tulips are expected during the coming week. The call for extensive decorations has fallen off, but table arrangements and funeral orders are still numerous. Pot plants continue good sellers.

NOTES.

Harry Crouch, of the Woodlawn Flower Shop, reports orders for decorations numerous and of good size. White Chadwick chrysanthemums played an important part in a number of these. The first fruit blossoms from California were shown in this firm's windows last week, together with daffodils and jonquils. Carnation Laddie, as supplied by this establishment, has been highly complimented for its splendid quality.

Joseph Goldberry, of Kenney's Flower Shop, handled the decorations for the Pershing dinner at the Rainier club this week. There were 50 tables, and Ophelia roses, stevia and ferns were featured.

Employes of the Hollywood Gardens enjoyed a supper dance, January 24. A feature of the occasion was the showing of motion pictures of the entire establishment made last summer.

Owing to the expiration of its lease, the Holly Flower Shop is anticipating a change of location in the near future. This is a matter of regret as the present store is a splendid stand.

Andrew Matthiesen, local grower, has been showing some excellent White Enchantress, although he reports they are a little slow in responding to forcing.

Gus Peterson and wife, of the Woodlawn Flower Shop, returned from their vacation last week and Mrs. Minch has now started on her period of rest.

H. P. Anderson, of the University Flower Shop, says 1919 business showed a substantial gain both in volume and number of customers.

Gus Berkmann, who has been with Rosaia Bros., is now in charge of the range of the Butte Floral Co., Butte, Mont.

Fred H. Rowe, of McCoy's, made attractive showings last week of hyacinths in baskets and corsage work.

C. S. McManus, of the Madison Park Greenhouses, has a fine lot of tulips and Easter lilies coming on.

Rosaia Bros. report excellent business in general decorations, especially for theaters and stores.

William Blackman, founder and president of the William Blackman Floral Co., who for the past 15 years has been unable to get about except in a wheel chair, greatly surprised his many friends by walking around his block recently with slight assistance, and all are rejoicing with him.

BRANTFORD, ONT. — William Yeates has added 4,000 feet of glass to his range at 76 Superior street.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—The spring meeting of the Rochester Rose Society will be held February 20 at the chamber of commerce. Plans are already under way for the exhibiton in June.

MISSOULA, MONT. — The Montana Horticultural Society at its meeting in this city, January 24, elected officers for 1920 as follows: Benjamin Kress, Hamilton, president; F. T. Parker, Missoula, vice-president; J. C. Wood, Big Fork, secretary.

MARKET SHOWS SOME IMPROVEMENT.

The past week, of which so much was expected in the way of production, was at the close, quite a few steps ahead of any previous period for the month, and as there have been several days of almost continuous sunshine, the prospects are that the worst is over, and from now on, stocks will increase until a normal condition prevails. The improvement, while noticeable, was not sufficient to in any sense supply the demand, as all stocks of any kind are doled out in mere handfuls, going only to those who are known to be good buyers and loyal to the house. Roses are in great demand at top prices, 12 to 15-inch stems selling from $20 to $25 per 100, and a shade longer bring $35. The lowest price in roses is $15 for shorts. Carnations come next; nothing less than $12, with $20 to $25 for Laddie. Spring bulbous stock is appearing. Freesias are plentiful and in good demand. Sweet peas keep their high level of from $4 to $6. They are a great factor in the market. Narcissi are cleaned up every day at record prices. The men who had the courage to lay in a stock of spring bulbs last fall, are now patting themselves on the back, as their profits were never greater. Callas and the few Easter lilies that are offered, meet with ready sale at top prices. Violets, while not in over supply, are with cattleyas, relatively the cheapest flowers on the market, both selling at pre-war prices for this season. Acacia pubescens is one of the new arrivals. Some quite good snapdragons are seen. Many more could be sold. The great scarcity of cut flowers has compelled the substitution of the artificial carnations, roses, chrysanthemums and the like. Many of the crepe roses, unwaxed, have a very natural look, and as they are waterproofed, appear to stand very well. A story is told of a retailer who had taken an order for a pillow. Being unable to get anything but a bunch of freesias, he had to resort to artificial carnations and roses. These were topped off with the freesias and some fine asparagus sprays. A few days after the funeral his customer called, spoke of how much she admired the pillow, which was the most beautiful piece there, and so fragrant, and then, all the other flowers wilted down, while his kept so fresh and nice, she was going to recommend him to all her friends. Here's another. A retailer made three small standing hearts out of one piece of red chenille; cost 75 cents. The stands were filled, and the edges of the hearts bordered with fancy hardy ferns; a few sprays of asparagus relieved the red of the hearts. They were neatly and nicely made and brought $7 each.

February 2.—There was quite a perceptible increase in the size of the shipments this morning, but the market held up well with very little change in prices, except for freesia, which is now in crop with a number of the growers. For some reason, the buying was not quite so keen as is usual for Monday morning.

FLORISTS' CLUB MEETING.

While some of the features that were to be of interest at the February meeting of the florists' club failed to materialize, others developed that gave a very interesting programme. There were vases of superb cut flowers and splendid primulas. Alfred M. Campbell gave a very interesting talk on carnations and an account of his trip to the convention of the American Carnation Society at Chicago. Professor C. A. Weigel, of the bureau of entomology, greenhouse insect investigation, told of the work of the department of agriculture in exterminating the new rose beetle, which was accomplished very effectively with cyanide. The government is continuing its investigations and hopes to completely annihilate this pest. J. Otto Thilow gave an enthusiastic account of his Australian trip which, with colored lantern slides, will be the subject of an illustrated lecture in the near future.

NOTES.

Primula malacoides is being largely used in the stores in all kinds of basket work and for indoor display. Victor Ridenour and John C. Gracey had their show windows filled with well flowered plants, all nicely decorated with mats and crepe paper. J. J. Habermehl's Sons' large Walnut street window was nicely decorated with baskets, filled with primroses, and the addition of a few flowers in tubes of water.

An authority in the carnation industry states that lower prices on cut carnations are not to be looked for, either this year or next. They, of course, will become more plentiful towards spring, but the outlook for young plants for next season is doubtful, as at the present market price, it pays better to sell the flowers than take off cuttings, and comparatively few cuttings are being made.

There has been a great deal of sickness recently among the trade. Emil Geshick, Germantown, was laid up for two weeks with influenza. George Craig had an attack, but managed to work it off. Carl Corts also experienced a bad day or two, and there were a lot more who have had to take good care of themselves. Influenza is very prevalent here, but fortunately, in a light form.

Many growers, who passed bulbs up last summer on account of the high prices, are now wishing they had not been so conservative. Foreign bulb men are now making this territory. Their prices average $1 per 100 more than those considered high a year ago. They are reported to be booking good orders.

Robert Craig sailed from New York for Porto Rico, January 28. His daughters accompanied him to New York, seeing him safely on the steamer, where he had F. M. Pennock as his cabin mate for the voyage. His address will be care of F. M. Pennock, San Juan, Porto Rico.

A large wholesaler declared there are sufficient flowers for all those who care to pay the price. These have reached a higher level, and while these extremes are not likely to be permanent, they will not go off to anything like former figures.

Frank M. Ross, the well known retailer, and wife, have returned from a month's vacation at Palm Beach, Florida. They greatly enjoyed their outing in the summer temperature of this southern clime.

H. Weiss & Sons, Hatboro, are having a fine cut of carnations. Their stock of 60,000 plants looks much above the ordinary for this season. A new Dodge truck is to be used to carry the stock to the market.

Alfred M. Campbell, who has one house of 10,000 Laddie carnations, has secured the largest stock of this variety in the country, and will plant his whole place with this next season.

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. has added a new truck to its delivery service, which will enable them to make quicker shipments from their Morton rose farm.

A number of the retail stores are getting out their valentine material and hoping that flowers will become more plentiful by the time the 14th rolls around.

A large grower of Golden Spur daffodils for this market, had an offer last week from New York for all his stock at $20 per 100.

White lilac, cattleyas, and violets were leaders with the Leo Niessen Co. the past week.

Martin Gannon, of the A. M. Campbell force, is down with the grippe.

SUPPLY STILL SHORT OF DEMAND.

By January 31, there were indications of an improvement in market conditions. Beginning January 28, there had been four days of fair sunshine, though the nights were cold. There was an appreciable increase in the supply of stock on the 31st, but not enough to affect rose and carnaton prices to any extent. In fact, American Beauties were higher than on January 26, specials going at the wholesale rate of $1.50 each, the supply having diminished. In orchids, gardenias and violets, there was an abundant supply. An increased demand for funeral work somewhat quickened the call for orchids, but gardenias were slow, with average sales of violets at 75 cents to $1.25 per 100. The supply of tulips and narcassi were on the increase, and the stock was quickly taken. Another biting cold wave scooped down on the city on the night of January 30, but at this writing, the sky is clear.

February 2.—There is a fair supply of stock this morning, more than might have been expected, as January 31 was the coldest day since the winter of 1918. On that day, at 9 a. m., the temperature was four above zero, and from that hour till 6 p. m., it varied from one to three, being at zero at 6 p. m., and two below at 10 p. m. But we got off easy. Montreal reported 20 below; Watertown, N. Y., 25 below; Utica, 22 below; Syracuse, 19 below; Poughkeepsie, 20 below. Business is not particularly active, but prices on leading stocks are holding firm. There is a considerable increase in the supply of yellow narcissi and tulips. Violets have dropped as low as 50 cents per 100. There has been a drop also in prices of all roses excepting American Beauties of from $3 to $12 per 100. The best carnations are down to $10 and $12 per 100. Yellow narcissi sell for 75 cents to $1 and lilac at $2.50 per bundle.

NOTES.

During this season of scarcity and high prices in cut flowers, retailers are making good window displays with various flowering plants. David Clarke's Sons have a fine stock of cyclamens and primulas. They are also well supplied with ferns. At Malandre Brothers, a fine stock of tulips in pans, and much other pot stock has been noticed. Pappas Brothers keep up a good stock of both plants and cut flowers, and report good business.

Helen Duncan Jameson, of 468 Riverside drive, this city, has won the $100 prize offered for the best and most original poster advertising the New York spring flower show to be held in the Grand Central Palace, March 15-21. Miss Jameson is only 17 years old. She is a student at the Art Students' League, but it has been stated that over one hundred professional artists entered the competitions.

Joseph Levy, a Brooklyn florist, who for several years had done business as the Brooklyn Cut Flower Co., died January 28 of a cancerous affection, after an illness of several months. He was born in Brooklyn, and his life was spent there. He is survived by his wife and two young children.

The next meeting of the florists' club, February 9, will be "carnation night." The exhibition committee urges all carnation growers to make displays of either new or standard varieties. Such exhibits should be sent prepaid, addressed to the exhibition committee, 127 West 28th street, New York.

H. E. Froment is now temporarily located at 34 West 28th street, in the store with W. G. Badgley, where he will remain until the Greenhut building, Sixth avenue and 18th street, is ready to be occupied by the Wholesale Florists, Inc., of which he is president.

Secretary Young of the S. A. F., has been indisposed the result of a severe cold since his return from the carnation convention, Chicago, and meeting of the executive board of the S. A. F. at Cleveland, O.

Roman J. Irwin, who has a thriving seed and plant business at 108 West 28th street, is compelled to move by February 1. These removals are brought about by changes in ownership and increased rent.

William Sullivan, who represents the Dolansky & McDonald Co., of Boston, Mass., is receivling, in addition to orchids, fine stock of carnations, grown at Frank Dolansky's range, Lynn, Mass.

President Henshaw, of the florists' club, who was taken ill of influenza at Pittsburgh on his return from the carnation convention, has recovered, and is again on the job.

Under present conditions high prices for flowers are excusable; in fact, a necessity, as overhead expenses keep on the increase.

Paul Meconi, in the Coogan building, is now receiving a good stock of tulips and other bulbous offerings.

Fred Lentz and James Bruce, of Mrs. Leikens' staff, are down with influenza.

Eli Futterman, of Futterman Bros., is reported seriously ill of pneumonia.

The veteran wholesaler, William P. Ford, is laid up with a severe cold.

American Seed Trade Association.

E. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, 216 Prospect Avenue, S. E., Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer.

The thirty-eighth annual meeting will be held at Milwaukee, Wis., June 22-24, 1920.

THE price of bags at Chicago, February 4, was $60.

GLADIOLUS planting stock is in short supply with strong demand.

BLUE STEM spring seed wheat is selling in Chicago at $4.00 per bushel.

GERMAN lily of the valley pips are arriving at New York, some badly sprouted.

THE February Garden magazine, is a great index of mail order seed and plant advertising.

DETROIT, MICH.—Lem W. Bowen, of D. M. Ferry & Co., and wife, are at Miami, Fla.

LANSING, MICH.—The Harry E. Saier Co. has been incorporated, capital stock $50,000.

MANY seedsmen complain of unusual printers' delays in getting out their catalogues this season.

CARL CROPP, of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, celebrated another birthday anniversary this week.

HARRY B. MCCULLOUGH, of the J. M. McCullough Sons Co., Cincinnati, O., has gone away for a rest.

THE death of W. Frank Jones, of Cadwell & Jones, Hartford, Conn., is reported in our obituary column this week.

FLORAL PARK, N. Y.—Business for 1920 at John Lewis Childs' started out well, with January sales far in advance of last year.

OLIVER H. DREW, formerly of Hibernia, N. Y., writes that he is camped on the east side of the San Bernardino mountains, overlooking the Mojave desert.

C. C. MORSE & Co., San Francisco, Calif., advise O. L. Coulter is no longer with them. The firm's representatives now on the road are H. W. Tracy and George S. Stowell.

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE, Chicago, reports January wholesale trade over 25 per cent ahead of that of last year. The retail catalogue was not in circulation in time to show January results.

BOARD OF TRADE.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade, February 4, were as follows: Timothy, $10.00 to $14.00 per 100 pounds; March, $15.25 asked; red clover, $45.00 to $56.00 per 100 pounds.

J. C. BODGER, of John Bodger & Sons Co., Los Angeles, Calif., who expected to sail for Europe last week, was stricken with influenza at Philadelphia, January 25, and has been obliged to abandon his ocean trip.

VISITED CHICAGO: H. W. Buckbee, Rockford; E. B. Northrup and wife, Minneapolis, Minn.; J. W. Edmundson, San Jose, Calif.; Joseph L. Schilder, Chillicothe, O.; E. A. Dennison, Ellisburg, N. Y.; Harry E. Saier, Lansing, Mich.; Theodore Cobb, representing D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich.; Francis C. Stokes, of Stokes' Seed Farms, Philadelphia, Pa.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The first shipment of potash to reach this port directly from Germany in three or four years, arrived January 28, on the Norwegian steamship, Tungus, from Hamburg. The cargo consists of 3,000 tons.

ATLANTA, GA.—From all indications, January business of H. G. Hastings Co. will show a gain of 25 to 33 per cent over the exceptionally good corresponding period of 1919. An increase in the number of items ordered is noticeable.

TOLEDO, O.—Clover was steady February 2, opening 10 cents higher than the closing price the previous day, with cash offered at $36.05, a drop of 50 cents during the week. Timothy was steady with cash, 1919, at $6.75, March $6.90, April $6.90; and May $6.70.

CINCINNATI, O.—January business, despite backward weather, was fully up to the average at the establishment of the J. M. McCullough's Sons Co. Indications point to any early season, with active trading. Extremely high prices on grass seeds are influencing dealers to buy in small lots, but it is expected that all stocks will be well cleared out at the end of the season.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Complaints of unfair methods in competition have been issued by the federal trade commission against the A. A. Berry Seed Company, of Clarinda, Iowa, and the American Mutual Seed Company, of Chicago. The two concerns deal in farm, garden and flower seeds in interstate commerce. Answers to the complaints are to be filed by March 15, following which a date will be set for trial.

Onion Sets.

Onion sets in the Chicago district are moving out lively at $3.75 for colors and $4.00 for whites, in carlots.

Under the leadership of Mr. Van Bodegraven, a co-operative association of onion set growers was organized at South Holland, January 19, with the idea of stabilizing the industry. Stock in the concern was offered and numerous subscriptions handed in.

Danish Gaurantee of Root Crop Seeds.

Nine Danish seed growers have arranged with the government root seed commissioner to have samples drawn from their export bags, sealed and later planted for proving in the trial grounds. If a foreign buyer has any occasion to complain of impurity of stocks he receives, complaint is to be made to the Danish root seed inspector, and if his test shows non-genuine stocks, the buyer will be allowed a compensation according to Danish law. Unhappily, the circular received by us does not say whether this penalty is simply a refund of cost of seed or a payment to buyer of the money value of what the crop of roots would have been if of the true type sold. The amount and basis of this payment must be known to establish the real value of the so-called "guarantee."

For the circular itself, write Thomas Madsen & Co., 18 Broadway, New York.

Philadelphia Seed Trade.

January business at the establishment of the W. Atlee Burpee Co., showed an increase of from 20 to 30 per cent in number of orders and average value as compared with trade during the corresponding period in 1919, which went on record as the greatest January business in the history of the concern. There appears to be a strong demand for flower seeds from home gardeners and a substantial and well-balanced call for vegetable seeds of all varieties.

The H. F. Michell Co. mailed the first of its 1920 catalogues during the week ending January 31. Trade prospects are very good, mail orders being considerably ahead of last year.

I. N. Simon & Son made an excellent start for 1920, with January sales indicating a gain of 40 per cent over the corresponding month of 1919.

Vegetable Growers' Association of America.

E. A. Dunbar, Ashtabula, O., President; Louis F. Miller, Toledo, O., Vice-President; S. W. Severance, Loui ville, Ky., Secretary; H. J. Cheney, Grand Rapids Mich., Treas. Next annual convention September 1920.

COOK COUNTY farmers want $15.00 per ton for growing sugar beets on contract.

THE Minnesota State Vegetable Growers' Association, with a membership of 600, has adopted a resolution favoring affiliation with the Vegetable Growers' Association of America.

SEATTLE, WASH. — Notwithstanding the recent freeze, local growers are going ahead with plans for replanting. Japanese market gardeners are preparing to ship 500 carloads of Puget Sound lettuce to the east, starting the latter part of April. Celery fields which were destroyed have been reset.—H. M.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, February 3.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, $4.00 to $6.00; celery, Michigan, square box, $2.00 to $3.00; leaf lettuce, per tomato box, 27½ to 30 cents; radishes, per dozen bunches, 70 to 85 cents; tomatoes, per pound, 15 to 40 cents.

New York, February 2.—Celery, per crate, $6.00 to $15.00; cucumbers, per dozen $2.00 to $3.00; mushrooms, 75 cents to $2.25 per three pound basket; tomatoes, per pound, 5 to 40 cents; lettuce, per dozen, 50 cents to $1.00; radishes, per 100 bunches, $2.00 to $6.00.

Vegetable Markets.

Reports to the United States department of agriculture, bureau of markets, for the period January 27-February 3, show irregular conditions with moderate price changes and a generally weak tone. Following the rapid advance of the past few weeks, potato values declined in producing sections and slight changes occurred in some consuming markets. Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota round whites are 15-20 cents lower, closing ot $4.30-$4.45 per 100 pounds sacked f. o. b. shipping points and were steady in middlewestern distributing markets at $4.75-$5.00, closing slightly higher than last week in Chicago carlot market at $4.65-$4.75. Colorado Russets strengthened to $4.00 per 100 pounds, wagonloads, cash to growers. New York round whites declined 30 cents at the close to $4.00-$4.27 f. o. b. and were quoted in a few middlewestern markets at $4.65-$4.85. Maine Green Mountains closed 30-40 cents lower, ranging $3.60-$3.75 bulk per 100 pounds, and $3.80 sacked f. o. b. shipping points. This stock was quoted 30 cents lower in New York jobbing markets at $4.45-$4.60 bulk. Cabbage demand and movement was slow and dull at western New York shipping points. Prices for Danish Seed stock declined, closing $80-$100 per ton f. o. b., compared with $95-$100 last week. Consuming markets closed mostly $110-$120 per ton bulk of this stock. New Florida Wakefields were steady at $3.00-$3.25 per 1½ bushel hamper. California Winningstadts closed in New York and Boston at $4.50-$5.50 and in Chicago at $4.50-$5.00. Onions continued weak at western New York shipping points. Good yellow stock ranged $5.25-$5.75 per 100 pounds f. o. b. sacked. Consuming markets were slow and dull, but fairly steady, at $5.50-$6.50, eastern cities mostly $6.00-$6.50. Middlewestern reds closed at $6.00-$6.25 in Chicago and St. Louis. California brown and yellow varieties reached $7.00-$8.00 for small lots in southwestern markets, but ranged $5.50-$5.75 in Chicago.

Sweet Potato Variety Identification.

The United States department of agriculture is working out a key by means of which varieties of sweet potatoes can be identified. There has always been a great deal of confusion regarding sweet potato varieties, and this key will make it possible to positively identify all true varieties. It is based on the color, size and shape of the stems and leaves, and in the color, size, and quality of the potatoes themselves. That the key works is attested by the fact that by its use varieties described at the time Columbus discovered America have been identified. It is yet too soon to say just what may be expected from this work, but the results thus far secured are very promising. This work is being done at Arlington Farm, Va., and at the Pee Dee experiment station, Florence, S. C.

Investigational work in curing sweet potatoes has also brought out important results. It was shown that with proper handling in storage conditions, sweet potatoes can be carried through the winter and as late as April 1 with not more than one per cent of loss from decay.

"Hamburg Late Pink" Chrysanthemum

Picture was taken Nov. 23, 1919, and will give a good idea of what "Hamburg Late Pink" looks like when grown to single stems and planted six inches each way.

"Hamburg Late Pink" is an improved late pink Maud Dean, having more petals, and if grown for late will hardly ever show an open center.

The average grower of chrysanthemums must have varieties which are easy to handle, and from which he can cut as near 100% of perfect blooms as possible. "Hamburg Late Pink" has been grown for the last four years, and produces a very high proportion of good flowers. It is not an exhibition variety, but, for late pink, one of the best for commercial purposes. It can be had in bloom the latter part of November by taking an early bud, but some of the flowers will show open centers; but by selecting late buds, after October 1st, most of the flowers are cut during December, and would advise to select late buds, as the later buds will hardly ever show an open center, and some flowers can be had even in January.

Keeping qualities are excellent, and where a graceful pink flower is wanted, "Hamburg Late Pink" cannot be surpassed.

"Hamburg Late Pink" will be disseminated in the spring of 1920.
Plants will be ready March 1st, 1920, and orders will be filled in rotation.

Trinity Trees.

For the first time in its history, Trinity churchyard is virtually bare of trees. The last five big sycamores, some of which officials of the Trinity Corporation believe were among those originally planted when the present church was built, have been removed within the last few weeks and only a few stunted saplings remain in the old burying ground.

There are many Wall Street men who remember Trinity churchyard as a mass of foliage in season, but in recent years tree-planting by the Trinity authorities has proved a failure. It may be that the church will cease its efforts to replace the old trees. About 15 years ago a row of elms was planted just south of the Trinity building. These are all dead.

"We have done everything we can to restore the old shade," said an official, but the new trees do not seem to flourish. Experts tell us that the soil is all right, but something in the air seems to prevent growth. We cannot even make shrubbery grow."—Wall Street Journal.

Repair that Leaky or Cracked Boiler Without Shutting Off the Heat.

EVERY greenhouse man who has ever had a leaky or cracked boiler knows what a lot of time, trouble and money that means.

Yet all the fuss and worry attendant upon the old-fashioned method of repairing is now entirely unnecessary.

"X"—the wonderful Boiler Liquid—will do $200 worth of repair work for $10, and do it in about half an hour.

"X" is a Scientific Process of Repairing Without Dismantling or Welding.

"X" is an absolute Liquid. It is simply poured into the boiler and instantly combines itself with the water. In sizzling out through the leak or crack the "X" is changed by the atmospheric oxygen into a metal-like solid, making a permanent repair. This repair is gradually hardened by the heat in the boiler, so that it stands a pressure of over one-quarter of a ton.

The surplus "X" that remains in the water automatically stops all new Leaks due to expansion or other causes. In this way "X" Liquid makes the boiler (and in a hot water system, the entire system) absolutely Leakproof.

Makes Boilers Rust-proof and Scale-proof. Saves Coal.

The chemical composition of "X" Liquid is such that it absorbs all free oxygen in the water. This prevents the metal from Rusting. "X" also prevents the lime and other scale-forming elements in the water from depositing layers of Scale on the walls. "X" keeps the boiler Rust-proof and Scale-proof.

"X" does not evaporate or lose its strength with age. When new water is added it combines itself with this water and performs its functions again and again.

"X" contains no cement, powder or other injurious ingredients. It cannot clog the air valves; in fact, it makes frequent repacking of valves unnecessary.

A Strong Guarantee!

You take no chance in using "X" Liquid. It is unconditionally guaranteed to make good. If it fails, you get a new can—or your money back.

But your greatest guarantee of the value of "X" is the fact that it is used, sold and recommended by 99 per cent of the manufacturers of boilers and radiators. It is used by the U. S. Government.

If your boiler cracks or leaks this Winter, you don't have to worry about your greenery—if you keep a can of "X" Liquid handy. Just get a can of "X" and do the repair job yourself.

Get "X" Liquid from your steam-fitter, or we will ship, charges prepaid, on receipt of price.

Tennessee State Florists' Ass'n.

Sixth Annual Convention, Knoxville, February 5-6, 1920.

Good Attendance and Fine Programme.

The sixth annual convention of the Tennessee State Florists' Association, held at Knoxville, February 5-6, was a success in every sense of the word. The programme showed careful thought in its arrangement, interesting and well-balanced throughout, the various papers and discussions being in the capable hands of well-known members of the trade, and the large attendance at the sessions manifested unusual interest in the proceedings.

A. H. Dailey, following the call to order by A. J. McNutt president of the Knoxville Florists' Club, introduced Mayor E. W. Neal, whose greeting left no doubt in the minds of the visitors as to the warmth and sincerity of the city's welcome. H. C. Bramm, Bristol, prsident of the state association, delivered his annual address, which showed careful preparation, while the reports of the secretary-treasurer, Professor C. M. Bentley, Knoxville, were gratifying. Then followed four interesting features, the first being a discussion of "Office Management and Collections," in which W. Cleveland Johnson, Memphis, Robert E. Mapes, Knoxville, and Thomas H. Joy, Nashville, imparted much valuable information. S. S. Skidelsky, New York, had for his topic, "Our Credit System, Its Uses and Abuses," and he proved himself thoroughly conversant with his subject. George Asmus, Chicago, was listened to with interest, and was well chosen to speak on "The Florist Business of Today." He was followed by Z. D. Blackistone, Washington, D. C., and George Schulz, Louisville, Ky., who brought out many interesting points on "Local Publicity." At the conclusion of their remarks, an adjournment was taken for luncheon.

Election of Officers.

The business of the afternoon session opened with the election of officers, resulting as follows: Addison J. McNutt, Knoxville, president; Thomas H. Joy, Nashville, vice-president; C. M. Bentley, Knoxville, secretary-treasurer (re-elected). Memphis was chosen for the next annual meeting, which will probably be held in November of this year.

The inability of Philip Breitmeyer and Albert Pochelon, of Detroit, Mich., to be present was a matter of regret, but both had prepared excellent papers on "Why Every Retail Florist Should Join the F. T. D." both forceful arguments full of sound logic and facts. Michael Bloy, connected with the F. T. D. headquarters at Detroit, was present. He is an able speaker and his visit will doubtless prove a great stimulant to the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association in the south.

A. F. J. Baur, Indianapolis, Ind., presented a paper on "A Talk on Carnations." Widely known as an authority on this flower, his treatment of the subject brought out many interesting points. Harold Joy, Nashville, followed with another excellent paper, "Can Carnations Be Grown Successfully in the South?" which showed he was well versed in his subject. Another interesting feature was that of J. Keur, of Hillegom, Holland, who presented his views on "The American Embargo on Plants and Bulbs." William F. Gude, Washington, D. C., in his talk on "Legislation," showed by his handling of the subject an understanding resulting from careful analysis of restrictive measures.

At the evening session, William H. Crouch, Knoxville, had for his theme, "Relations of Music to Flowers," followed by Mrs. Edith Goetz, of Chattanooga, whose part of the programme proved novel and instructive in her make-up demonstrations and a talk on "Modern Salesmanship of Flowers." The first day's programme closed with living model demonstrations, in charge of A. H. Dailey

Second Day's Session.

The Friday morning session opened with papers on "Floral Accessories," by Robert Shoch, Philadelphia, Pa., and C. E. Critchell, Cincinnati, O., both of whom showed thorough familiarity with their subject. Philip J. Foley, Chicago, was unable to be present on account of illness in his family, but sent an excellent paper on "Greenhouse Construction," which was read. R. R. White, Troy, O., interested the delegates with an instructive talk on "Artificial Irrigation," and after Bruce Howell, Knoxville, covered his subject, "In What Way Does the Ornamental Grower Benefit the Florist?" the meeting adjourned for conference and to inspect the display section. A list of the exhibitors will be found below.

In the afternoon, the visitors were taken via automobiles on an inspection tour of the ranges and nurseries in the vicinity. In the evening, the annual banquet, with the Knoxville florists as hosts, was held at the Whittle Springs hotel, a delightful close of a successful and enjoyable event long to be remembered by those in attendance.

Washington Rulings and Regulations.

NEW EXCHANGE RATES FOR IMPORTERS.

New customs regulations that will materially lower the amount of money that must be paid by importers upon entering merchandise of foreign production in the United States have been approved by President Wilson. Up to the present time, entries of merchandise have been liquidated upon the coin values proclaimed by the secretary of the treasury and the estimate of the director of the mint, of the values of pure metal contents of foreign coins to be the values of such coins in terms of our own money. These entries were subject to reliquidation only upon the order of the secretary of the treasury, when satisfactory evidence was produced to him showing that the values in United States currency of the foreign money specified in the invoices were at least 10 per cent more than the values so proclaimed. It can readily be seen that adherence to this provision of law, worked a hardship on importers when the exchange value of the German mark dropped to less than three cents and the government maintained its coin value of $0.2382. The pre-war value of the Austrian krone was about $0.2026; its exchange value is now $0.0225. The exchange rate of the French franc, the Italian lira, and, in fact, the coins of nearly every nation, is below the coin values so proclaimed. It is now provided, that if the currency specified in the invoice is exchanged for United States currency in the country of exportation at a rate which is lower than the value proclaimed by the secretary of the treasury, the consul shall attach to the invoice a certificate showing the rate of exchange in the principal markets of the country on the date of certification, and such currency will be reduced by the collector of customs to United States currency in accordance with the currency certificate.

RETURN OF PARCEL POST MATTER.

Congress has passed a law providing for the return of undeliverable parcel post matter. The purpose of the law, as explained by the senate committee on post offices and post roads, is to permit the return to the sender of undeliverable second, third and fourth class mail matter which, under the then existing law, if it could not be delivered at the post office to which it was addressed, could not be forwarded to the addressee or returned to the sender at another post office, until the postage for its forwarding or return was first prepaid. This necessitated the holding of undeliverable matter at the office of original address, pending the notification to the addressee or the sender, and the receipt of the required postage for its transmission to its ultimate destination. As every retailer knows, this delay frequently caused loss and hardship to the sender or the addressee or both. It was believed that provision should be made for the return of undeliverable parcels bearing the pledge of the sender to pay the return postage upon delivery of the matter. The bill which was adopted, first by the house and then by the senate, was drafted by the post office department. It was realized, that in order to make the mail service as effective as the express service, something of this nature had to be done. There were many complaints of the failure of the department's employes in the local offices to take quick action in returning undeliverable packages, but in the absence of the law just enacted, they were helpless in the matter.

Rose Beetle Control.

Professor C. A. Weigel, of the United States department of agriculture, bureau of entomology, greenhouse insect investigation, recently gave an interesting talk before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, Pa., on the small beetle that has caused so much damage to rose plants in that vicinity. The speaker said the insect is the strawberry beetle, which has been an outside pest for many years, but not until recently found in greenhouses. It lays its eggs in the ground and when hatched out the larvae attack and feed on the roots of roses, getting beneath the bark just under the surface of the soil, completely girdling the plant which dies. The adult beetle comes to the surface during late July or early in August and feeds on the young shoots or buds as they commence to develop after their resting period. As soon as possible after they have reached the adult stage they should be given one or two good doses of cyanide gas, which has so far been found to be the only method of destroying them. The government now has a department devoted to greenhouse insect investigation, whose experts will be glad to visit ranges and inspect insect pests of all kinds and suggest methods for their extermination.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Rossi Honored.

Members of the Downtown Association of San Francisco, Calif., are congratulating themselves on their wisdom in electing Angelo Rossi president of the association.

Mr. Rossi, with the energy and enthusiasm that has characterized his work on every public or private committee, has already outlined tentative plans for a busy 1920 for the organization. After making a careful survey of the membership of the Downtown Association, President Rossi said, January 13, he would announce his appointments to the various committees within a few days.

"The great big thing before every civic and commercial organization of San Francisco today is the democratic national convention," he added. "We must start in, all of us, to prepare for this convention. It means more to San Francisco than many realize. The securing of the democratic convention means that the way has been paved for other great conventions. We must get together and make the visit of the democratic chiefs pleasant. We must see to it that each one returns home an advertiser for San Francisco. It is my idea that all the civic, boost and similar organizations of San Francisco should, and I know they will, cooperate toward this end. We must see to it that nobody in San Francisco profiteers at the expense of our visitors. We must see that everybody is properly housed.

"I am confident that if the need arise that members of the Downtown Association will be glad to take into their homes, without expense to the delegates, such visitors as may not be able to find proper accommodations at the hotels. I know the San Francisco spirit and I know we are hospitable to the last degree. Nobody must be "held up" in San Francisco when this convention is on.

"It is my belief that all the organizations of San Francisco, especially the Downtown Association, Rotary Club, Advertising Club, California Home Industry League and other similar organizations should meet together at least once a month. All these organizations do much good for the city. Usually each organization does a separate work, but there are times when there are duplications. I believe by having joint meetings we could exchange valuable ideas and promote the prosperity of the community and of the organizations as well."

Mr. Rossi is a member of the city playground commission and is now serving his third appointive term on this body. He also is a prominent Native Son, serving at present on the board of appeals of the lodge. He also is past grand marshal of the order. In addition to being a member of the Native Sons, he is a member of several other fraternal organizations and also belongs to the Rotary Club and Advertising Club, of which he is a director. He is a charter member of the Downtown Association, which was reorganized after the fire of 1906.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

While the market situation is a little easier, it will be several weeks before the long-looked-for normal condition shall arrive, or what will be considered normal for this season, as good judges say that prices are destined to remain at a higher level for the balance of the winter and spring, which condition will also prevail to a greater or less degree during 1921.

While there is no doubt that some former customers now find flowers too high for their slender purses and pass them by, it is safe to say that 75 per cent who enjoy or require the stock of the florist, regard flowers as they do other commodities, for which they are obliged to pay two or three times pre-war prices, and are satisfied with the higher rates.

Many retailers, notwithstanding the experience they have with high prices when purchasing goods in lines outside the business cannot become reconciled to the necessary advance in prices of plants and flowers, although they are in production, subject to even more severe cost conditions than many other lines of trade. Then, too, many, in their minds, believe that because they could not pay for their own use, such increased prices, their customers cannot either, and in consequence, carry a very meagre stock with a resulting decline in business.

Rest assured of one thing; if there is anything wrong with one's business, it can be traced directly to mis-management. High prices will never drive customers away who get value for their money. If trade is dull, it is because it is not made interesting for them to buy. The man who gives value and service, and shows that he understands his profession, will never lack for patronage.

Under present conditions, it it best to feature plants and flowers that are most plentiful. Primulas obconica, stellata, chinensis, malacoides and Townsendii are all showy, and with the pots decorated to give them a dressy appearance, will make a good appearance. Cyclamens are also in good favor and very decorative. A selection of ferns of the Boston types will help the appearance of the store. All of the above are good substitutes for high priced cut flowers, where they are intended as cheer for the sick room, or a gift for a friend.

Choice cut fronds of the tasseled varieties of ferns, such as elegantissima, Norwood, Verona and Smithii are good stock to carry, they being especially useful to arrange in a vase with a few choice roses, where, on account of their price, three may be made to do for six. These will also take the place of cut flowers in helping to fill up a box.

Sweet peas are almost sure to be the quantity flower before long; they are very popular with the buying public, and should be carried in a good variety of colors.

Keep a good supply of pussy willows in various lengths. They are an addition to almost any flower arrangement in baskets or sprays, and are frequently sold by the dozen if featured and offered by themselves. The Forsythias are also a very pretty spray. When well flowered, they are very decorative.

One of the most showy flowers at this time is the calendula. The v arieties Orange King and Lemon Queen are striking in their brilliant coloring, much more showy than carnations, and not so expensive. They should be relieved of their bottom foliage and kept out of drafts. If for any reason they become wilted, wrap in paper and set in deep jars of water over night, which brings them up apparently as fresh as ever.

Callas, at one time thought to be very common, are now handled by the best shops, who find them, in their skillful manipulation, as satisfactory and profitable a flower as any they carry. They make very good single or double sprays, or arrange well with snapdragons, roses, freesia and other long stemmed stock. A large bunch of violets and a purple ribbon with callas is fitting for the funeral of an elderly person. They are also effective in table decorations if used in shallow bowls with foliage or in tall vases with acacia and other flowered sprays.

Feature Washington's birthday. There is not much of an extra demand for flowers, but there are quite a few patriotic semi-public dinners held on this day. It being a holiday, there is always more or less entertaining, for which flowers are in demand. The window should be decorated with a bust of Washington, used in connection with the flag and palm leaves. Many shops feature a special of miniature cherry trees in pots, which when decorated, and tied with narrow tricolor ribbon, a small hatchet and miniature flag, fit in with the celebration of the day, and generally find purchasers. A bunch of artificial cherries and foliage is a good outside decoration for a box of flowers.

Lincoln and Washington Birthdays.

While the average florist finds but little extra business resulting from the observance of the birthday anniversaries of these great national heroes, an opportunity is afforded to feature the event in a decorated window, that being timely, is sure to attract the passersby. Anything that calls attention to the store is well worth while, as those who are impressed are very likely to speak of the decoration to others, which is the best kind of advertisement.

The central idea or feature in such decorations should be a bust of the hero honored with the holiday. In every large city, very good plaster models in white or bronze can be purchased, which, if cared for, and put away after each celebration, will last for years. The decorative scheme can be changed each time, so that the bust will each year have a different setting. Wreaths of palm or oak leaves, together with a large flag, can be arranged in various ways to get the effect desired. The cast may be placed on a fluted pedestal, as seen in galleries, with the flag as a background, or it may be placed on a flag-draped stand. Any window decorator will be able, with such material and a few choice plants, to work up something that will interpret the spirit of the day.

The fable of the cherry tree is now so associated with the name of Washington that cherries are always considered and made a part in the various decorative effects in stationery, dinner cards and menus. Fancy paper table covers and napkins display the cherry, while artificial fruit and foliage, on small branches, present a very realistic appearance. All of the above can be utilized in the decorative featuring of the day in store and window.

A decorated table with a cherry tree center can be made of a small dogwood tree, covered with leaves to look growing and full of cherries. There are still well fruited plants of solanums, which, when decorated, make a good center. Several can be placed together in a plateau for greater effect. The cherry tree can rise from a plateau of red, white and blue flowers, and corsages and boutonnieres of the same may be placed at the plates. Of course, a hatchet tied to the trunk of the tree with tricolor ribbon is necessary to carry out the fabled idea.

Small vase baskets filled with any kind of flowers, are given the necessary touch with a sprig of foliage and cherries tied together with a miniature hatchet at the handle. A good special is a small, imitation, well-fruited cherry tree, about 12 inches in height, in a 5-inch pot. This should be decorated with crepe paper, and a small hatchet tied with tricolor to the trunk of the tree.

Solanums in 6-inch pots, or smaller, are still to be found, which can be decorated up with tricolor ribbons and a hatchet, and find a ready sale.

Boxes of cut flowers, or any package going out at this time, will be the better for a small twig of foliage and cherries. A corsage of violets, tied with tricolor ribbon and artificial cherries and leaves, which should always have the appearance of having been pulled from the tree, is directly identified with the day.

There should be many more flowers used in all such holiday celebrations. In every large city or community, patriotic bodies give dinners or hold meetings, at which eulogistic addresses are made by celebrated speakers. There are also many small social affairs, dinners and the like, at which flowers are used. These could be greatly encouraged by featuring the use of flowers in connection with the day, which would suggest the idea to many who otherwise would perhaps not think of it.

The way to sell flowers is to sell them, and there is no better way to feature and encourage their sale than to keep constantly before prospective buyers their various uses and the many ways in which they can best "Say It With Flowers."

Orchid Hearing at Washington.

To consider Plant Quarantine No. 37 in its relation to orchid imports, a number of prominent growers attended a conference of the federal horticultural board at Washington, D. C., February 10, at which the attention of the board was called to the fact that unless the quarantine affecting orchids is not modified, the stocks in this country will be exhausted in two or three years, and that the very few growers who are raising orchids from seed, will have a monopoly of the business.

The hearing was practically a debate as to whether orchids could be produced in this country in sufficient quantities, and rapidly enough to meet the demand, with the exception of those who are growing them from seed. Witnesses took the stand that this could not be done, and that to raise orchids from seed was a long process requiring considerable capital, this, despite the fact that early in the hearing, Chairman Marlatt declared that the question of whether they could be raised in the United States was not relevant to the matter, and that the board was concerned solely with the safety with which the order could be modified.

The first witness was John E. Lager, of Summit, N. J., who introduced a large number of letters from orchid growers and dealers, urging the lifting of the embargo. After pointing out that, in his opinion, it is impossible to grow orchids in sufficiently large numbers without continued importations, Mr. Lager called the attention of the board to the fact that although orchids are prohibited entry, other commodities from the tropics, among them bananas and mahogany, are allowed to come in without any inspection or regulation, although ants, plant diseases, insects and other troubles might easily be introduced with them. The great difference in the temperature and climate of the United States, as compared with those of tropics, he declared, is in itself almost sure to dispose of any insect or disease that might come in with tropical plants.

Mr. Lager was followed by W. J. Jones, of Thomas Young's establishment, Bound Brook, N. J., who urged the retention of the embargo as it now stands. Mr. Jones declared that, not only is it possible to grow orchids in this country from seed, but that his houses alone could produce 50,000 orchids a year, and that with four or five other growers producing the same number each, the country's demands could easily be met.

Further testimony from the various witnesses developed the fact that most of the seedlings now being raised in this country were produced before the embargo went into effect, and growers who are not in that branch of the business point out that, if such is the case, they should be given time in which to secure a sufficient stock of seedlings before the ban is put upon all importations.

Despite the fact that Chairman Marlatt has declared the board was not interested in whether orchids could be produced in this country, or whether they are considered by producers insect and disease carriers, the argument centered chiefly upon those two questions. Some of the witnesses declared that, in their belief, orchids brought no insects into the country, and pointed out that while California and Florida have very strict regulations covering the importation of foreign plants, no difficulty is experienced in importing orchids into those states, if they are clean.

Growers who have worked extensively with seedlings, related their experiences with orchids. Plenty of time, plenty of money, and no great expectations, seem to be the chief necessities of the man who would raise seedlings. One hundred plants from 1,000 seeds it was declared, was a good result, and a number of years would be required before the seed would develop into a flowering plant.

After considerable debate, Chairman Marlatt explained how the embargo now works. He pointed out that the age of a variety has nothing to do with the ability to import, the only requirements being that it be a new variety or stock not available here. Importations of plants to replenish this stock of a grower may be made in as large quantities as desired, he declared, but witnesses later said that the ability to do this was not sufficient because of the time elapsing between the entry of those plants and the flowering of plants propagated from them, it not being permitted to bring in plants for the purpose of selling their flowers.

The competition of Canadian growers in our markets was brought up once or twice, witnesses pointing out that the Canadians can ship in the flowers in large quantities and undersell the domestic growers. This also was a contested issue, other witnesses maintaining that the competition of Canadians was negligible.

The raising of the embargo for the period of a few months, to enable the importation of new stocks for propagation, was suggested by F. Peterson, of Burlingame, Calif. Another suggestion was that sufficient protection would be secured by the fumigation of plants in New York, but this was opposed by the board on the ground that fumigation will not reach fungi and disease nor insects that may be in the root of a plant. Other witnesses took the stand that the board had not shown conclusively that orchids are carriers of diseases or insects, and that under such circumstances it cannot properly exclude them.

SPECIAL ORCHID EXHIBITIONS.

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society has planned to make 1920 a memorable one for its orchid displays, having arranged monthly exhibitions so that the different orchid plants may be seen in bloom at Horticultural hall from January to December. These exhibitions will be given on Saturdays, the dates being as follows: February 28, March 27, April 10, May 15, June 19, July 10, August 14, September 11, October 9, November 6 and December 18.

Albert C. Burrage has offered to send from his greenhouses at Beverly Farms, for exhibition on these days, a century of orchid plants in flower, and the committee on exhibitions, Thomas Allen, chairman, earnestly requests that other orchid growers also exhibit on these days orchid plants which they have in bloom, whether the number be few or many. Displays of other plants of interest will also be welcome.

LECTURE PROGRAMME.

The lectures for the season of 1920 will be given by W. J. V. Osterhout, professor of botany, Harvard University. The subject of the course is "The Living Plant," and the date and a synopsis of each lecture are presented herewith.

February 28.—"Germination and Root Development." The requirements for successful germination; the forces which direct the root in its search for food and water.

March 6.—"The Root in Relation to the Soil." The absorption of materials by the root; the nature of the soil, and the principles of soil-management.

March 13.—"Work of the Leaf." The manufacture of food from air and water; the role of chlorophyll and of sunlight.

March 20.—"The Structure and Functions of the Stem." Division of labor in the tissues of the stem; conduction of food and water; laws of growth.

April 3.—"Flower and Fruit." Pollination, fertilization, the development of the seed and the formation of fruit.

April 10.—"Plant Breeding." The laws of heredity and their practical application to the improvement of plants.

By ordering now, florists in all sections where winter has prevented opening of the ground, can have billboard signs at hand ready for installation when conditions permit. The billboard is a wonderful help in the publicity movement, and is an ornament of no mean order to a florist's establishment, no matter how it is used, and it flashes the message, "Say it With Flowers," as nothing else can. The sign is furnished, to anyone who has an opportunity to make an installation, at the exact cost, $50, to our publicity committee, a cost which is about half that of a similar sign ordered by an individual. Shipment is made direct from the factory in Indiana, and freight charges are prepaid. Orders should be sent to the secretary, accompanied by a cheque for the cost, and instructions as to best route to destination, with name of railroad station. Clubs and other organizations would do well to take up the matter of obtaining pledges for installations of billboards, as a liberal display of them in their communities would be of great service to our industry, and help to perpetuate the message of the slogan. We have already noted what has been done by a few prominent organizations in this direction.

Our publicity committee is just now in urgent need of further support in the way of funds for a better continuance of the campaign. At present, they are dependent upon the funds pledged by those liberal-minded florists who have lent a hearty support to our project since its beginning and expansion, but with the funds thus forthcoming, we are only able to mark time, and prevent the benefit already promoted from fading away. Without the slightest doubt we can double this benefit by extending our effort, and this, of course, means the expenditure of more money, which must be collected from those whose interests it is to serve. Wherever there is a community big enough to support a florist, that florist's business is increased through the publicity afforded by the campaign. If all florists were to base subscriptions on even a small percentage of their increased business since the opening of the campaign, and would voluntarily send them in to the secretary, our committee would not now have to make an appeal, for funds would be ample. But thousands of otherwise astute florists are hanging back, content to let other of their brethren shoulder the expense of this, the greatest and most beneficial movement ever promulgated in the trade, or in few other trades. Unlike other trade slogans, "Say it With Flowers" conveys a message so widely appreciated, that perhaps only one class of people is unaffected by it, and that class has our sympathy and gratuitous service when in need of flowers—the poor and destitute.

Arouse yourself, then, Mr. Non-Subscriber. Help us to help you to still further increase your business by increasing the demand for your products. You should believe in this campaign as you do in your religion, and support it. You share in the benefit resulting, so why not in the expense of conducting it? If you think the matter over at all seriously, you will, afterward, send a cheque to the secretary for an amount which your conscience dictates you should send. JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

New York Florists' Club.

The New York Florists' Club met in its hall in the Engineering building, West 39th street, on the evening of February 9. There was a better attendance than might have been expected, considering the snow blockade. Secretary Young called the meeting to order, and announced that President Henshaw had contracted a severe cold while attending the carnation convention at Chicago and the directors' meeting at Cleveland. While he came to the city intending to preside at the meeting, he was ordered home by his physician. Vice-President Knight was also unable to attend on account of his wife being ill in a hospital at Babylon, L. I. Wallace R. Pierson then moved that Past President P. F. Kessler be requested to take the chair, which was unanimously agreed to. He was then escorted to the chair by President Miller, of the S. A. F.

Roman J. Irwin, chairman of the committee, reported on the annual banquet, which will be held at the Hotel Biltmore, March 17. The tickets will be $5 each.

For the transportation committee, Thos. B. De Forest reported progress. For the committee on changes in the charter, Wm. H. Siebrecht, Jr., reported progress. Arthur Herrington reported for the flower show committee on the spring show to be held in the Grand Central Palace, March 15-21. He said that the outlook for a great show was most promising. Admission to the show will be $1 per person; trade tickets at the rate of 40 cents each. Mr. Herrington earnestly urged that each member of the club constitute himself a committee to boost the show to "a great big success." He added that a strict watch will be kept to protect exhibitors from possible damage and losses. On account of the crippled condition of transportation, the house committee reported the "canteen" out of commission, which caused the irrepressible humorist to whisper to his neighbor, that present day canteens were only skeletons anyway.

The following were elected to membership: William H. Johnston, 131 East 26th street, New York; F. M. Pennock, San Juan, Porto Rico; Dwight M. Hills, 205 West street, New York; H. B. Marinelli, Montvale, N. J.; Fred W. Payne, Grand Central Palace, New York; Philip Haas, College Point, New York; Earl B. Shaw, Riverdale, New York. H. B. Marinelli, a newly elected member, and grower of the Malmaison carnation, was called to the platform, and gave an interesting talk on his favorite flower. Eight names were proposed for membership.

Secretary Young reported that flower show tickets will be sent only to members in good standing. President Miller, of the S. A. F., gave a glowing account of his visit to Chicago, and the two days' session of the directors at Cleveland. Secretary Young rose CITY NOTES.

One of the few New Jersey florists that reached the city during the storm, was that hardy pioneer, Frank L. Moore, of Chatham. Mr. Moore possesses a great fund of information relating to events of the past 60 years. As a boy, he lived in the city in 1863, and saw the draft riots—events that few present day residents know anything about, and the few that do, are little inclined to talk of them. In all these years, he has kept born in England 60 years ago, but most of his life was spent in New York and vicinity. He is survived by his wife and three daughters.

At the store of the Boulevard Floral Co., 2391 Broadway, the only worry was about their bookkeeper, who on account of the high tides, was marooned at her home on Staten Island. But as she is a resourceful young lady and can sew and knit like a professional, they believe that she is making the best of the situation.

N. A. Doganges, 2685 Broadway, has an advantage over some of his competitors. In addition to having his store finely decorated with palms, ferns and flowering plants, he carries an excellent stock of fruit. He says that when flowers are so high, many of his customers prefer to buy fruit.

The Lacedemonian Association, of which many of the Greek-American florists are members, will give a grand ball at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel on the night of March 13. Geo. J. Polykranas, the 28th street wholesaler, is chairman of the committee on arrangements.

We found the Aphrodite Co., 2703 Broadway, undisturbed by the storm. They had recently had good business in wedding decorations, and in the meantime, were keeping up their stock and window decorations just as if business was at its best.

A great accumulation of ice and wet snow on the roof of one of the houses at the Duckham-Pierson range, broke in a section, February 6. We understand that the damage can be easily repaired—with favorable weather.

We are pleased to state that Mrs. Charles H. Brown, wife of the well known florist of Broadway and 86th street, who suffered for a year or more from a severe attack of rheumatism, is now completely recovered.

The staff at the store of J. G. Papadem & Co. was in a cheerful mood, regardless of bad weather, as J. G. owns a good restaurant and they are always sure of their meals.

During the succession of storms of the past week, the retailers practically marked time. The streets were in such a condition that many people kept close to their homes.

to remark that his heart was warmed by the hospitality shown himself and associates at Chicago and Cleveland, and that he was in favor of inviting all visiting florists to the annual banquet. Roman J. Irwin indorsed the remarks of the secretary. On motion, the dinner committee was given full power to act in the matter.

Wallace R. Pierson read an extended address on the organization of the National Growers' Association. He explained that in order that he might not be misquoted, he had written out his ideas. We hope to give a more extended account of his remarks at a future date. After reading his paper, he made extemporaneous remarks on the gloomy outlook relating to labor in the florist industry. He feels that men cannot be held at the present scale of wages in florist establishments. Charles Schenck strongly supported Mr. Pierson's attitude as taken in his paper. President Miller added a few words, saying he wanted to see better conditions among growers, in order to help the laborers in the vineyard of flowers. Chairman Herrington, of the essay and lecture committee, said he had been disappointed in securing a lecturer for the evening, but hoped for better success in the future. It was suggested that the club should pay its lecturers.

EXHIBITS.

Lecluse & Lecluse, Blue Point, N. Y., exhibited a sport of the carnation, Enchantress Supreme—thanks of awards committee.

Harry O. May, Summit, N. J., exhibited the carnations, Belle Washburn, White Enchantress and Pink Delight—awarded cultural certificate for the collection.

The Springfield Floral Co., Springfield, N. J., exhibited Belle Washburn, Enchantress Supreme and White Enchantress—awarded cultural certificate for the collection.

Under the weather and transportation conditions, a less persevering man than Chairman May, of the exhibition committee, might have "fallen down" on exhibits, As it was, they were exceptionally creditable.

well informed on the progress of the florist business, being the greater part of the time an active participant.

The young ladies of the office force of Vaughan's Seed Store made up a jolly party on the evening of February 4, and attended the Selwyn theater, where Donald Brian, Peggy Wood and Ralph Morgan captivated them in the musical hit, "Buddies." They took supper at the Martha Washington hotel, and regardless of the fact that a snowstorm was raging, they reported a most enjoyable evening. Their only regret was the absence of the representative of THE AMERICAN FLORIST.

M. J. Dodsworth, vice-president and treasurer, and a director of the Journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin, died suddenly, February 6, at his home in Summit, N. J. He was GOOD DEMAND IN ALL LINES.

Trade is very brisk. Funeral work has been very heavy, and there is a strong demand for all flowers for social activities. Roses are still high in price. What stock is secured is, as a rule, of the best quality. Still, there is quite a shortage of nearly every variety. Russell is particularly hard to get and the supply of American Beauty is rapidly falling off. At present, Shawyer is at its best, and is one of the leading roses offered. Ophelia and Columbia are in very short supply. There is quite a heavy crop of carnations arriving, and owing to the shortage of roses, find a ready market. As a general rule, the quality is good. Sweet peas are not so plentiful as formerly, and have been a scarce article all week. Freesias are now numerous, but the strong demand keeps prices at about $3 per 100. Some good yellow, pink and lavender are bringing much higher figures. Daffodils are rapidly becoming plentiful, but as yet there has been very little drop in prices. There are plenty of violets and great quantities are going into funeral work. There is a large supply of orchids, principally cattleyas. Prices are from $1.00 to $1.50 a flower. Gardenias are in generous supply and sell well at steady prices. Ferns and asparagus are quite scarce.

NOTES.

Klamath river redwood land, valued at over $200,000, and held until recently by Charles Willis Ward, of the Cottage Gardens Nurseries, Eureka, has just been sold on foreclosure to the Peninsula State Bank of Michigan for $107,858. It is said that the action of the bank was entirely friendly, and was taken to save the property for Ward, pending settlement of his tangled financial affairs.

The Nugent Sisters, of San Lorenzo, are sending in a very heavy cut of early daffodils to this market. For several years these ladies have been working up a stock of these bulbs until several acres are now under cultivation.

At San Leandro, the Misses Dannevan are busy harvesting their crop of early daffodils. This firm is one of the chief sources of supply of this market. This stock is excellent this year due to ideal growing conditions.

The Pacific Coast Horticultural Society has elected officers for 1920 as follows: A. Clemo, president; V. Ferrari, vice-president; J. R. Walsh, corresponding secretary; B. E. Meyer, financial secretary; J. A. Axell, treasurer.

Avensino Bros., who discontinued business on Geary street last fall, will again enter the retail trade and have leased a store on Geary street near Powell. It will be ready for occupancy about the first of March.

George C. Roeding, of the Fancher Creek Nurseries, of Fresno, has been appointed a member of the republican special committee on policies and platform by Will H. Hays, republican national committee chairman.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. have been busy on decorations this week. Frank Pelicano is fortunate in having a fine crop of asparagus and ferns from his own greenhouses when this stock is so scarce elsewhere.

At the greenhouses of Ferarri Bros., many thousand tulips and hyacinths are being forced for the spring trade. They already have a good daily cut of the former, for which they report a strong demand

The MacRorie-McLaren Company is showing a fine grade of early tulips, which find a ready market. Funeral work has been quite heavy here of late and a large volume of business is being done.

The old-time favorite violet, Marie Louise, seems to be coming into its own again this season. Many of the stores are receiving shipments every morning from Half Moon Bay.

Frank R. Mills, of Palo Alto, says shipping trade is very good with him. The demand for carnations, he reports as especially strong. He has a nice cut of orchids also.

The Art Floral Co., on Powell street, has hundreds of cut orchid blooms and many finely flowered specimens of cattleyas on display in its windows.

J. A. Axell says the rose shortage has cut down shipments considerably, but it will be only temporary.

DEMAND GOOD; SHORTAGE UNRELIEVED.

It is the same old story—demand much larger than supply. Not that the supply is smaller than in former years at this season, but that the demand is much greater. Outside of carnations, there has been more flowers handled in this market since January 1 than for the same period last year, and the growers who planned for a crop during January and February have surely reaped a harvest. If it had not been for the unfavorable weather, there is no doubt, with but few exceptions, that the supply would have been sufficient to take care of all demands. Now St. Valentine's day is upon us with its larger demand and no supply increase in sight, and the wholesale houses afraid to promise exactly just what they will have and in what amount, that it makes it hard for the retailer to book orders ahead until he knows just what he is going to receive. The supply of all kinds of flowers is slowly on the increase, but not enough to make any impression on the market. Roses are on the increase, especially in the better grades, but that does not help out much in funeral work. Carnations are improving in quantity and quality and are bringing holiday prices. An increased supply of jonquils, tulips and Paper Whites has helped out the shortage. Easter lilies have made their first appearance in this market, while the supply of callas is on the increase. Sweet peas are arriving in larger quantity and the quality could not be improved upon. The lilac shipments sell on arrival, which also holds true of freesia. Mignonette, snapdragons, calendules, daisies and baby primroses, while not received in large quantities, all help to fill in. To make matters worse, all shipments from the east last week were delayed from 24 to 48 hours because of the storms in the eastern part of the state.

NOTES.

Albert Brigg, of the north side, has been greatly handicapped by sickness. First, his wife was taken with the influenza, and then his assistant, E. K. Tipton, was ill with the same disease, which practically left Albert alone, but by hard work, he pulled through, and at this writing, they are all on the job again.

The influenza has hit the florists harder this winter than it did last year. Several are out with it at the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., Fred Reigelmeyer, of the south side, has had a bad attack of it, and, in fact, there are few stores where one or more of the help are not at home.

Wm. Loew, one of this city's oldest florists, and Joseph Thomas, of Greensburg, Pa., are on their annual southern tour. They expect to visit all the points of interest in Florida, and if they get dry, we suppose they will also visit Cuba.

The John Keil Co., of East Liverpool, O., reports January as one of the largest months they ever had, running mostly to funeral work.

Manager Harvey C. Sheaff, of Mrs. E. A. Williams' store, has returned to work after a two weeks' illness.

LIMITED SUPPLY MAINTAINS PRICES.

Business has shown little change over the previous week. While stock may have been more plentiful, not enough has put in an appearance to more than hold firm the present prices. Premier, Columbia, Butterfly and the Killarney roses move quickly; in fact, they are simply distributed to waiting hands. Carnations stand about the same, $12 to $15 for the best, other grades selling as low as $8 per hundred. Freesia and narcissi are plentiful, and bring $6 per hundred. Sweet peas are about equal to the demand. Single daffodils are making their appearance but only in small quantities. Calendulas are in good supply. Violets are good. The retailers are bending every effort to hold the confidence of their trade until such a time comes when they can look them in the face when giving prices. A great many, of course, would like to see returns still higher, but the more conservative ones realize that all prices must come down to a sane basis if we want to sell the masses and not a chosen few. As a result, most shops are offering some flowers at cost, in this way taking care of the dissatisfied ones. A new idea that has been tried out in this city is to interest the welfare associations of large corporations and the like in the fact that they should remember those missing from the time clock, through sickness, with flowers. One retailer received over 20 orders in one day from a large manufacturing concern through a little agitation of this sort. In these days of much sickness, it is self-evident that large concerns having hundreds of employes on their pay roll, have a long sick list.

NOTES.

Joseph Hill, Richmond, Ind., paid us a visit. He wears the smile that don't rub off, and the cigars were good. Other visitors en route home from Knoxville, Tenn., where they attended the meeting of the Tennessee State Florists' Association, were Guy French, George Asmus, August Poehlmann and A. Miller, Chicago; W. S. Metzmaier, Columbus, O.; M. Bloy and wife, Detroit, Mich., and O. Steinkamp, Indianapolis, Ind.

C. E. Critchell is handling some fine snapdragons, also calendulas, sweet peas and freesia of good quality. The demand for valentine novelties is good, most lines being sold out.

The Wm. Murphy Co. received a fine shipment of Woodwardia fern from the coast.

Peter Herb, Mt. Healthy, is cutting some fine freesia and baby primroses.

Louis Pfeifer & Sons will soon be cutting freesia from 30,000 bulbs.

HEAVY DEMAND HOLDS WITH PRICES HIGH.

Trade continues brisk with a short supply of stock, resulting in a quick daily clean-up, more noticeable than for some time past. No matter how many orders have been taken, the designers have to wait for the daily cut to arrive before being able to proceed with their work. There is a great deal of funeral work, one firm having orders for four palls in one morning, which in themselves practically exhausted the entire day's supply. We are having some bright days and the sun is proving of wonderful benefit to the roses and carnations. There is a call for every rose, however, as fast as it opens. Carnations are also doing better, but the price remains high at $3 per dozen, greater than ever obtained before.

NOTES.

Thomas H. and Harold Joy attended the state florists' meeting at Knoxville, February 5-6, taking with them some fine Columbia and Ophelia roses, which were placed on display in the exhibition section.

Leon Geny, who has charge of the retail establishment of Geny Bros., was prevented from attending the state convention, a number of the firm's employes being off duty on account of sickness.

L. H. Haury & Sons are well pleased with their new location and are enjoying a good business. While with others they feel the shortage of cut stock, they have fine flowering plants.

BRISK DEMAND FOLLOWS INFLUENZA.

Business during the past few weeks has been unusually good, stimulated by a strong demand for flowers as the result of the influenza epidemic, resulting in many deaths. The supply has been very limited with roses, carnations and spring flowers high in price, although quality has been excellent. There is a strong call for freesia, daffodils, Paper Whites, sweet peas and pussy willows. Cattleyas are plentiful and of good quality and violets are in fine form. Flowering plants meet with ready sale.

NOTES.

The sympathy of the trade is extended to George Case of the staff of James Vick's Sons, whose father died, January 30.

Horace J. Head has departed on a southern trip.

George B. Hart reports a splendid demand for florists' supplies.

H. E. Wilson's store force enjoyed a sleighing party recently, followed by a dinner served at the Wilson home. All present had a splendid time.

Hugo Teute is marketing fine stock of freesia and cinerarias.

The monthly meeting of the florists' association will be held at the Osborne house, on the evening of February 13.

NOTES.

Gerhard Fleischman contemplates disposing of his long-established business to be better able to attend to his extensive mining interests in Custer county.

Frank Sauerwald, of the Colonial Flower Shop, arranged a beautiful design in the form of an American flag for the funeral of an army officer who died recently at Ft. Leavenworth.

While carnations at the range of Charles Wallace are not as numerous as in former years, a visit to his establishment brought to our notice some splendidly grown cyclamens, cineraries and primulas.

The Bolt Floral Co. boasts of having some of the finest sweet peas offered anywhere in the state.

George Lane, the city's florist, has now taken up his residence near the greenhouses in Mineral Palace park.

Local florists are making extensive preparations for St. Valentine's day business.

Horticultural Society of New York.

A free lecture on "Vegetable Gardens" will be delivered by Adolph Kruhm, February 18, 8:15 p. m., at the American Museum of Natural History, 77th street and Central Park West. Mr. Kruhm is an authority on this subject. The purchase of vegetables forms a considerable part of the living expenses, and there are many who can grow their own vegetables. For such, Mr. Kruhm has an especial message.

OBITUARY.

William Berger.

William Berger, a well known and successful florist of Germantown, Philadelphia, Pa., died, February 5, age 73 years. He had been ailing for some time, and underwent an operation recently, but which did not afford the desired relief.

Mr. Berger was born in Germany, July 28, 1847. He served an apprenticeship in the Royal Gardens in Baden, coming to this country in 1866, starting greenhouses on Queen Lane, Germantown. About 1900, he opened a retail store on Germantown avenue, near Chelten avenue, later purchasing a large tract of ground a block below, on which he erected a store and quite a range of glass. In 1915, he retired in favor of his sons, who have since carried on the business. Two of his brothers, John and Harry, established a wholesale commission house for the sale of cut flowers at 1225 Race street, which successful business is now managed by John Berger.

Mr. Berger leaves a wife, seven sons and three daughters. The funeral, held February 9, was largely attended by members of the craft, by whom he was held in the highest esteem.

K.

Ray E. Cooper.

Ray E. Cooper, superintendent of the greenhouses of Carpenter, the Florist, Cohoes, N. Y., which position he held for the past 10 years, died at his home in that city, February 6, following a two weeks' illness with pneumonia. The deceased had a wide acquaintance in the vicinity of Cohoes and was held in the highest esteem by his fellow employes and townspeople. As an employe of Ansel D. Carpenter, he grew up with the business, and his death at the age of 34 years cut short a promising career. He was a popular member of the Albany Florists' Club, a Mason, and he took an interest in civic and church affairs. Surviving are a widow, three brothers, a sister and his father, L. H. Cooper, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

Pericles Giatras.

Pericles Giatras, a well known florist of West Hoboken, N. J., died, January 29, of kidney disease, in a New York sanitarium, age 42 years. He was a native of Greece, but the active years of his life had been spent in New York and vicinity. For several years, he conducted a retail store on Columbus avenue, New York. When he gave it up, he joined his brother George, in the plant growing business at West Hoboken, where they had considerable success, the deceased having been salesman. He was clever and amiable, and made friends. His funeral was held, February 2, at the Greek church on West 54th street, New York, and was largely attended by the members of the Lacedmomonian Association, of which he was a member. He is survived by a brother and sister of West Hoboken.

BOSTON coal dealers have advanced prices 50 cents per ton.

THE mid-year meeting of the School Garden Association of America will be held at Cleveland, Ohio, February 24-25, with the department of superintendents of the National Education Association.

THE home production of palms and other decorative plants in the east and in California appears to be progressing favorably, and growers of this stock are hopeful of being able to overcome the radical strictures of the federal government against imports, within a few years.

BUSINESS men should see that insurance policies are payable in event of fire, in American dollars. Millions of dollars of insurance in the United States are placed in foreign companies, especially British, and payments in their currency at preesnt rate of exchange would show serious depreciation.

Personal.

Theodore Wirth, superintendent of Minneapolis parks, will address the horticultural students at the University of Illinois, Urbana, February 23, on landscape gardening problems.

TO EUROPEAN TOURISTS.—Be on the lookout for wooden nickels and low-priced castles carrying profiteer taxes.

Agricultural Appropriation Bill.

Carrying a total appropriation of approximately $30,000,000, the annual agricultural appropriation bill has been submitted to Congress for the fiscal year beginning July 1 next. Several hundred thousand dollars are provided in funds to be used for investigations, etc., a number of them of interest to florists. Among these items are the following: The sum of $62,020 for investigations of plant diseases and pathological collections, including the maintenance of a plant disease survey; $80,935 for the investigation of diseases of orchard and other fruits; $81,115 for the investigation of diseases of forest and ornamental trees and shrubs, for the purpose of discovering new methods of control and applying methods of eradication or control already discovered; $95,400 for the investigation of diseases of drug, crop and related plants, and $24,940 for technological investigations, including the study of plant infesting nematodes.

Provision is made for $36,680 for the study and test of commercial seeds, including the testing of samples of grass, clover, alfalfa and lawn-grass seeds secured in the open market.

Twenty thousand dollars are to be appropriated for investigations, in cooperation with states or privately owned nurseries, of methods of propagating ornamental and other plants, the study of stocks used in propagating such plants and methods of growing stocks, for the purpose of providing American sources of such propagating materials.

Investigations in foreign seed and plant introduction will cost $82,700 next year, which includes the study, collection, purchase, testing, propagation and distribution of rare and valuable seeds, bulbs, trees, shrubs, etc. The sum of $130,000 is provided for the purchase, propagation, testing and distribution of new and rare seeds, the investigation and improvement of grass, clover and other crops, and for investigations into the most effective methods of eradicating weeds.

Congressional seed distribution is again provided for, $239,416 being estimated as the cost.

The only appropriation of interest to the trade which is made for the forest bureau is $120,640, for the purchase of tree seed, cones and nursery stock, to be used in the various parks.

Twenty thousand dollars are provided for the bureau of chemistry for the investigation and development of methods of manufacturing insecticides and fungicides and for investigating chemical problems relating to their composition, action, etc.

The bureau of markets' seed reporting service will require an appropriation of $314,600.

The federal horticultural board, in charge of all quarantine activities of the department, has $100,450 appropriated for the expenses incident to the enforcement of Quarantine Regulation No. 37.

The agricultural bill again carries the amendment proposed to the plant quarantine act, which would extend its provisions to the District of Columbia. Under the terms of this amendment the department would have autnity to regulate the movement of all plants and plant products in the District, which at present is not covered by any law. B. F. L.

Plant Quarantine Hearings.

To prevent the introduction into the United States of the so-called European corn borer and other dangerous insects and plant diseases, said to exist in Europe, Asia and Africa, and which may be introduced into this country through importations of corn, broom corn and related plants, a public hearing will be held at the rooms of the federal horticultural board, department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., at 10 o'clock a. m., February 12, in order that persons interested may appear and be heard regarding the proposed quarantine of such plants from all foreign countries.

It having been determined that dangerous plant diseases, including Japanese apple cankers, blister blight and rusts and injurious insect pests, including the Oriental fruit moth, the pear fruit borer, apple moth, Psylla pyrisuga, Lecanium glandi and L. kuneonsis, exist in Asia, Japan, Philippine Islands and Oceania, and that there is danger of these and other pests being introduced into the United States with stock cuttings, scions and buds of fruits from the countries named, a hearing on a proposed quarantine will be held at Room 11, federal horticultural board, United States department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., at 10 o'clock a. m., March 9, at which time persons interested may appear and be heard either in person or by attorney.

Foreign Note.

John M. Troup, who will be recalled by many Aberdonians as the former chief of the floral department of Ben Reid & Co., where he served for nearly a quarter-century, and later 28 years as head gardener at Balmoral Castle to three generations of British sovereigns, has retired from the latter position at the age of 71 years. Mr. Troup will continue to reside on the royal demesne.

Florists' Club of Washington, D. C.

A report of the convention of the American Carnation Society at Chicago by David G. Grillbortzer, of the Washington Floral Company, and the nomination of candidates for the various offices of the club for the ensuing year, made the February meeting a very interesting event. Despite the weather, the attendance was quite large, perhaps due to the announcement that after the business of the evening was concluded, Z. D. Blackistone "would open a keg." He did not quite keep his promise, although furnishing some of the best cider ever produced in Washington, for David Grillzortzer did the tapping.

The nominees for the various offices are as follows: For president, G. E. Anderson and J. Harper Hetherington; for vice-president, A. E. Gude, Jr., and Herbert M. Sauber; for secretary, G. Schultz and R. Lloyd Jenkins; treasurer, William F. Gude; members of the executive committee, Otto Bauer, Geo. C. Shaffer, David G. Grillbortzer, Charles P. Grose and Adolph Gude. The retiring president was named to fill the position of financial secretary for the ensuing year. This is a newly created office. There will be a great deal of interest taken in the coming election, according to speakers at this meeting, because of the prominence of the candidates in their respective lines. J. Harper Hetherington, manager of the Washington Floral Company, has been in the retail business for a dozen years, and has been both popular and prominent, while George E. Anderson is the gardener at Twin Oaks, the show place of Washington. Mr. Anderson has a very desirable reputation as a gardener, and is at present vice-president of the club.

ANOTHER STEP FORWARD

BURPEE'S NEW PRIMULINUS HYBRID GLADIOLI

The most graceful in form, artistic in color, and profuse in bloom of all gladioli.

These varieties have created a sensation wherever they have been exhibited. They are destined to become most useful to the Florist on account of their extraordinary appeal as cut flowers. The blooms are distinct and superior to the older types in their delicate form and pleasing arrangement. The individual flowers are not large but are borne on long, slender stems, with a fascinating grace and refinement.

Furthermore, these new hybrids produce three, four, and sometimes even five fully developed and separate flower-spikes to a single bulb. This characteristic will make them the most profitable of all gladioli to grow.

We are fortunate in now being able to offer these Primulinus Hybrids for the first time in straight colors. Our collection comprises the six most desirable varieties for Florists.

5324 Ada Dainty white flowers with red center; early blooming and very prolific. 3 for 85 cts.; 6 for $1.50; 12 for $2.75. Postage extra.

5328 Fire Queen Dazzling orange-vermilion with delicate yellow in the throat. A striking variety, blooming in mid-season. Spikes three to four feet long. 3 for 75 cts.; 6 for $1.25; 12 for $2.25. Postage extra.

5325 Queen Victoria Glittering, bright pink shading into silvery rose in the throat. Flowers of largest size and wonderfully shaped. Very early and productive. A remarkable variety in every way. 3 for 85 cts.; 6 for $1.50; 12 for $2.75. Postage extra.

5329 Violet Queen Velvety violet, an outstanding color. Flowers beautifully shaped and carried on long, strong stems. Very early. 3 for 95 cts.; 6 for $1.65; 12 for $3.00. Postage extra.

GREAT SHORTAGE OF CUT FLOWERS.

While there is no real epidemic of influenza in this city, there have been an unusual number of deaths during the last few weeks, causing an extraordinary demand for funeral work. This market depends to a great extent upon Chicago shipments, which have been very light, with the result that there is an acute scarcity of cut flowers. Florists are using all their ingenuity to fill orders, employing artificial flowers to some extent to fill in, also galax leaves. But those florists who were foresighted enough to lay in a good supply of plants report that they have no difficulty in using these for funeral work in baskets and hampers. Cyclamens left over from the holidays are cleaning up fine, and the first pot tulips and hyacinths are helping out. Roses, particularly the medium priced offerings, were hard to get, and are bringing top-notch figures. Sweet peas are beginning to come in more plentifully and cost real money. Carnations are scarce. The outlook for St. Valentine's day is not very bright as far as stock is concerned unless the demand can be switched to plants. However, florists here are optimistic, and are doing their best to create a big demand. Growers in this vicinity are making plans for the biggest Easter business of their careers and their houses show it. There will be plenty of lilies, hyacinths, hydrangeas and tulips, some of which are already beginning to bloom.

CLUB MEETING.

The meetings of the florists' club have of late developed into monthly debates on the question, "Shall Flower Stores Be Closed on Sundays?" Some months ago, 26 florists signed an agreement to close their stores on Sundays throughout the year, but almost every month something develops to throw the whole movement in the air, so to speak. Some florists seem to have detective agencies on the trail of their brother florists to catch them in the act of selling flowers on Sunday. Rumors become facts; then the club meets, threshes the entire matter out and all vote to stay closed. Before the next meeting night rolls around, the same thing happens again and there is another grand explosion. The meeting held February 3 at S. N. Peck's was a live one and the monthly debate on this topic was exceedingly interesting. Never were the florists so frank with each other, and when the smoke of battle settled over the combatants, the best of good fellowship prevailed and everyone went home happy that the stores would remain closed on Sundays. Now, if some florists can only resist the temptation to hang around their shops on Sundays, all will be serene. Time alone can tell. More anon.

NOTES.

Local florists are beginning to take up bowling, and weekly bowling parties are now held. The bowlers include growers and retailers, among others Harry Heinl, Albert Lehmann, Earl Metz, Max Spanner, Paul Timm, Jake Helmer, Frank Schramm and George Schramm. The talk is now to form a "Say It With Flowers" league.

Schramm Brothers have been enjoying a big demand for funeral work, and with cut flowers scarce, have been disposing of great quantities of cyclamen and primrose plants, of which they had a good stock. Their houses are beginning to produce pot hyacinths and tulips.

J. I. Schiller has a large and excellent variety of primrose plants, and this market is greedily absorbing all that this good grower can produce. He reports that his business has been making most profitable increases, and he looks forward to a splendid year.

Miss Helen Patten states that she can make enough money in six days, and will never again open up her store on Sundays. Her spunk is admired, along with the other qualities that made her one of the most successful florists in this city.

Funeral work has been heavy at John Barrow & Sons' greenhouse on Detroit avenue. A. C. K.

GOOD SALES MOVE STOCK AVAILABLE.

Scarcity of all kinds of flowers characterizes the local flower market, the demand being extra good and with short supplies. There is quite a scarcity in certain lines, especially true of carnations and roses. Funeral work is now the big feature. There is also a good call for flowers on account of sickness, and many orders are being sent to the hospitals. The tone of the trade is satisfactory and indications point to a continuation of good business for some time to come. Party work is rather quiet, but this is to be expected under the circumstances. There is some demand for receptions and dances, but the orders are not as large as usual. There is a good call for loose flowers, as is reported by all of the downtown florists. Roses are still one of the best features and sell from $6 to $12 per dozen. They are principally Ophelia, Russell, Columbia and Premier. Carnations are very scarce and command in the neighborhood of $3 per dozen. They are both pink and white. A better supply is expected when the sun again appears. Violets are rather plentiful, and there is a good demand reported. They sell at $2 per bunch. Jonquils and tulips are coming in and find a ready sale at good prices. Greens are plentiful. Plants are very scarce. Only a few primroses are found in the market. J. W. L.

Vick's Famous Asters

RECOGNIZED EVERYWHERE AS THE STANDARD OF QUALITY.

Wherever Asters are grown Vick's famous Aster seed is known and recognized as the standard of quality. JAMES VICK'S SONS are the largest growers of high grade Asters in the world and have been for years the undisputed leaders in introducing new varieties and in improving practically every other strain that is now commercially grown. This concern has introduced more new distinct varieties than all other American seedsmen combined. Cheaper seed can be grown elsewhere but better seed nowhere else. It would be an easy matter for us to fill in our stock with cheap seed grown in California or Europe, but we have no desire to descend from our present dominating position where we furnish only seed from transplanted plants grown from stock bred up by years of individual plant selection.

A view of one of our Aster Fields. We grow better Asters than any other grower in the world.

A WORD OF WARNING

We have been asked by many of our friends and customers to make it clear that James Vick's Sons are connected in no way with any other Rochester seed house. This is the old original concern, founded by the late James Vick, who during his lifetime was recognized as one of the leading and best loved seedsmen in America. This is the concern that has introduced practically all of the best known strains of Asters, including Vick's Branching Asters, all the Rochesters, Royals, Imperials, Kings, Mikados; in fact, there are very few varieties of American Asters in demand by the best growers that were not introduced by us. Let there be no confusion in your minds caused by misleading statements from any other source. If you want genuine Vick's Aster Seed and not seed of unknown origin grown in California or some other locality where cheap seeds are produced, be sure to address your letter to James Vick's Sons.

THE FLOWER CITY

Reduction in Rose Prices

A gradual decrease in prices of roses and other flowers can be expected right after St. Valentine's Day, as all conditions at the greenhouses point towards a larger cut of roses.

We will give our customers the benefit of these reductions as fast as possible. Our regular customers know from past experiences that they are given the benefit of any drop in prices promptly. It is this square dealing, together with the exceptionally fine quality of our roses that has built up our immense shipping trade. We invite those who wish to place regular shipping orders direct with the grower to give our stock and service a trial.

Find out by comparison, the advantages of buying direct of a large grower. The value of his greenhouses is largely in his ability to satisfy his customers.

Carnations will still continue short, as will the shorter length grade of roses.

All miscellaneous flowers are very scarce, but we will do our best to buy any stock wanted which we do not grow ourselves and have on hand.

HEAVY DEMAND FOR ST. VALENTINE'S DAY.

The demand for stock for St. Valentine's day is exceedingly heavy, especially from out-of-town points, and the local call promises to clean up the late shipments at an early hour, owing to an already short market. Everything points to a complete clean-up at the advertised quotations, and it is a question of obtaining enough stock and not how much is it worth that confronts the buyer. American Beauty roses are good property, and are disposed of early. Mrs. Chas. Russell, Columbia and Premier are in strong demand at high prices. Ophelia, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Sunburst, Champ Weiland, Killarney, Killarney Brilliant, White Killarney, Milady, Montrose, Hoosier Beauty and Mrs. George Shawyer are disposed of quickly, and there is a good demand for the miniature varieties, Cecile Brunner and Nesbit. Carnations are holding their own and continue in short supply. Sweet peas are selling at prices ranging from $3 to $5 per 100, with no surplus to speak of when the stores close for the day. Orchids are cleaning up right along at high prices and the same holds true for gardenias. Lily of the valley is moving well at prices ranging from $8 to $15 per 100. Freesias are more plentiful, but are having a good call and are disposed of each day at prices varying from $5 to $15 per 100. Calendulas, tulips, jonquils, mignonette, daisies, pansies, violets, white and yellow narcissi, stocks, snapdragons, hyacinths, stevia and other miscellaneous flowers not already mentioned are always disposed of at high returns to the growers. Greens are in strong demand, and at times certain items in this line are exceedingly scarce. The demand for funeral flowers continues heavy and the wholesale dealers are finding it impossible to fill in full anywhere near all the orders that are received.

Mention the American Florist when writing

It is reported that the junior prom scheduled to be held at Ann Arbor, Mich., February 12-13, was cancelled at the last moment owing to the influenza epidemic. This event always calls for a large supply of stock from this market, consequently some of the local dealers have had their cut flower orders cancelled, which is not causing them any hardship owing to the extremely heavy St. Valentine's day demand.

Matt Mann, of Zech & Mann, has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his father, Nicholas Mann, whose death occurred February 7, at the age of 86 years. The funeral was held the following Tuesday, with services at St. Gregory's church, and interment at St. Henry's cemetery. The late Mr. Mann was also the father of Nicholas J. Mann, Mrs. Mary Keil and the late Mrs. H. A. Seifert.

The retail florists, at their meeting February 10, named George Asmus, A. Lange and W. J. Smyth as their nominees for the board of directors of the Allied Floral Association, the new publicity organization.

Fred Longren, of the Burlington Willowware Shops, Burlington, Ia., and F. McCarthy, of the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, Pa., were at the Palmer House with exhibits this week.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is having a big call for stock for St. Valentine's day. Orchids and lily of the valley are moving fast.

Chas. F. Gunther, a devotee of gardening, and for many years a member of the Horticultural Society, died February 10, age 83 years.

Bassett & Washburn are cutting more heavily in roses which are in strong demand for St. Valentine's day.

Commissioner Reinberg and wife, and N. J. Wietor and wife, are at the Halcyon hotel, Miami, Fla.

E. C. Amling and Alois Frey, Crown Point, Ind., left for California, February 11.

Visitors: C. C. Pollworth and wife, Milwaukee, Wis.; George Hampton, with Jos. G. Neidinger Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; E. A. Fetters, Detroit, Mich.; James Karins, with Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa.; F. W. Dunlop, Toronto, Ont.; C. E. McGrath, of Fischer & McGrath, New Castle, Pa.

PANA, ILL.—The Walter A. Amling Co. is planting roses in its large new range here.

BELLAIRE, O.—Andrew J. McLellan, for more than 30 years in the florist business, died here recently, age 82 years.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—N. L. Hammer, a grower, who for many years conducted a flower stand in Center market, and an active member in the trade in this city, died recently following a few days' illness.

Chicago Florists' Club.

The regular meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club was held at the Hotel Randolph, February 5, with a good attendance, President Waters in the chair. New members were elected as follows: Ralph B. Howe, 231 West Madison street; Wm. F. Collins, 1457 East 70th street, and Walter G. Poehlmann, Morton Grove. The following were nominated for membership: C. A. Wrizley, 130 North Wells street; Albert Koehler, 172 North Wabash avenue; Vincent Neil, 172 North Wabash avenue; H. W. Miller, 324 West North avenue, and Herbert Stone, 4011 Milwaukee avenue.

Chairman C. W. Johnson, of the committee of arrangements for the recent conventions of the American Carnation Society and the Illinois State Florists' Association, presented a detailed report, showing that all plans had been carefully considered and most successfully carried out. Mr. Johnson also presented the supplementary report of Mrs. C. L. Washburn, chairman of the ladies' reception committee, and votes of thanks were accorded Mr. Johnson and Mrs. Washburn for the highly satisfactory manner in which they conducted this affair.

Vice-president A. T. Pyfer, who represented the club at the recent Cleveland meeting of the directors of the Society of American Florists, presented an exhaustive report of the proceedings, which was received with much interest.

This was novelty night at the club, but the showing of exhibits was evidently curtailed by the display made at the recent conventions; however, much interest was shown in those staged, which included the new rose, Frank W. Dunlop, exhibited by John H. Dunlop, Toronto, Ont., certificate of merit; giant calendulas from Geo. J. Ball, Glen Ellyn, certificate of merit; narcissus from home-grown bulbs and Rainbow freesia, exhibited by Peter Pearson, honorable mention; Rose Queen sweet peas from Gustav Swenson, Elmhurst, honorable mention; mignonette, by Chris Blameuser, Niles Center, honorable mention. The Poehlmann Bros. Co. exhibited seasonable supplies and the Little Wonder Irrigator Co. showed the Little Wonder irrigator. Both the latter exhibitors were given the thanks of the club for their displays.

Otto H. Amling called attention to the highly satisfactory progress being made by the local trade in publicity matters, stating that 75 per cent of the growers have now joined the movement, and called attention to an important meeting of this body scheduled for February 16. Wm. J. Keimel presented interesting details of the national growers' organization, and the club went on record as indorsing both these associations.

HEAVY DEMAND FOR FUNERAL FLOWERS.

There was no notable change in market conditions over that of the week previous. While the daily cut in almost all lines has increased somewhat, still the demand, especially for funeral work, has kept up a lively pace. While official reports state that the influenza epidemic is on the decrease, it seems that pneumonia is responsible for the increased death rate. Prices on all stock are still high and flowers continue to be rationed out as in the past; consequently, the prospects for St. Valentine's day are that there will not be enough by far to go around.

CLUB MEETING.

President H. Welke, who officiated at the club meeting, February 5, which was well attended, appointed the following committees: State fair, same as in 1919—Wm. Zimmermann, chairman; Alfred Locker, A. Leidiger. Entertainment—W. A. Kennedy, chairman; A. Hare, C. E. Dettmann, H. V. Hunkel, for the state fair committee, said that fine table decorations, to be changed each day during the fair, would be a new and attractive feature. Lack of room up to now prevented this new venture. The entertainment committee reported a neat profit from the recent dancing party, in spite of the fact that the attendance was greatly reduced, due to sickness among the local craft.

A committee of two was appointed to draw up suitable resolutions of sympathy to be forwarded to our fellow member, Oscar Golin, who mourns the loss of his beloved wife, whose death occurred January 31.

At the March meeting, it was decided to hold a display of cut flowers and plants.

NOTES.

Three employes of the Holton & Hunkel Co. mourn the loss of relatives, whose demise took place during the last week in January. Walter Holton lost his sister-in-law, Mrs. Muth her brother-in-law, and Miss Bruet, of the office force, a brother.

BUSINESS CONDITIONS GOOD

Business conditions have never been better in the history of the trade, looking at it from the angle of net gain to all concerned. Funeral work, of course, is extraordinarily heavy, as well as calls for flowers for the sick, but the thing that appeals is that social work has not suffered much from the unfortunate influenza epidemic. Stock of all kinds is not nearly ample to supply the demand, but everybody seems to slip by, and still able to satisfy his customers. The man who does not do this, either does not want to, or has not merchandising ability. Pot plants of all kinds in season have a great run, and the public has taken to the novel decorated begonia and primrose like the proverbial duck to water. In cut flowers, sweet peas, carnations and violets, with bulbous stock, form the bulk of the supply. Roses are decidedly off crop or something. Aside from this, the quality is, as a whole, only fair and prices are all out of reason for the grade of stock offered. Callas are rather plentiful, or at least equal to the normal supply.

NOTES.

The "Say It With Flowers" bowling league is tightening up somewhat. The tail-end Daisies are gathering speed for the home stretch, and expect to be near the top by the end of the season. The Roses have been weakened by the resignation of Carl Beyer, owing to his health, and as a result are due for a good tumble from their lofty pedestal in first place.

Joe Witek, who has been seriously ill with pneumonia for the last few weeks, is gaining strength and convalescing nicely at the Missouri Baptist sanitarium. A. W. Gumz, who has been at home sick for the last three weeks, is also improving rapidly.

Prospects for Valentine day business look good, with prices somewhat higher than past seasons. Plants, no doubt, will play a larger part in the day's business than heretofore.

QUANTITY AND QUALITY BOTH IMPROVE.

A notable improvement in the quality and quantity of stock and a generally good demand for all lines has been the situation the past week. There is a commendable effort seen on the part of the larger dealers to cut down prices wherever they can, so as to be in line with general conditions. Local greenhouses have been coming to the fore in the matter of spring flowers, so that the shortage of roses has not been felt so much. A few Wards are coming in from one range and another is featuring Rosa Marie, but Columbias and Ophelias have been hard to secure. The supply of baby roses has increased somewhat, and carnations are coming to hand freely from local sources, as well as Portland and Spokane. The local cut of orchids is at its height, but the demand has held up so that there has been no difficulty in keeping the stock moving. California shipments have included the usual roses and violets, acacia and seasonal offerings. The local greenhouses are apparently going to be able to supply the trade with all of the tulips needed, and already this flower is being received in larger lots. Lily of the valley is more plentiful, but still falls far short of the requirements of the trade, and there is consequently a fine sale for the more delicate shades of sweet peas. Prices are holding up very well. There has been more interest taken in ferns again, with the passing of the holidays, and several of the Japanese growers are offering extra fine specimens. Funeral work has been unusually heavy.

NOTES.

A window that attracted the passerby was shown by the Hollywood Gardens last week. Lavender drapes, a mirror set low in the background and ferns formed the setting for 30 cattleyas, and the cut from the Hollywood greenhouses was large enough to maintain this display for two days despite the sales which resulted. Mr. Holmes is at work again, after being kept at his residence for a week by a light attack of influenza.

Fred H. Rowe, of McCoy's, has been featuring Laddie carnations from this firm's greenhouses, and on several different days had stock measuring four inches in diameter. The pink carnations are showing the best quality of present arrivals, the reds fading off too soon.

Felix Rosaia reports difficulty in keeping chrysanthemums coming to hand at this time, and also says the public is showing less interest in this flower. This firm has had probably the largest supply of red roses.

Among the late decorations handled by Kenney's Home of Flowers was a private dinner at the Rainier-Grand for General Pershing. Red roses and greens were used here to good effect.

Harry Crouch, of the Woodlawn Flower Shop, reports an increase in the supply of baby roses, and also less trouble in getting California shipments when needed.

Alaska boats will soon be leaving this city again loaded with ingoing northerners, and local florists expect a big increase in this class of business over 1919.

Pot cyclamens, cinerarias, freesias and baby primroses have been featured to good advantage by the Burns Floral Company.

CUT FLOWER SHORTAGE UNBROKEN.

"Hope springs eternal in the human breast." Each week, since the first of the year, was looked forward to by the hopeful ones to be a period of increased production, but contrary to all precedent, there has been a steady decline until the wheels of business nearly came to a full stop for want of flowers. Letters and telegrams came pouring into the wholesale houses, not ordering, but pleading for stock. They frequently read: "Send $50 worth of flowers, your selection," or if varieties were designated the words "or substitute," followed. Letters read: "I know flowers are scarce, but please send me something today, or if not possible, then tomorrow." The local demand was even more insistent than the out-of-town, as being on the ground, buyers would not be put off, while there was anything in sight. It has been a very trying period for both wholesalers and retailers, while prices have been maintained at a level never before experienced in this market. Even higher figures could have been obtained, and in some cases, where other than regular customers, owing to their insistance, were served, extreme limits were reached, carnations bringing as much as 18 to 20 cents. In most cases, however, $15 has been the price. There is a perceptible increase in the stock—just a little more of most of the standard items. The heavy snowfall of Wednesday and Thursday, however, made it almost impossible to get autos through the roads in the country districts, and on these days, the market was very bare. Saturday's receipts were better, but there was sufficient demand to use up all in sight. The most plentiful items are daffodils, freesia and snapdragons. Roses, particularly Ophelia, Double White Killarney and Premier, appear more plentiful. There are also very choice Hadley. Sweet peas are in fair supply and a great help to the market. Saturday last was a bright, sunny day, which it hoped presages better weather, and an increased supply for next week.

February 9.—There was a perceptible increase in the supply but also a greater demand on account of the death rate increase, which kept the stores busy with funeral work, so much so that parceling out or division of the supply was much the same as for some time past. The only increase in prices is for carnations, which touched 18 to 20 cents for the best. There have been three sunny days in succession, and it is hoped now that the long looked for relief is assured.

DAMAGE AT FLOREX GARDENS.

The high winds and heavy fall of snow of Wednesday and Thursday last did considerable damage to greenhouses in this vicinity. The most serious loss occurred at the Florex Gardens at North Wales, where the north side of the roof of the large house, 150x600 feet, the first mammoth structure, was crushed in by the weight of snow, which bent the iron posts, and the roof fell in for a distance of over 100 feet. There was also a great deal of glass broken in the part that remained, by sliding snow and ice. The larger house alongside, 175 x 750 feet, also lost a great deal of glass from sliding snow and ice, which tore great gaps in the roof. The iron framework of the house held, however, and as soon as possible, carpenters were erecting a board partition down the center of the house longitudinally to save, if possible, the roses in the south side. This wooden wall will be 35 feet high by 700 in length. The glass is 16x24, and a carload was at once ordered, and is now being put in by a large force of men, many of them volunteers from various greenhouse establishments. It is hoped to have the large house reglazed within a week, and repairs made to the other as soon as the necessary material can be obtained. The danger of heavy snowfalls had been anticipated and provided for by placing nearly all the heating pipes close up to the roof, which was calculated to melt the snow as fast as it fell. As in the accident of 1914, when these large houses met with an even worse disaster from the same cause, a high wind drifting the snow frome one side to the other, the heat, although the house temperature was raised to 68, was not sufficient to prevent the accumulation. The breaks occurred at 9 a. m., Thursday morning. Additional posts and braces had been put in after the 1914 accident, and these in the case of the large house, were sufficient to bear the great weight, but which was too much for the wide glass. The greatest damage was at the west end of the houses for a distance of about 150 feet. It is a great loss to the company, as the stock was looking fine, the new growth made since Christmas being well set with buds. The damage is estimated to be at least $10,000.

J. P. Berris & Son, Limekiln pike, had a severe loss from weight of the snow, which crushed in the roof of a house 35 x 150 feet. The entire length fell, opening up all one side of a range, of which it was the outside house. Blankets, carpets and other like material were immediately used to make a temporary wall, which were replaced with boards the next day. Arrangements have been made to rebuild the house at once. It was filled with Killarney roses, which were just coming into crop. The ground has been covered with manure, and so protected it is hoped to get a crop in the spring.

Wm. Leonard, Lansdowne, lost about $200 worth of glass from weight of snow on the roof of his rose houses. Joseph Goetter also had trouble, but managed to get supports under the roof of one of his houses in time to save it.

NOTES.

have had unpleasant experiences the past week, still continues. Miss Scott, of Berger's, is home with the grippe. George Aeugle has also been laid up for the past week. Martin Gannon is back on the job again after a three days' attack. Carl Corts spent all last week in bed, but resumed work again on Monday.

Chas. H. Campbell has just finished the building of 20 individual auto garages on a lot 52x80 feet, in the rear of his Germantown avenue store. All were rented at once, except the two reserved for his own cars. Business has been very good, notwithstanding the high price of cut flowers.

Henry F. Michell and family are spending a winter vacation in North Carolina. Frederick Michell and wife started, February 9, for St. Petersburg, Florida, where sunshine and flowers are a great contrast to Pennsylvania's snow clad fields

Charles Brimmer, the Frankford avenue retailer, attended the recent automobile exhibition, where an Essex touring car took his fancy, and this pleasure vehicle is now safely stored in his garage.

James Thoirs, Camden, N. J., finds that funeral sprays made of daffodils and freesia are very satisfactory when used in place of the more expensive roses and carnations.

Wm. Gibson was in town last week. He has resigned his position with H. C. Vansant, Newport News, Va., and joined the forces of F. L. Wertz, Roanoke, Va.

W. K. Harris finds a good demand for Teddy Jr. and Scottii ferns, which are used in many stores in decorative effects and also find a ready sale.

Edward Habermehl, of J. J. Habermehl's Sons, is seriously ill with influenza, which has turned to pneumonia.

C. U. Liggit reports a great demand for Primula malacoides for St. Valentine's day. K.

SEVERE STORM CRIPPLES BUSINESS.

The florist business of this city was practically snowbound throughout February 5, and at this writing, the end of the blockade is not in sight, as there are indications of more snow with hard freezing. Snow began to fall on the afternoon of February 4 and continued with little, if any intermission through the night. It is probable that if there was any place that it was on the level, there was about eight inches, but a strong wind piled it up in many places to a depth of four to six feet. The rose stocks that usually arrived from Madison, Chatham, Summit and Murray Hill, N. J., about 8 a. m. did not reach the market till the evening of February 5, if they arrived at all. The Long Island stock met the same fate, it being even some job to get in from Flatbush. Most of this stock has of late been coming in by auto express, and it has been found that the old fashioned railroad has some advantages over an automobile, in a snowstorm. But the stock was not so greatly missed as it otherwise might have been, as the city was generally engaged in digging itself out, and had little time to worry about flowers. The tube, the subways and the elevated lines gave fair service, but surface lines and all street traffic was badly impeded. To add to the misery, an unusually high tide flooded some of the ferry houses and stopped the boats from running; also, causing washouts on the shore line railroads running south. On February 2, from the viewpoint of all branches of the trade, the situation seemed to have improved. More stock was arriving, and prices were easier, but the storm created another condition of uncertainty. After two days of storm, and practically a paralysis of business, the weather cleared on the morning of February 7, with a moderate temperature. The wholesale stores were well supplied with stock as they found the accumulations of two days delayed shipments on their hands. The retailers had little or no business during the storm, but as a matter of necessity, had to do some buying to help over Sunday. The worst problem that the city faces is in its transportation. The main thoroughfares, such as Fifth avenue and Broadway, while in bad condition, with snow piled up between traffic and the sidewalks, are passable. The cross streets and others less frequented are a wallow of snow. Disabled automobiles are seen at many points. Mayor Hylan has issued a proclamation, asking the owners of pleasure cars to keep them off the street until the blockade can in a measure be raised. He has also called on commercial concerns to loan their trucks to the city, and all able bodied men to assist as shovelers.

February 9.—Under normal conditions there would be a fair amount of business today, but things are far from normal. The streets are in a bad condition and for the day an embargo has been declared on all trucking except that necessary in the interest of public health. Thus it is with the greatest difficulty that stock can be removed from any of the railroad stations.

NOTES.

President Miller, of the Society of American Florists, was found in the seed trade district, February 4, busily stocking up for spring planting and sowing. Although he spends much time attending conventions, exhibitions and various meetings, being a man of great energy, he always finds time to attend to his own business. Speaking of his recent enjoyable visit to the carnation convention and exhibition at Chicago, he mentioned a "mysterious disappearance" that occurred. A prominent and kindly Chicago seedsman gave him a flask—no, a bottle—of rare medicine warranted by some, as a sure preventative of influenza. Being solicitous for the health of Treasurer Hess, he passed the the flask—another mistake—the bottle—on to him—and it disappeared. As the president is not a believer in occult manifestations, he thinks that the treasurer, in a fit of abstraction must have transferred it to his own pocket.

A part of the roof of one of the greenhouses of the J. M. Keller Co., Whitestone, caved in, February 6, from the weight of snow and ice. The "oldest inhabitant" hereabouts, can remember storms when as much or more snow fell, but none when it fell so wet, and froze as it fell, causing widespread blockade and damage.

John Lavik, at one time a College Point florist, died in St. Anthony's Home for the Aged, located in Woodhaven, February 6. He was 80 years old and had been an inmate of the home for 10 years.

M. Matheron, of Baldwin, L. I., came to the market on February 9, with a lot of carnations, his first since the storm. A. F. F.

American Seed Trade Association.

E. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, 216 Prospect Avenue, S. E., Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer.

The thirty-eighth annual meeting will be held at Milwaukee, Wis., June 22-24, 1920.

IN Poland, potatoes are used instead of paper money.

THE price of bags at Chicago, February 11, was $60.

IMPORTS of red clover during January were unusually large.

CALIFORNIA rains have been far too light to date to suit the seed growers.

J. C. VAUGHAN, Chicago, left February 7, for Miami, Fla., to join Mrs. Vaughan there.

MIAMI, FLA.—Lem W. Bowen, of D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich., and wife, are at the Royal Palm hotel.

ONION SETS.—Onion sets in the Chicago district are in good demand at $3.50 for colors and $4.00 for whites, carlots.

THE death of Mrs. Walter P. Stokes, widow of the late Walter P. Stokes, of Philadelphia, Pa., is announced in our obituary column this week.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—William Currie has been on the sick list and Adam Currie has been in the hospital several weeks with a broken shoulder.

HOWARD M. EARL, of the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y., according to latest advices, expected to sail from France for home, February 7.

L. W. WHEELER, of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., Gilroy, Calif., who is now in the east with Mrs. Wheeler, has had another slight attack of influenza.

MORE than half a dozen Memphis seedsmen run big advertisements in the Sunday papers, while the trade is not represented in the Jacksonville Sunday papers.

VISITED CHICAGO: John C. Bodger, of John Bodger & Sons Co., Los Angeles, Calif., returning home to recuperate after his recent attack of influenza in the east.

NEW YORK.—S. D. Woodruff & Sons say the jobbing demand for seeds in January is less than that of 1919 by about 30 per cent. In view of weather and other conditions, they think this business will come later.

MANAGER HARRY BUCKMAN, of Burpee's Floradale Seed Farms at Lompoc, Calif., has the sympathy of the trade in the death of his wife. Mrs. Buckman died at Doylestown, Pa., February 9, while visiting friends there.

BOARD OF TRADE.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade, February 11, were as follows: Timothy, $10.00 to $14.00 per 100 pounds; $14.50 bid for March and offered for $14.55; red clover, $45.00 to $56.00 per 100 pounds.

ALBERT KOEHLER, of the American Bulb Co., Chicago, A. G. Pruysser, National Bulb Co., Benton Harbor, Mich., and C. L. Frericks, Hillegom, Holland, have secured passage on the S. S. New Amsterdam, scheduled to sail from New York, February 21.

TOLEDO, O.—Clover was weak February 9, opening 20 cents lower than the closing price the previous day, with cash offered at $35.50, a drop of 55 cents during the week. Timothy was also weaker with cash, 1919, at $6.60, March $6.60, April $6.60, and May $6.50.

VICE-PRESIDENT GOODWIN, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, predicts a good spring business. He reports that Mr. Barnard, now in California, finds the weather conditions delightful, though good accommodations are as scarce as along Broadway or Michigan avenue.

SIOUX CITY, IA.—J. S. Michael, of the Sioux City Seed Co., has returned from a successful contracting trip. Mr. Michael says that farm seeds are now in active demand, and is looking forward to a big run on home garden seeds, compelled by the high prices of vegetables, due in part to the labor difficulties of market gardeners.

Free Seeds Again.

The advocates of free seed won their annual fight as usual in the house, February 9, by defeating 130 to 71, a motion to eliminate from the agricultural bill an appropriation of $239,416 for seed distribution to their constituents at government expense. This, however, is a decrease of something like $116,000 as compared with the 1919 appropriation.

Seed Legislation Pending.

There has been filed in the New York legislature, now in session, two seed bills—Senate 31 and Assembly 54—to amend the existing seed law of New York, which is admitted by all persons to be unsatisfactory. The two bills mentioned are identical in wording and are similar to the Witter seed bill, which was passed by the New York legislature last year, but vetoed by the governor on the request of the seedsmen, for the reason that by a clerical error, the word "approximate" preceding "percentages" of purity and germination, was omitted. The pending bills correct that error. It is hoped by the seedsmen that the pending bills may also be amended to authorize the state experiment station at Geneva, under the charge of Analyst Munn, to test seeds sent in by the seed dealers of New York state. It seems unfair to require seed dealers, under heavy penalties, to sell seeds accurately labeled as to purity and germination and weed contents, etc., and not provide them an official laboratory wherein this information may be obtained. While the larger dealers may be able to afford the expense of a private laboratory and competent analysts, the smaller dealers, very many in number, would have no means of testing their seeds, as of course it is inconceivable and in some cases contrary to law, for the official laboratories of other states to test seeds for non-citizens, and the government testing station at Washington cannot be expected to handle the tests for all parts of the country and in unlimited quantities. If the state of New York is unable to handle this expense of testing commercial seeds, it is possible to cover this expense by charging a reasonable fee for these commercial tests.

Another modification of the pending New York seed bill desired by seedsmen is to eliminate the imperfect definition of the word "approximate" in the bill, for the reason that the definition applies to large and small seeds with equal force, limiting the margin of tolerance to an arbitrary two-tenths of one per cent, plus 20 per cent of the lesser part. It is desired to eliminate this definition and provide in the bill, as is found in the uniform state seed bill, approved by the Seed Analysts' Association and American Seed Trade Association, a provision permitting the official administrator of the law to promulgate reasonable regulations carrying out the provisions of the act. Under this mandate, the administrator could provide for this interpretation of "approximate." This practice has been followed in other states where the uniform law has been adopted.

These matters will be considered before the assembly committee on agriculture (Hon. Daniel P. Witter, chairman) at the capitol at Albany, N. Y., February 18, at which hearing interested New York seedsmen will have an opportunity to express their convictions on the pending bill, with special reference to the amendments above suggested.

Telegraphic advice has been received of the introduction in the Mississippi legislature of House bill 316. As the contents of this bill are not known at the time of writing, those interested in selling seeds in Mississippi or to Mississippi customers, are advied to ask for a copy of this bill of Hon. William Aylmer Winter, chairman of the house committee on agriculture, Jackson, Miss.

MISSISSIPPI HOUSE BILL 316.

This bill, filed January 28, by Mr. Gipson and referred to the house committee on agriculture, is a close copy of the Texas seed law, approved July 28, 1919, with, however, some most unhappy alterations. The bill affects both agricultural and garden seeds. The label required of agricultural seeds is hardly possible because of its indefinite provisions and unreasonable requirements. The label is only required to be attached to field seeds in wholesale lots, without any definition as to what constitutes "wholesale lots," contrary to the well-established principle in these seed laws of limiting the labeling to amounts of 10 pounds or more, and found in the Texas law from which this bill is taken. It requires the correct weight in pounds and ounces and the year grown. It seems an unreasonable duty to state the year grown, because the Mississippi retailer has no means of ascertaining this fact, as he does not grow the seed himself. The duty is unnecessary because the germinating quality of the seed, which this requirement is supposed to indicate, is taken care of under the provision requiring the percentage of germination and the date and year when tested. The bill omits the exemption of prosecution on account of labeling as to germination, as provided in the uniform bill. Two separate provisions require stating the approximate percentage of weed seeds or other foreign matter. This confusion of weed seeds and foreign matter is unfortunate and acts as a distinct disadvantage to the purchaser, because he cannot ascertain from this percentage what are weed seeds and what is foreign matter. The words "or foreign matter" should be stricken out from this provision for this reason, and for the further reason that it is completely taken care of by the provision requiring the percentage of purity, which defines "purity," and expressly refers to foreign matter.

Section 11 contains the most serious objections, for it is so indefinite that it is somewhat difficult to understand the meaning of the law. It requires, among other things, that all seeds, whether garden or field seeds, sold in papers or packages, shall show the kind of seed, the year grown, name of the state grown in, or otherwise to be marked "Unknown," and approximate percentage of germination, except that this shall not apply to retail merchants who retail seed that was properly labeled. So far as packeted seeds are concerned, this is practically prohibitive of their sale for under the perfectly proper methods of packeting seeds it would be impossible to state this information and moreover the mechanical difficulties in the way of such labeling would make it unprofitable to packet seeds for Mississippi customers. As this provision would affect even small five-cent packets, concerning which there is no complaint, and the amount of any possible natural deterioration is too small, it is fair to ask that these small packets be eliminated from consideration in the law. It is equally reasonable to ask that the entire section be stricken out, for it is bad judgment to require the labeling of garden seeds in the same fashion as that in respect to field seeds, for reasons very well known to those acquainted with the difference in character of the seeds, their planting, cultivation and harvesting of crops.

"Hamburg Late Pink" Chrysanthemum

Picture was taken Dec. 28, 1919, and will give a good idea of what "Hamburg Late Pink" looks like when grown to single stems and planted six inches each way.

"Hamburg Late Pink" is an improved late pink Maud Dean, having more petals, and if grown for late will hardly ever show an open center.

The average grower of chrysanthemums must have varieties which are easy to handle, and from which he can cut as near 100% of perfect blooms as possible. "Hamburg Late Pink" has been grown for the last four years, and produces a very high proportion of good flowers. It is not an exhibition variety, but, for late pink, one of the best for commercial purposes. It can be had in bloom the latter part of November by taking an early bud, but some of the flowers will show open centers; but by selecting late buds, after October 1st, most of the flowers are cut during December, and would advise to select late buds, as the later buds will hardly ever show an open center, and some flowers can be had even in January.

Keeping qualities are excellent, and where a graceful pink flower is wanted, "Hamburg Late Pink" cannot be surpassed.

"Hamburg Late Pink" will be disseminated in the spring of 1920. Plants will be ready March 1st, 1920, and all orders will be filled in rotation.

E. A. Dunbar, Ashtabula, O., President; Louis F. Miller, Toledo, O., Vice-President; S. W. Severance, Loui ville, Ky., Secretary; H. J. Cheney, Grand Rapids Mich., Treas. Next annual convention September 1920.

THE selection of Henry M. Dunlap, of Champaign county, Illinois, as chairman of the state constitutional convention, is regarded as a distinct victory for the farmers, as he has a thorough underlstanding of agricultural problems.

Potato Spraying Profitable.

Several potato-spraying demonstrations have been conducted by farm-bureau members in Carbon County, Pa. One demonstration, in which the cost of spraying was $15.60 an acre, gave the following results: Sprayed, 252 bushels per acre; unsprayed, 182¾ bushels per acre, an increase per acre of 69¼ bushels. With potatoes worth $1.50 per bushel, the net profit was $88.25 per acre.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, February 10.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, $4.00 to $6.00; celery, Michigan, square box, $2.50 to $3.00; leaf lettuce, per tomato box, 27½ to 30 cents; radishes, per dozen bunches, 70 to 85 cents; tomatoes, per pound, 15 to 40 cents.

New York, February 9.—Celery, per crate, $3.00 to $9.00; cucumbers, per dozen $2.00 to $2.50; mushrooms, 75 cents to $2.00 per three pound basket; tomatoes, per pound, 5 to 40 cents; lettuce, per dozen, 50 cents to $1.00; radishes, per 100 bunches, $2.00 to $4.00.

Onions in Wisconsin.

"Racine, Kenosha and Milwaukee counties are the principal onion producing counties in Wisconsin," says R. E. Vaughn, of the plant pathology department of the University of Wisconsin. It is not uncommon for onion growers in Racine county to get as high as 600 bushels to the acre. "Most of the onions grown in Wisconsin for commercial purposes are 'Red Weathersfield.' Wisconsin produced 130,000 bushels in 1919. Brown and Outagamie counties are rapidly pushing to the front as truck growing sections, and they promise to become big factors in the onion industry. A future development in onions is also seen in the area in central Wisconsin where marsh soils are being reclaimed and put under the plow."

Manure—Fresh Versus Rotted.

Manure loses much of its plant food in the process of rotting. Its mechanical condition, however, is much improved, because there is a great deal of the coarse organic matter broken down. Much of this will be lost through decay, and the percentage of mineral plant food remaining may be greater per ton of manure in the rotted than in the fresh condition. These facts make rotted manure preferable for truck crops, where quick results are desired, and where a large amount of manure is used, says F. L. Duley of the University of Missouri College of Agriculture. Too heavy applications of fresh manure may often burn plants, especially during dry seasons. The coarse organic material keeps the soil open and reduces its capacity to retain moisture. On the average farm, however, there is too much loss of plant food in the rotting process, and it is always advisable to apply the manure to the land as soon as possible. The proper methods of handling farm manure are discussed in Bulletin 166, which may be had free by addressing the College of Agriculture, Columbia, Mo.

Vegetable Markets.

Reports to the bureau of markets of the United States department of agriculture for the period February 1-7 indicate a generally weak tone. In potato markets an uncertain feeling prevailed at shipping points, many growers holding for higher prices and buyers hesitating. Prices show further declines. Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin round whites closed at $3.95-$4.10 per 100 pounds, sacked f. o. b. shipping points, compared with $4.30-$4.45 a week ago. This stock sold about 15 cents lower in middlewestern distributing markets, closing at $4.25-$4.85. Chicago carlot market quoted $4.00-$4.30, compared with $4.65-$4.75. Colorado Rurals and Pearls declined about 25 cents to $3.75 per 100 pounds, wagonloads cash to growers. Idaho Rurals and Russets were lower, Rurals closing at $3.25-$3.50 per 100 pounds, wagonloads cash to growers and Russets at $3.40-$3.65. New York round whites closed at $3.95-$4.10 f. o. b. shipping points compared with $4.00-$4.27 last week. A few middlewestern consuming markets quoted this stock at $4.45-$4.65. Maine Green Mountains ranged $3.50-$3.70 bulk per 100 pounds at shipping points—a decline of about 10 cents. This stock closed on the New York jobbing market at $4.20-$4.60 bulk per 100 pounds. The general trend of cabbage prices was downward and considerable losses were made. Demand was slow and movement draggy at western New York shipping points. Danish seed stock closed at $70.00-$85.00 per ton, bulk, f. o. b., compared with $75.00-$95.00 last week. This stock closed in consuming markets at mostly $90.00-$120.00 per ton, bulk, compared with $110.00-$120.00 a week ago. American Association of Nurserymen.

J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa., President; Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., Vice-President; John Watson 400 Nassau Street, Princeton, N. J., Secretary; J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Iowa, Treasurer.

Forty-fifth annual convention will be held at the Congress Hotel, Chicago, June 23-25, 1920.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—Glen Bros. Co. advertise 8-year-old apple trees at $7 each.

GENEVA, N. Y.—Meadow mice are reported to have done much damage to nursery stock in this vicinity.

YORK, NEB.—E. H. Smith, secretary of the Harrison Nursery Co., has been elected president of the Nebraska Horticultural Society.

MANITOWOC, WIS.—The Co-operative Orchard Co. has filed an amendment to its incorporation, increasing the capital stock from $100,000 to $700,000.

FITCHBURG, MASS.—Thirty thousand young pines will be planted in Coggshall Park as a reforestation measure by the park commission this spring.

ELIZABETH, N. J.—E. P. Beebe, introducer of the Niagara grape, and one of the founders of the New Jersey Horticultural Society, died at his home in this city, January 15.

THE New England Nurserymen's Association will appoint a committee to co-operate with the American Association of Nurserymen in working out a suitable emblem and slogan.

AT the recent convention of the New England Nurserymen's Association at Boston, President C. R. Burr cautioned against overproduction, and urged that in these times of high costs, great care should be taken to secure prices that were remunerative.

THE quarantine upon the shipment into Minnesota of all five leaf pine, currant and gooseberry bushes on account of white pine blister rust has been amended to permit entry into the state of all currant and gooseberry bushes stripped of leaves, except the cultivated black currant, Ribes nigrum.

"SHIPPING DAYS" are illegal and any shipper can insist upon railroads accepting shipments on any date, forwarding to be made as soon thereafter as possible. Admission of this fact by railroads was reported by Charles Adams, Springfield, Mass., chairman of the transportation committee of the New England Nurserymen's Association at its recent annual meeting at Boston, Mass.

Refrigerator Cars.

RAILROADS NEED NOT FURNISH THEM.

The United States supreme court has decided that when shippers of perishable stocks, ordinarily requiring refrigerator cars, and usually shipped under Option 2 by which the railroad assumes the risk of loss, do, because of said shortage of refrigerators, accept and use ordinary box cars under Option 1, they cannot recover from the railroad company loss or damage, and that railroads cannot be compelled to furnish shippers such refrigerator cars for use under Option 2 if said cars are not available. Claims amounting to $500,000 were brought by Yakima, Wash., shippers in the case on trial against the Northern Pacific Railway Co.

Brunswick, Ga.

Cloudy weather the first week of February retarded the planting of bulbs and potatoes. Paper Whites, only grown outdoors here, are about over. Trumpet Majors commence blooming about February 15.

The Tait Brothers Co. is planting gladiolus bulbs at the rate of two acres per week and expect to have about 25 acres planted before April 1.

R. V. Crine, formerly with the Monmouth Seed Co., has bought 30 acres of land near here and will grow lettuce on a very extensive scale.

The Brunswick Floral Co. has been cutting some fine roses and carnations recently, M. Baumgartner knowing all the tricks in the production of these in fine shape.

Thermometers.

The detonation was loud and sharp, like a tire blowing out, except that it sounded as though it was right in the door of the drug store. "What was that?" we exclaimed to the soda fountain boy. "Aw, just the inner tube of the thermometer blowed out. That's the third one this week. This is sure a hard winter on thermometers—so much friction, you know."—Kansas City Star.

Removing Care.

Some genius has invented a gasoline plow that will move around in a circle and control itself, while the farmer naps in the shade. If some other genius will devise a government bond that will clip off its own coupons and cash them, the farmer's life will be relieved of another great hardship.—Wheeling Intelligencer.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Antirrhinums.

The grower of antirrhinums has an opportunity now to select the best plants from which to propagate the stock for another year, as the plants are now producing fine spikes and it is possible to select the best types. Those that have fine large flowers set closely together on the stem, and yet not close enough to crowd, are to be preferred. The earliness of blooming is another matter to take into consideration. It will be found in raising these plants from seed that there is little difference in their time of blooming, and for winter flowering the earliest that there are of good type should be chosen. There are plenty of good cuttings to be obtained now, for the laterals which grow from the axil of each leaf make the best cuttings and the flower is enlarged by their removal. Plants that are in bloom will be benefited greatly from now on by feeding either with liquid manure or a strong mulch, and the next growth thinned to eight or ten shoots, which will insure a much better crop for spring cutting than to allow all the small shoots to grow. Keep the plants tied erect all the time, for it takes but a few hours' sun to draw the tip up from a stem that leans away from the center, with the result that a crooked stem is formed, which greatly impairs its appearance. These spikes of bloom should be handled very carefully, especially the long sprays, for they are very brittle and break easily. It is better not to cut too many at once. When cutting hold them with the heads hanging down, and when there are as many as can be easily held in the hand, cut, take them at once to the flower room, trim off all surplus growth and tie the stems a dozen in a bunch, then loosely tie strings around the center and toward the top of the bunch, and place the stem in a deep jar of water. This prevents crooked stems so often seen, for the plant continues its growth after being cut, and if allowed to hang away from the jar the blooms grow crooked.

Verbenas.

The verbena makes a very satisfactory bedding plant if properly grown, but the thin, spindly plants produced from late grown seed and planted in flats and baskets as closely together as is possible in order that they may be sold at a cheap price, seldom make any showing in the beds until very late in summer. The seeds should be sown early enough that the plants may be stopped and branched and grown in pots, and one plant so grown will make more showing during the season than half a dozen of the poor plants so freely offered at the spring sales. It is really better to buy the rooted cuttings of selected varieties that are advertised at this time than to sow seed after the middle of February. Seed sown up to this date, however, can be grown on to make fine plants. Care must be exercised in the germination of the seed, which is often blamed for the carelessness or lack of knowledge of the grower, for the seed damps off very easily when its germinates, being very sensitive to any change in temperature and moisture. Until they begin to make growth, the plants should be watched carefully, never allowed to become dry, or exposed to any draughts.

Pelargoniums.

While all the plants so well known as geraniums are pelargoniums, yet it is the show of fancy type called by many Lady Washington geraniums that are generally known under this name. The plants that are wanted in bloom in April and May will now be in their blooming pots and beginning to show their blooming growths, but for June and July flowering the plants should now be shifted to the blooming pots, five or six-inch as the plants may require, except large specimens, of which few are now seen. They like a turfy, coarse loam, to which may be added one-fourth well rotted manure, and if the soil is heavy a liberal amount of sharp sand to keep it open, and the plants should be potted very firmly. A cool, well-ventilated house should be selected for growing them, and until the days grow warmer and brighter, they should be watered sparingly. In early spring, when they are well covered with foliage and the blooming shoots begin to grow, more water will be needed. A little stopping may be necessary if the plants send forth strong, long growths, to make the plant shapely, but care and judgment should be used in this operation, which should cease upon the appearance of the bud shoots, which are easily distinguished by the different manner of growth. Do not attempt to take any cuttings at this time, for after the plants are through blooming is the best time for propagation, and any cuttings taken now are pretty sure to rob the plants of the bloom. These plants are very subject to attacks of both red spider and green fly, and should be fumigated or sprayed regularly. As the extremely hot, dry days of summer approach a slight shade will be found very beneficial to both the plants and flowers.

Genistas.

The plants of genistas should now be making their flowering growth and no further pinching will be necessary except in the case of long, strong growths which sometimes break from the stem and thereby spoil the symmetry of the plant, and these should be cut back as soon as they grow beyond the other flowering shoots. They can now be bloomed in succession by moving some into a warmer house, but those that are wanted at Easter are still better left in a cool house, one with a temperature of 45 degrees being the one that will produce the best results. These plants are never partial to great heat, reveling in a cool atmosphere, and often when taken into the warm living rooms where the air is extremely dry will soon drop their leaves. Those that are being grown to certain shapes, such as the balls, pyramids or baskets, will doubtless require some pinching back yet, but this should be done with great care or the flowering buds will be removed. A close examination of the tip of the shoot will clearly show whether the buds are forming and when this occurs all pinching must be immediately stopped. Any blind wood or extra strong growths that are cut out may be made into cuttings and young stock obtained. These will root much better in a cool propagating bench than in one where the bottom heat is confined. When the plants are full of bloom they will require heavy watering, and do not place them in a dry warm location for any great length of time.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

Now that the last mid-winter holiday is past, it is high time to attend to the preliminaries for Easter. It comes very early this year, and no time should be lost in making plant selections, or engaging the popular items of stock, of which there is hardly ever enough to go around.

Lilies will be lilies this year; there will be a scarcity of bulbous stock, very few Belgian azaleas, rhododendrons or spiræas.

Make up your mind to pay the increased prices, and charge accordingly; there will be a great demand, and the man that has the stock and makes a bid for business, will get it.

In the meantime, the daily transactions go on, with, it is to be hoped, an ever increasing demand, which as flowers become more plentiful, is almost sure to follow. Every effort should be made to make the store and windows as attractive as possible so as to interest new buyers. There must be, in any business, a steady gain of new customers, without which things would come to a standstill. As soon as any perceptable stagnation appears, efforts should at once be made to break it up. There are a hundred different ways to start something when things get dull, but if a sharp lookout is kept all the time, there will be a smart, up-to-date appearance about everything that is bound to keep the stock moving.

The return of the influenza has increased the demand for funeral flowers, which at the present high prices, need very careful manipulation. A good stock of full round and crescent wreaths made of prepared magnolia leaves should always be kept made up ready for instant use. The fresh green magnolia also make a splendid wreath, as of course do the green and bronze galax. The last three then made up will have to be kept in the ice box or cold cellar, well protected from the air, as they soon dry out. All of the above can be more or less decorated with flowers, which with a little ribbon, can be made to go much further than when used in any other way. Wreaths of tasseled ferns will also hold for several days and make beautiful designs when decorated with a few choice flowers.

Always keep a little stock ahead, so that roses for instance, shall be pretty well open; two dozen open roses give a better effect when made up, than three dozen in bud or only partially blown. Comparatively few of the trade appear to realize that flowers for funerals, particularly those which are to last but a few hours, should be at their very best when delivered. It is the effect produced that counts, not the quantity of flowers used. It is a good rule never to put any piece together until the cost of the flowers to be used is ascertained. Hundreds of dollars are lost annually in many shops from disregard of this rule, as flowers are stemmed and stuck in until the piece looks good enough, regardless of its cost.

Sweet peas are now at their best. They are the loveliest of flowers, and in their great variety of color, are desirable either as loose cut flowers or for all sorts of floral combinations, such as wedding bouquets, lunch and dinner tables, and designs of all kinds.

The dainty Acacia pubescens, with its delightful fragrance, is now available. It has no superior as a spray for the decoration of the dinner or tea table.

All kinds of flowering plants should be featured from now on until Easter. Plant baskets of foliage and flowering stock will be found good sellers, often being taken in preference to cut flowers.

Retailers should study the art of decorating flowering plants. So much can be done to enhance the beauty of a pot plant, with just a piece of white paper, a few sprigs of pussy willow and a little chiffon or fibre ribbon. The willows stuck in the pot at either side, and tied over the top of the plant to form an arched or square handle and decorated with the chiffon or ribbon, at once gives the appearance of a basket. All this will cost but a few cents. Plants can be featured in many ways, and at small expense, made much more salable.

The 1920 publicity campaign is now under way. So far, results have been splendid. Raise your ante this year. Send your check in right away, and encourage the committee to do even greater things.

Emergency Preparedness.

It is comparatively easy to carry on, when things are moving quietly along, or when just a little more speed or hustle gets out the orders in good time. How different it is, however, when one is suddenly up against it in the multitue of obstacles that so often arise at the last minute and require quick thinking and action to surmount. The order for a large pillow, double spray, or standing design, to be shipped out of town, may be ready for packing, when it is found there is no box large enough to hold it. At once, the effort is made to put two together. At times, this works very well, particularly for a spray, but a large mossed frame design will require something more substantial. This can be hurriedly put together by the aid of a few wooden frames of the same size, making a skeleton box, which, reinforced on the bottom, can then be covered with sheets of the corrugated board from the largest boxes on hand and make a safe express package. Crated boxes, such as are used for plants, can also be made to serve the purpose, the top portion being covered with heavy, stiff paper.

It may be found at the last minute, that this or that frame is not in stock but this should not trouble the handy man. One of the best shaped broken columns the writer ever saw, was made on a broom stick, stuck through two boxes for a foundation. When mossed, it was correct in proportion and easy to fill. Many a large, flat cross frame is composed of two lath-like sticks, which can also be made into a standing design, when properly braced to a wooden base. The broken wreath is made by cutting a section out of the full wreath frame of the required size. The form for an outlined heart is often made by bending a wreath frame into the desired shape. Every store should have good sized, round-point and flat pliers, also wire cutters, together with a few coils of stout wire in several sizes to be used in cases of emergency.

Letters missing for an inscription can be made out of others; an "R" can be made with an addition to the letter "P"; "E" from an "L"; two "VS" will make a "W"; "B" can be made from two "Ps" and other combinations are possible. Letters that do not stick well, should be sewed on with a purple thread. A needle full of this, in the ribbon case, will often come in handy.

GENISTA RACEMOSA. STANDARD FORM

It is very embarrassing when certain flowers ordered are delayed in transit, or on account of weather conditions, are difficult to procure. The utmost diplomacy must be used at such times, the difficulty explained, and a good substitute offered, which may prove even more desirable.

When mistakes occur, there should be immediate correction, or if too late, an explanation and apology. When customers in complaint, calling over the phone or at the store in person, are somewhat violent in their manner, it is best not to interrupt, but let them "run down' and "get it out of their systems." Then a diplomatic, "We are very sorry; we will look into the matter at once," or "what would you have us do?" is so conciliatory that the incident can generally be closed agreeably.

At holiday seasons, orders are frequently received from out of town, too late to be filled with good stock, or probably for so low a price as to be impossible to fill and give the flowers desired. It is much better to let the matter go over a day and write the recipient, stating that the order arrived so late it could not be filled satisfactorily, and asking them to name the day they would like to receive them, when they can then be delivered satisfactorily to all concerned.

The best method of handling emergencies, is to guard against them, in so far as it is possible with the stock and facilities of the store. The moment an order is received, any doubtful items should at once be looked up and secured, or made ready if on hand for use. Articles may be secured today without trouble that tomorrow will entail additional phone calls or messenger or special trip for the car, adding expense and using up valuable time.

An emergency heater for the car, when it is found the fuel bricks are all out, is made with a half dozen short candles, stuck into a pan of earth. These will give heat enough, as long as they are burning, to keep the ordinary car free from frost in the coldest weather. The bottom of a car should always be covered in winter with several thicknesses of corrugated paper lining, topped with linoleum or other hard, smooth, water-proof surface.

National Publicity for Flowers.

In sending a cheque for a yearly subscription to the publicity campaign fund, G. F. Eskil, of Iron Mountain, Mich., writes: "Sending this money gives me more pleasure than anything else I can think of—unless it were a greater cheque."

This is the proper feeling. Mr. Eskil knows that the campaign is a wonderful asset to the florists' trade, and he writes just as he feels. It is to be regretted that more do not appreciate the increased demand for flowers, everywhere, which has come as a result of our publicity movement. Every florist in the land is interested in the successful issue of our campaign, and is benefited by it, yet how few are willing to help themselves by helping along the campaign. So far, our results are due to the support forthcoming from less than 10 per cent of the trade, men who have subscribed for the benefit of our industry generally, but who are more than satisfied with results as they see them, and particularly as they have noticed them in their own surroundings. And it is these men who are in greater part bearing the expense of our work this year, as far as our publicity committee has been able to carry it.

Here are a few questions for non-subscribers to consider, and they should consider them deeply, for surely they are sufficiently interesting from a business point of view:

Are you not prepared to admit that publicity for flowers has been instrumental in increasing the general demand for them?

Are you not conscious of the fact that our slogan, "Say it With Flowers," is exerting a tremendous influence among people who hitherto have not looked upon our products as a medium for the conveyance of sentiment?

Are you not aware that through individual display, through our magazine announcements, and in various other ways, our slogan meets the eyes of millions of people each and every day?

Could you for one moment think that a great deal of business does not result from this continuous flashing of a message, whose appeal is not to any particular class, but to every man and woman, young or old, in a country of considerably over a hundred millions in population?

Do you realize that this publicity costs money, but very little when the returns are taken into account, and you are only asked to contribute a mere trifle toward the expense?

Is it impossible for you to determine that you will send in this "mite" the committee needs so much in order to increase and perpetuate the good already obtained? A tenth of one per cent of your profits would, perhaps, make a very respectable contribution. If every florist making a living from our industry would contribute even this small fraction of his income, our committee would not have to be continually appealing to those, who in the circumstances should need no appeal, and who should really be most anxious to keep going and extend a movement productive of so much good to them in a business way.

Do not be afraid to contribute because yours may be but a small mite—there is nothing to prevent you adding to it at any time. A five dollar contribution is accepted in the spirit in which it is given. Many who originally sent in this amount, increased it as their interest deepened. When you once make a subscription, you are apt to take a broader view of our work, and you no longer look upon your support in the way of a donation—you believe it to be a mighty good investment, and that's what it really is.

New York Spring Show.

MARCH 15-21, 1920.

At this time, three weeks before the opening of the New York flower show in the Grand Central Palace, all arrangements are practically completed.

The arrangement of the exhibition will show some differences in comparison with the lay-out of previous shows, but they will be to the advantage of the general display. The rose garden feature promises to be on a larger scale than ever, and the big cut rose display is this year to be doubled. The American Rose Society is taking much interest in the rose exhibits, which will include the society's annual exhibition, and its officers have secured several special prizes for rose exhibits. Rock gardens and border plantings will be featured lavishly, and the bulb garden display is expected this year to excell any attempt heretofore made in this direction.

The trade exhibits bid fair to exceed in number, space occupied, and general interest, all previous showings at any similar exhibition. An especial feature in the assemblage of exhibits will be in those devoted to the display of garden tractors. In these days of labor shortage, tractors adapted to garden use, will undoubtedly be objects of interest to all whose garden operations are conducted on a liberal scale. Many will miss the handsome display of garden pottery, statuary and furniture which has characterized other exhibitions, but the committee has been unable to secure this feature for this show. Also, probably will be missed the usual extensive display of rustic furniture for gardens and parks, an exhibit which has always appealed to the public, whose ideas generally connect summer houses and benches with the gardens of their dreams. Seventy-four trade exhibitors have had space reserved for them, and this number will very likely be increased, but only to the extent of space available. It will seem rather strange that the list of exhibitors does not include any firm, able to stage an exhibit of garden tools; that is, spades, forks, garden baskets, shears, flower cutters, trowels, markers and the hundred and one things adapted to the use of gardeners of both sexes.

Among the exhibitors in the trade section not already mentioned in the trade papers are: Stumpp & Walter Co., New York; L. J. Reuter Co., Boston, Mass.; Niagara Sprayer Co., Middleport, N. Y.; W. F. Kasting Co., Buffalo, N. Y.; McCallum Co., Pittsburgh, Pa.; Woman's National Farm & Garden Association, and the National Farm Equipment Co., New York.

The tea garden this year will be managed by the Allied Loyalty League, and the ladies who were instrumental in making this feature of the show such a success in past years, will again be in charge of it. The garden will be located on the second floor, in much the same position as formerly.

The general price of admission will be $1, necessitated by the increased expense attaching to the show. Trade tickets will be furnished as usual, but the price this year is 40 cents each, in lots of 100 or more, 50 cents each in lots of less than 100, with the privilege of redemption for unused tickets.

Quarantine Affecting Garden Plants.

GLADIOLUS AND DAHLIA BULBS EXEMPT.

The federal horticultural board, Washington, D. C., has issued notice of a public hearing to be held in Room 11 at the Department of Agriculture, February 24, at 10 o'clock a. m., to consider the advisability of quarantining the states of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York and Pennsylvania on account of the European corn borer. The communication, dated January 30, is as follows:

"The secretary of agriculture has information that the European corn borer (Pyrausta nubilalis), a dangerous insect not heretofore widely prevalent or distributed within and throughout the United States, and on account of which, Notice of Quarantine No. 36, which became effective October 1, 1918, was issued, is now known to occur in portions of the counties of Essex, Middlesex, Suffolk, Norfolk, Plymouth and Barnstable, Massachusetts; Rockingham, New Hampshire; Saratoga, Fulton, Montgomery, Schenectady, Albany, Rensselaer, Erie Cattaraugus, and Chautauqua, New York; and Erie, Pennsylvania.

"Since the promulgation of Quarantine No. 36, further investigation of the European corn borer has developed the fact, that in addition to corn and broom corn, including all parts of the stalk, this insect breeds in and may be transported by celery, green or string beans in the pod, beets with tops, spinach, rhubarb, oat and rye straw as such, or when used as packing, cut flowers or entire plants of chrysanthemums, aster, cosmos, zinnia, hollyhock, also cut flowers or entire plants of gladiolus and dahlia, excepting the bulbs thereof, without stems, and many other herbaceous plants; and further, that such products from infested districts have been moving throughout the period of corn borer infestation, with only minor restrictions, into the other New England states of Maine, Vermont, Rhode Island, and Connecticut.

"It appears necessary, therefore, to consider the advisability of quarantining the states above named, in accordance with the Plant Quarantine Act of August 20, 1912 (37 Stat. 315), as amended by Act of Congress approved March 4, 1917 (39 Stat. 1134, 1165), and of restricting or prohibiting the movement from these states, or from any infested districts determined therein, of corn and broom corn, including all parts of the stalk, celery, green or string beans in the pod, beets with tops, spinach, rhubarb, oat and rye straw as such or when used as packing, cut flowers or entire plants of chrysanthemums, aster, cosmos, zinnia, hollyhock, also cut flowers or entire plants of gladiolus and dahlia, excepting the bulbs thereof, without stems, and other herbaceous plants.

"Any person interested in the proposed quarantine may appear at the above time and be heard either in person or by attorney."

Brooklyn Botanic Garden Lectures.

The Brooklyn botanic garden has announced its spring course of lectures, which will be given at the garden. On Thursday afternoons, from February 19 to March 4, Professor Free will speak on "Plants in the home; how to grow them; practice in potting; mixing soils, making cuttings, etc." On Friday afternoons, from March 11 to April 1, he will have as his subject, "Planning the Garden," with suggestions as to the arrangement of flowers to secure continuous bloom; color schemes; planting of trees, shrubs and plants to best advantage; cropping plans to provide a succession of vegetables throughout the year.

On Thursday afternoons from April 8 to May 6, Professor Gundersen will lecture on the "Flower Garden; How to Make the Most of It." Among the points discussed will be, improvement of the soil to get best results from planting; old-fashioned flowers; annuals; summer bedding; vines for screening unsightly objects; rose and shrub growing, and lawn making. On Friday afternoons from March 5 to March 26, he will deliver four lectures on "Plant Families," treating of the classification of the higher plants.

On Saturday mornings from February 14 to March 27, Dr. Olive will devote eight periods to lectures and demonstrations of "Bacteria in the Home."

Morning lectures will begin at 11 o'clock, afternoon sessions at 4 o'clock.

Edison on Short Hours.

Requested to make a statement, on his seventy-third birthday, February 11, Thomas A. Edison wrote his own interview in his "spare time," which in part is as follows:

"Today I am wondering what would have happened to me by now if 50 years ago, some fluent talker had converted me to the theory of the eight-hour day, and convinced me that it was not fair to my fellow workers to put forth my best efforts in my work.

"I am glad that the eight-hour day had not been invented when I was a young man. If my life had been made up of eight-hour days, I do not believe I could have accomplished a great deal.

"I am not against the eight-hour day, or any other thing that protects labor from exploitation at the hands of ruthless employers, but it makes me sad to see young Americans shackle their abilities by blindly conforming to rules which force the industrious men to keep in step with the shirker. If these rules are carried to their logical conclusion, it would seem that they are likely to establish a rigid system of vocational classes which will make it difficult for a working man to improve his condition and station in life by his own efforts.

"I have always felt that one of the principal reasons for American progress in the past has been that every man had a chance to become whatever he wanted to be. It used to be fashionable to be ambitious. The employe planned to become an employer, the unskilled man sought to become more skillful. A young man was not well thought of if he was not striving for a higher place in life.

"There appears to have been a change in recent years. The present disposition is seemingly to say, in effect: 'I am what I am and so I shall remain. I aspire to nothing better than my present job. I ask for nothing except larger wages and shorter hours.'

"I wonder if the time will ever come when the unions generally will teach their members how to be better workmen, and train the ablest and most ambitious to become bosses and employers? In other words, will the trade union grasp its opportunity to become a school of industrial and commercial training for its members—the poor man's college and a friendly rival of our technical institutes and schools of commerce? If that time ever does arrive, trade unionism will be one of the world's greatest forces in social progress, and I think there will be a much better understanding between capital and labor.

"I hope I may have enough birthdays to enable me to witness something of that kind." New York Evening Mail.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

VALENTINE DAY VIES WITH CHRISTMAS.

The past week was the largest in volume of business that this district ever had with the exception of a Christmas or Easter, and some report it as large as Christmas week. The St. Valentine's day demand, added to the regular call for funerals, will make it a week long to be remembered. Some of the large retail stores were working every night till midnight so as to be able to keep up with their orders. With the exception of roses and carnations, there was a large increase in the supply that allowed the wholesale houses to take care of all their customers in fair shape, although there were no orders filled in full, and at least twice as much could have been handled without affecting prices. The call from out-of-town florists has been larger than ever, but it has been impossible for the wholesalers to book any new customers. American Beauties are off the market entirely, with the exception of a few poor shorts. Columbia, Premiers and Russell are arriving in the longer grades, but are not of as good quality as usual. The supply of short and medium roses of all varieties is very small, which makes it hard in making up funeral work. Carnations are improving slowly, and with a few bright days, the supply should double. Sweet peas have been the backbone of the market and have been arriving in large quantities, and while on the subject of sweet peas, let me say that the quality could not be improved upon. Paper White, jonquil and tulip receipts were heavy and helped out in filling orders. This market never used so many cut baby primroses as it did the past week; they came in by the thousands, but never had a chance to get into water, being sent out on orders at once. Easter lilies and callas are still in short supply and mean big money. White lilac and snapdragons are of fine quality and sell at sight. Other seasonable flowers arriving include orchids, mignonette, yellow daisies, freesia, calendulas and forget-me-nots. Violets were the only flowers that were in oversupply for St. Valentine's day.

NOTES.

Mrs. E. A. Williams had one of the prettiest valentine windows in town. It included combinations of spring flowers with fancy heart boxes and large bows of ribbon.

It was impossible for the McCallum Company to fill all orders booked for Primula malacoides, which they have been handling for one of their eastern growers.

The A. W. Smith Flower Stores Co. has been working every night till twelve and one o'clock to enable the force to keep up with orders in funeral work.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. reports heavy cuts of roses and carnations, but the supply still runs far short of the demand.

Randolph & McClements report funeral work so heavy that they did not have the time to work on St. Valentine's day novelties.

The McCallum Co. has opened a branch at 34-38 West Elizabeth street, Detroit, Mich., with Henry L. Blend in charge.

The G. P. Weaklen Company reports great difficulty in obtaining enough stock to fill all their orders.

BUSINESS SETS HIGH MARK.

St. Valentine's day business was a record breaker, all stores reporting good sales with a heavy call for colonial bouquets, violets, Mignon roses, sweet peas and pansies. There was also a heavy call for spring flowers and pot plants as well as pans of tulips, hyacinths and jonquils. Lilacs and azaleas sold well. Business for the past week has been good with a heavy call for funeral designs and flowers.

NOTES.

H. B. Ruppert, traveling representative for Philip L. Carbone, has returned from a successful trip and will leave soon to call on the trade in the middle west.

At the store of Penn, the Florist, St. Valentine's day was the busiest in their history with a heavy call for violets, sweet peas and roses.

William Nicholson has been laid up for four weeks with influenza. His stock is being handled in the meantime by William Hastings.

John J. O'Brion is confined to his home with influenza and the store is being ably looked after by his manager, John T. Cooke.

S. Gerard Smith has returned to the Carbone force, after a three-year campaign with the British army in India.

Harry Ward is back at the market after an illness of two weeks.

ACTIVE DEMAND WITH LIMITED SUPPLY.

The past week has been one of continuous change in weather which has made it hard to handle business properly. Trade has been very active with a scarcity of flowers. Funeral work has been more than brisk. St. Valentine's day business was far in excess of last year. Bulbous stock, violets and carnations were the best sellers. Plants and arrangements were also popular. This occasion is now one that has to be considered in the same class with the Saturday before Easter. As the stormy weather made deliveries difficult, automobiles and extra boys were used to counteract as far as possible delays caused by bad roads and street car service.

NOTES.

Edward Slattery, of W. J. Palmer's staff, was in Ithaca last week attending the farmers' meeting at Cornell University.

Nearly all of the stores are handicapped by having one or more of the employes laid up with the influenza.

Baltimore.

The monthly meeting of the florists' club was held February 9. President William F. Ekas gave an interesting summary of the meeting of the directors of the Society of American Florists, this being the first at which this city was represented on the national board. The feature of the evening followed, when Dr. David Griffiths, of the United States department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., delivered an address on "Lily Culture in the United States." During the evening cigars were enjoyed by those present.

Mrs. Charles Held has retired from business at 32 South Eutaw street and has taken up her residence at Round Bay on the Severn river, post office address, Earleigh Heights, Anne Arundel county, Md.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—T. D. Long, representing Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, was a recent visitor, and reports greatly extended use of gladioli all through the south.

GOOD ROSES VERY SCARCE.

The scarcity of roses of all kinds still continues, with prices ruling high. There seems to be a shortage of high grade stock of all varieties with the possible exception of American Beauties. A great deal of the stock is being cut very tight to keep pace with the demand. There is a great surplus of daffodils, and only the best varieties and highest quality are bringing anything like remunerative returns. Freesias are now in large supply and are in great demand for funeral work, which is unusually heavy. Carnations are now in full crop, and a very heavy supply is being received. They are selling out in great shape and are taking the place of roses to a great extent. Small lots of tulips are coming in, principally yellow. They meet with ready favor. There are violets and then some. Sweet peas are quite plentiful and of excellent quality. Orchids, principally cattleyas, are in large supply. The steady demand keeps prices firm. Fruit blossoms are beginning to arrive and are in great favor. There is a good supply of pot cyclamens of the very finest quality. Cinerarias and primulas about complete the list of flowering plants with now and then a few white azaleas thrown in.

NOTES.

Eric James is sending in a fine lot of pot grown cyclamens from his greenhouses at Elmhurst. His houses of pot grown roses for Easter all look to be in excellent condition and fully up to their usual high standard.

H. Plath, of the Ferneries, says the plant trade this Easter promises to be a banner one. From the advance orders coming in, Boston ferns are going to be largely handled by the retailers.

Louis Coputo says the MacRorie-McLaren Company has been busy with decorative and funeral work. Plant trade with this firm in their landscape department is said to be excellent.

P. Vincent Matraia and Joseph Scatena, of the Art Floral Company, paid a visit to the various plant growers across the bay and placed many large orders for Easter plants this week.

Albert O. Stein is very busy this week. He has several large decorations booked before Lent opens, which will require large quantities of flowers and plants.

Chas. C. Navlet says that among all the newer roses, he finds Mme. Edward Herriott and Los Angeles, the best sellers. He says funeral work is quite heavy.

J. A. Axell is handling a heavy supply of daffodils from his growers. The shipping demand is said to be strong for this flower from outside points.

Luther Burbank's birthday celebration, which occurs this month, will be observed in Santa Rosa, his home town, on an elaborate scale this year.

INCREASE IN SPRING FLOWERS WELCOMED.

There is still a notable scarcity in general lines of stock, but the increase in spring flowers is to a great degree counteracting this, and the supply is about equal to the demand. Prices are being maintained on all lines. Buyers have been active in lining themselves up with California shippers, and figure that they will probably need more stock than will be available. Most local greenhouses report carnations and Ophelia roses off crop, so that really fine lots easily command a premium. This has been especially true of Aviator carnations coming from Spokane, and Laddie, which several Portland growers are shipping. A few Ward roses, all of good quality, are reported, also some fine sweet peas and lily of the valley. The supply of orchids has been fairly heavy, with more than enough demand to care for any stock that might be available. Tulips and daffodils from local growers make a fine showing when compared with the southern shipments, and it is safe to predict that the middle of this month will see the outside buying stopped. Pot offerings are still good sellers, and there is reason to believe that this type of sales will hold up to late heavy totals. The larger varieties of ferns have been in good call lately. Prumulas have not been holding up well of late, and retailers have been showing greater caution in purchasing large stocks of this flower.

NOTES.

One of the most elaborate funeral pieces turned out in some time, was prepared last week by the Woodlawn Flower Shop. Easter lilies, pink Seidewitz chrysanthemums, freesias, cattleyas and asparagus were used on the base and arms of a cross standing more than seven feet from the floor.

A number of shops had been forced to work short handed of late as the result of complaints ranging from bad colds to light attacks of influenza. Among those kept at home were George Rosaia and P. J. Case, from Rosaia Bros., and Fred J. Rowe, of McCoy's.

Rosaia Bros. have been featuring their own Ophelia roses of late, and this was easily the best stock in the city. A few good Wards and Columbias also came in from the same greenhouses.

Fancy baskets of vari-colored tulips have been used largely in the window displays of the Woodland Park Floral Company of late, and these have made an effective customer magnet.

"Bob" Newcomb, representing the Burlington Willowware Company, called on the trade during the past week. He reports good business all along the Pacific coast.

H. P. Anderson, of the University Floral Company, reports the largest business in corsages for the past week for some months.

Kenney's Home of Flowers shows a steadily increasing transient business.

CLUB MEETING.

On account of a heavy snowfall and generally disagreeable weather the February meeting of the florists' club was postponed one week. At the meeting, which took place on the night of February 12, President Edward P. Tracey named a flower show committee for the year as follows: E. P. Tracey, chairman, ex-officio; William Maver, Albert Jenkins, John A. Murnane, Jr., William Newport, Frederick A. Danker, Walter Olmstead, and Samuel Hanson. The club will have an Easter show on the night of March 26, to which growers and others in this section will be asked to send exhibits for the benefit of the trade. Secretary Louis H. Schaefer was instructed to seek the co-operation of the growers and dealers to make the show a success. The club voted to subscribe $25 from the treasury to the national publicity fund of the Society of American Florists. One of the S. A. F. signboards, with the legend, "Say it With Flowers," has been ordered by the club. It may be set up at the nursery of Fred A. Danker, which is on the much-traveled state highway between Albany and Schenectady, and in the tourist season will be seen by thousands of automobiles. Two applications received will be voted upon at the March meeting.

In preparing plans for the remodeling of the Directory hotel for a store and office building at Broadway and Steuben street, the architect, Walter H. Van Guysling, has been instructed to provide for a florist's shop at Steuben and James streets. The work will be begun March 1, and an effort made to have the work completed May 1.

VALENTINE DAY MAKES GOOD SHOWING.

The first event for the florists since New Year, namely St. Valentine's day, is past, and from report it came up to expectations with most of the trade. Owing to the mild weather since February 1, many of the cut flowers, due some time ago, came in and made a creditable showing, especially in sweet peas, violets, calendulas and some of the bulbous stock, although the supply of roses and carnations did not come up to the demand. Extensive publicity in the daily press by the local florists' advertising association, plus elaborate window decorations, caused an early clean-up of cut flowers and flowering plants. The demand for stock for funeral work continued as brisk as the week previous, thus keeping the counters at the wholesalers cleaned up all the time, with orders for more on file. The mild spell as noted above, which began about February 1, came to an abrupt end St. Valentine's day, when the mercury dropped to eight below zero, thus banishing hopes that the winter weather was practically over.

FLORISTS' ADVERTISING ASS'N.

The second annual meeting of the above organization, called for February 16, at the Republican House, was held but due to the severe weather, many of the growers and retailers could not attend, thus causing a lack of quorum. Nevertheless, the annual reports of the secretary and treasurer were read, and showed that the receipts, through the two per cent for buyers and one per cent from consignors, totaled nearly $11,500 for the past eleven months prior to February 1, 1920. Secretary Seal's report showed that overhead expense amounted to eight per cent, thus giving the members 92 per cent of the receipts for advertising. Mr. Candee, advertising manager of the local National Enamel & Stamping Co., gave a very interesting and instructive talk on advertising which embodied creative force, service, courtesy, and the duty to keep going in the off or dull season, as the demand for the different holidays naturally takes care of itself. Officers who served in 1919, will hold over during 1920. A supper preceded the meeting. Thus far, the Miuwaukee plan of advertising has proven more satisfactory than most members expected, when they met in October, 1918, to organize the association.

NOTES.

The night watchman, aged 65 years, at the Humboldt avenue place of the Holton & Hunkel Co., was found dead with his hands grasping the handles of a wheelbarrow early on the morning of February 12. Death was due to a hemorrhage, according to the coroner. From the position in which the body was found, it was evident that he stuck to his duties until he bled to death.

Wm. C. Smith, of St. Louis, Mo., came to visit his sick mother, February 7, who is staying with her daughter, Mrs. H. V. Hunkel. Having worked here, he called on several of his former friends and acquaintances before leaving for home.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. says that total sales for the week ending February 14 were the best thus far this year, due to increased amount of stock moved at the prevailing high prices.

Guy French, representing the American Bulb Co., Chicago, called on the trade, February 11. E. H. Mazey, of Minneapolis, Minn., was in town, February 13.

Gust Rusch & Co. report exceptionally good business for St. Valentine's day with a fair supply.

Tri-City Florists' Club.

William Knees, Sr., and wife delightfully entertained the Tri-City Florists' club at their home in Moline, Ill., on the occasion of its February meeting. The majority of members were present and the gathering was an unusually pleasant and instructive one. The club is becoming a veritable "booster" and new members are admitted at each meeting. The discussion for the evening was on "Peonies," conducted by R. M. Rohlf, of Davenport, Ia., and left nothing to be added. Additional interest was given by the talks of two out-of-town guests, C. C. Pollworth, of Milwaukee, Wis., and Mr. Lambrecht, representing the Ove Gnatt Co., of La Porte, Ind.

Officers for the ensuing year were nominated. L. Stapp and William Goos, as delegates of the club, submitted a report of their endeavors at Des Moines to secure for Davenport the next annual Iowa state floral and horticultural show, and informed the club that Council Bluffs had secured the event.

M. De Lascalle, of Davenport, has invited the members and their ladies to convene with him for the March meeting at the Davenport Outing Club.

At the close of the evening, an appetizing supper was served, interspersed with general and happy conversation.

ST. VALENTINE'S DAY DEMAND TAKES ALL.

The splendid demand for flowers which characterized St. Valentine's day was limited only by the supply available. Buying began early in the day and the dealers soon saw that they would have all the business they could care for. Cut flowers were the favorites and as soon as the supply was depleted the call began for plants. These were fairly plentiful, but they cleaned up easily. While prices ruled high, there were very good roses, especially Russell and Columbia, varying from $6 to $10 per dozen and moving freely at those figures. While there were quite a few carnations, red were in limited supply. There were violets for which the local trade is indebted to the Chicago market. Sweet peas, local grown, were great favorites. Lily of the valley was limited but the price was so high that little of it was used. There was the usual call for funeral work. The first and only real snowstorm of the season came February 14, but this was followed by bright sunshine, which will help the flowering plants. Hyacinths and jonquils are now coming through their three-inch covering of snow and the early shrubbery is putting out its under leaves.

M. C. D.

Fredericton, N. B.

This city has been visited by the most severe storm in 50 years. Greenhouse glass is covered with ice and snow almost a foot thick, which renders the interiors almost totally dark. The snow which fell for two days and two nights was followed by sleet which formed an 18-inch mass upon which a man could walk without breaking through but upon which it was practically impossible for horses to move about. As to flowers, the prohibitive prices are having a noticeable effect in the shortening demand. Collections are also slow. Life's necessities have also reached an unusually high level. Notwithstanding several weeks of unusually severe weather, the coldest on record, and the recent storm, greenhouse stock was never in better condition, cinerarias, primroses, cyclamens, azaleas and narcissi all showing fine form. Trade has been very dull, but the florists are an optimistic lot.

OBITUARY.

Edward William Habermehl.

In the years that have passed, the Philadelphia, Pa., trade has lost many who have been an honor to the profession, most of whom have been taken away after a long life of usefulness. The sudden death of Edward William Habermehl, however, in the midst of his activities, at the age of only 52, while in the prime of life, came as a great shock. In the midst of the busiest season his firm had ever experienced, he was taken ill with influenza, considered at first a light attack, but which later developed into pneumonia, which, despite the best medical care, resulted in his death, February 10, after an illness of seven days. On account of health regulations, the funeral, Saturday, February 14, was private, but attended by many in the trade who also sent beautiful tokens of flowers which completely filled the room.

The Late Edward William Habermehl.

Mr. Habermehl was born to the business, being with his brothers, as most florists' sons are, a help to their father, J. J. Habermehl, who had quite a large greenhouse establishment at their present location, to which, on his death, they succeeded and founded the present firm of J. J. Habermehl's Sons, consisting of John and Edward Habermehl. As the business grew, they opened a branch store in the Bellevue-Stratford hotel, and later, another in the Ritz-Carlton. They made a specialty of large decorations, which department was under the management of Edward, while John conducted the store. The business, under their careful management, has assumed great proportions, until it is now the largest of its kind in the country, the firm having nearly all the large fashionable balls and other social affairs of Philadelphia and neighboring cities.

Edward Habermehl is survived by two brothers, John and Joseph, two sisters, Mrs. Chas. J. Clark and Mrs. John E. Marsden, and four daughters, Mrs. Clifford Shipley, Mrs. J. W. Dennis, and the Misses Eleanor and Mary Habermehl. The loss of his only son by drowning, and the death of his wife a few years ago, were great blows to Mr. Habermehl. He was held in the highest esteem by all his business associates, a few expressions from whom follow:

Mark Mills said—"In the death of Edward Habermehl, the trade has lost a valuable member, one of its best informed and skilled florists, an aggressive and progressive man who thoroughly understood his business and was beloved by all who knew him."

C. U. Liggit.—"I feel that the florist trade has lost one of its brightest exponents, a man who knew values and quality, shrewd, and yet absolutely fair in all his dealings. He had a most thorough knowledge of the business, and was a man of fine character."

Robert Craig.—"Mr. Habermehl was the best judge and buyer of pot plants that I ever knew. He acquired a knowledge of the business from his father, to which he was continually adding in his larger experience. He was an excellent judge of the market and believed in the expediency of placing orders early. He was a most genial gentleman, and taken as he was in the prime of life, will be greatly missed by all who knew him."

Edward Reid.—"Mr. Habermehl's death was a great shock to the trade. He was a credit to the profession, absolutely fair, and a man of the highest integrity. We would always exert ourselves to the utmost to get anything Ed. wanted. His place will be hard to fill."

S. S. Pennock.—"Mr. Habermehl's sudden death in the prime of life is a great loss to the business. He was a man above the average. A close buyer, but always conscientious and fair, he knew plants and flowers and was an excellent judge of market conditions. We would always go out of our way to get scarce things for Habremehl's."

A. M. Campbell.—"I believe Mr. Habermehl to have been the best all around florist in America, as his experience from grower to decorator had given him such excellent opportunities. He was a splendid business man, a good buyer, always fair, and a gentleman in every sense of the word."

Harry I. Faust—"All my dealings with Mr. Habermehl have been of the most pleasant character. He was a very intelligent buyer, knew values and was quick to make up his mind. The trade can ill afford to lose such well-versed men as Mr. Habermehl."

K.

F. A. Haenselman.

F. A. Haenselman, a well known florist of Boulder, Colo., proprietor of the Boulder Greenhouses in that city, passed away February 5. He was held in esteem in the community of which he had been a resident for a number of years. His son, Carl F. Haenselman, has been appointed administrator of the estate and will continue the business under the name, Haenselman's U. of C. Flower Shop.

TEWKSBURY, MASS.—Harold A. Patten, of Patten & Co., has announced his candidacy for tax collector at the March election.

HAMILTON, MONT.—Benjamin Kress, of this city, has been elected president of the Montana State Hosticultural Society for 1920.

MT. VERNON, ILL.—Frank Heiderman, who for many years was engaged in the florist business in this city, died February 5, age 48 years.

RUSTON, LA.—Mrs. C. W. Perkins, well-known florist of this place, has the sympathy of a large circle of friends in the death of her only daughter, after an illness of one year.

OMAHA, NEB.—George Richey and J. D. Creel, having disposed of their interests in the Kahler Pottery Co., the headquarters of the concern have been removed from this city to Louisville, Neb.

GERMAN potash prices are six times those of 1915.

TINFOIL will be higher, the price of lead having advanced to 8¾ cents.

ENGLISH estates, says the New York Sun, are rapidly breaking up and English gentry disappearing under war taxation. Vast tracts of land are being offered at auction in both England and Scotland by titled persons.

A CONNECTING railroad to cost $20,000,000 to act as a clearing house for the freight cars of the half a dozen roads entering or passing through New York is proposed by the New York and New Jersey port commission to facilitate the handling of commerce to Boston, Philadelphia and southern ports.

THE Federal Horticultural Board proposes to quarantine certain garden plants and flowers in New York, Pennsylvania and New England, exempting dahlia and gladiolus bulbs. The Illinois quarantine includes gladiolus bulbs, and we are wondering why the scientists differ on this point.

RAILROADS say the strike, if any, will lop off superfluous hands employed under government control.

Ammann Resigns State Secretaryship.

J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill., in view of the great amount of work involved in his position as secretary of the recently organized National Growers' Association, after careful consideration, has tendered his resignation as secretary of the Illinois State Florists' Association to President William J. Hembreiker, the same being accepted. President Hembreiker has named as Mr. Ammann's successor as secretary of the state organization, A. T. Hey, Maywood, who has accepted the appointment. The officers of the association will meet shortly after Easter and formulate plans for the coming year.

St. Valentine's Day Trade.

From all reports, St. Valentine's day business this year was most gratifying, the least enthusiastic saying it was fully as good as in former years, while in one city, at least, it assumed the proportions of a Christmas or Easter rush. In nearly every case, however, there was a noticeable increase in sales as ocmpared with those of 1919, with few complaints over advanced prices. Cut stock being in limited supply, curtailed the volume of business, to the extent of available receipts and undoubtedly stimulated the demand for flowering plants. Most reports indicate a complete cleanup of everything appropriate for the occasion. Advertising, both national and local, played an important part in the general result, and individual effort brought satisfactory returns.

Plant Prohibition Spells Bankruptcy.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

This morning's mail brought a copy of a

"Notice of Public Hearing to Consider the Advisability of Quarantining Asia, Japan, Philippine Islands and Oceania, on Account of Dangerous Plant Diseases and Insect Pests."

Here is a cool announcement of a proposal to quarantine half the world, and the half of the world to which our gardens and greenhouses are principally indebted for their most valuable plants, and, moreover, the half of the world to which we may look for a continued increase to our collections. In view of Plant Quarantine No. 37 now in operation one may ask: Will raising the fence a little higher, make any difference? One thing, it means that the lily bulbs of Japan and the Chinese sacred lilies will be banned just as azaleas and other plants are banned under the present quarantine act. The object supposed to be obtained by these quarantine acts is the exclusion of pests dangerous to vegetable growth of all kinds. This object is impossible of accomplishment in its entirety since such pests as are of a bacterial nature and others of fungoid origin may be disseminated by air currents, even as was the germ of the recent influenza epidemic. Those of insect character can travel on material other than living plants. Witness the corn-borer now alarming New England farmers, and the wood-borer found in American packing cases, and about which Australia is just now agitated. The logical end of all such legislation is to cut off all international trade and intercourse. These quarantine acts will not effectively keep out disease. They will accomplish no more in that direction than proper inspection at ports of import would do, and have done in the past.

Panics are everywhere contagious. The effect of the actions of the federal horticultural board is seen in recent hysterical legislation in Illinois. In view of this, and what is threatened in New Jersey, it behooves all those interested in horticulture, both trade and amateur alike, to pause a moment and consider the logical outcome. Following the lead of the F. H. B., state will quarantine against state, then county against county, until finally it will be impossible to move a plant from one's garden to that of a neighbor. The trade has the choice of two things; either to resist this pernicious legislation with all its might, or wind up business while the winding up is possible. The cry of quarantine measures assisting nurserymen and florists is mere camouflage. The bankruptcy court is where it leads to and, worse than this, it means not only the bankruptcy of the horticultural trade, but the bankruptcy of garden art in America.

The same mail brought a notice that the House had appropriated $239,000 for free seeds. Here is the secret of much legislation. Politics, pure and simple. The farmer's vote is necessary to the politician. Maybe the only way of injecting reasonable commonsense into the powers that be, is by bringing them to an appreciation of the value of the votes held by those who love flowers and gardens and cater to their needs.

Work Only Preventive of World Crash.

James Henry Thomas, general secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen of England, said recently that the state of the world was such that unless something was done speedily a crash would come in which nobody would suffer more than workers. He stated that British workmen must work one-quarter harder than before the war, French twice harder, and Germans 18 times harder.

FIRM PRICES RULE LIMITED SUPPLY.

Stock is none too plentiful, although an increase was noted which helped tide over the demand for St. Valentine's day. Carnations and sweet peas were the most available items. Roses are still short of requirements. Violets are none too good. Jonquils and daffodils were in good supply and were welcome additions. Calendulas are showing better quality than in former years. Freesias are also numerous and are carrying the highest prices ever known. Snapdragons also bring fancy figures. Pot plants are plentiful and are quick sellers.

NOTES.

Samuel Murray had the best St. Valentine's day business on record. Although prices were higher than in any previous year, no complaint was offered, and the large number of orders were easily handled at this establishment.

The Peterson Floral Co. has been having excellent business, to meet which, good sweet peas, carnations, primroses and cyclamens were available.

The Rosery has been enjoying an excellent trade, especially in corsages, novelty baskets and pot plants.

The Pinehurst Gardens Co., while experiencing a shortage in cut stock, had a good run on pot plants.

W. J. Barnes reports splendid St. Valentine's day sales with a heavy demand for funeral work.

H. Kusik reports a decided shortage in cut flowers, with heavy calls for artificial material.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. recorded the biggest week of the year.

DREER'S CANNAS

This season we harvested the finest and largest crop of Cannas that we have evergrown.

KING HUMBERT

And all the other good varieties you should have are included in our list and the roots are heavy and firm.

PRICES. The prices quoted are for dormant roots, which can usually be supplied until about the first of April, after which pot plants will be sent out and in which the advance in price will be as follows: All varieties listed at $7.00 or less per 100 will be supplied in pot plants at $8.00 per 100 or $70.00 per 1000, and on varieties listed above $7.00 per 100 there will be no change in price between dormant roots and pot plants. ALL HAVE GREEN FOLIAGE UNLESS OTHERWISE SPECIFIED.

TWELVE SPECIAL VARIETIES

Carmine Beauty. Deep bright carmine flowers freely produced high above the heavy dark-green foliage which has a narrow red margin 4½ ft., 15 cts. each; $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100; $90.00 per 1000.

Cheerfulness. No more appropriate name could be given to this brilliant novelty. Its beautiful bright fire-red or deep orange flowers appear early and continue without interruption until frost. Add to the prevailing color a golden border and center with each petal flaked carmine-crimson and you may form some conception of this fascinating variety. 3½ ft. 10 cts. each; 85 cts. per doz.; $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1.000.

City of Portland. A wonderful bright rosy-pink, much deeper in color than Mrs. Alfred Conard or Hungaria; a free-flowering, vigorous grower. 3½ ft. 20 cts. each; $2.00 per doz.; $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Fairy Queen. The dwarf, compact plants of this distinct novelty are covered with flowers from spring until fall. The plant rarely exceeds 3 feet in height. The flowers, of a clear rose-pink, are of medium size, good substance and borne upright on stout stems in great abundance. Each flower has a distinct cream-colored border. We believe Fairy Queen will become one of the very popular Cannas. 60 cts. each; $6.00 per doz.; $50.00 per 100.

Flag of Truce. A large-flowered, creamy white with faint pink dots on each petal. The general effect is white. Not as white nor as tall as Eureka, but quite distinct and valuable. 4 ft. 35 cts. each; $3.50 per doz.; $20.00 per 100.

Golden Eagle. A wonderful clear golden-yellow of free, upright growth. The flowers are produced in large clusters well above the foliage. 4 ft. 35c. each; $3.50 per doz.; $20.00 per 100.

Harmony. Great clusters of good-sized, well-formed Geranium red flowers are arranged on good stems in such a manner as to give the trusses an almost globular appearance. 3½ ft. 20 cts. each; $2.00 per doz.; $15.00 per 100.

Pocahontas (Bronze-leaved Olympic). Large oriental-red flowers borne on firm upright stems, just high enough above the foliage to show the entire head. The foliage is a dark bronze-green with emerald shadings; the ribs a darker bronze. 4 ft. 20 cts. each; $2.00 per doz.; $15.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Poppy. Intense poppy-red. Large perfect florets in good trusses over greenish-bronzy foliage. Rich and effective. 5 ft. 20 cts. each; $2.00 per doz.; $10.00 per 100; $90.00 per 1000.

Remarkable. This effective bronze-leaved variety stands out boldly among other sorts, not only on account of its height (6 ft.), but because of the beautiful scarlet-carmine trusses of bloom surmounting the rich green-bronze foliage. 20 cts. each; $2.00 per doz.; $10.00 per 100; $90.00 per 1000.

Surprise. The brightest red Canna we have. It surpasses in brilliancy such popular varieties as Meteor and Lafayette and produces its great trusses with equal freedom. 4 to 5 ft. 35 cts. each; $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100.

The President. When the Canna Firebird was introduced its immense florets and bright red color immediately insured its popularity. In offering The President we may best describe it as possessing all the good qualities of Firebird enhanced by extraordinary vigor and perfect healthy foliage. It grows to a height of 5 ft. and produces its immense trusses of giant florets in great profusion. The most sensational introduction of recent years. 35 cts. each; $3.50 per doz.; $20.00 per 100.

Increase in Rose Supply

A larger supply of roses is in sight, though the very severe cold wave of the first part of the week set back the cut of roses considerably, still as more moderate weather is experienced, a larger cut is sure to become a certainty. This will result in decreased prices.

We will give our customers the benefit of these reductions as fast as possible. Our regular customers know from experience that they are given promptly the benefit of any drop in prices. It is this square dealing, together with the exceptionally fine quality of our roses, that has built up our immense shipping trade. We invite those who wish to place regular shipping orders direct with the grower to give our stock and service a trial.

Find out by comparison the advantages of buying direct of a large grower. The value of his greenhouses is largely in his ability to satisfy his customers.

A larger supply of miscellaneous flowers, including carnations, are being received. Any flowers which we do not grow ourselves, we will buy for our customers and give them the advantage of the lowest market prices and best quality.

BRISK ST. VALENTINE'S DAY TRADE.

The demand for St. Valentine's day was exceptionally heavy, especially from out-of-town points, and stock in all lines cleaned up completely at high prices. The extreme cold weather on St. Valentine's day affected the local demand somewhat but at that everything cleaned up nicely and the retail dealers are more than satisfied with the amount of business that they did. Violets had a heavy call and fancy stock brought high prices, but there was a large quantity of "pickled stock" from the east that had to be sacrificed at exceedingly low figures to move it. American Beauty roses had a heavy call and so did Mrs. Chas. Russell, Premier and Columbia. The other roses also sold up early at high prices. Carnations were in short supply and command high figures. Orchids had a brisk call and there was a strong demand for gardenias and lily of the valley. Sweet peas sold exceptionally well and were sold out quickly. Freesias were in large supply and in good demand, cleaning up well at very satisfactory prices. Tulips, jonquils and narcissus were good property and so were daisies, calendulas, mignonette, pansies, snapdragons and other miscellaneous stock. The demand for St. Valentine's day this year exceeded all expectations and it was impossible for the dealers to fill anywhere near all the orders in full. Some of the dealers are looking forward to a reduction in prices toward the end of this week owing to the opening of Lent and the decreasing death rate, while others were inclined to think that the recent cold wave, when the temperature dropped to 7 degrees below zero, has checked the supply for some time. Business during February so far has been wonderful and exceeded all expectations, the total sales in some in-

The American Greenhouse Manufacturing Co. will present to the trade in the near future, a two-reel moving picture, showing the manufacture of their greenhouses from the start to the finish. Philip L. McKee, president of the firm, say that, if possible, it will be shown for the first time at the New York spring show. Everett D. Burton, formerly manager of the New York office, has moved here to assume the duties of sales manager.

The J. A. Budlong Co. was fortunate in having a good supply of stock, particularly roses and carnations, all during the period of scarcity, which enabled the firm to take care of all its regular patrons as well as some new ones. Bulbous stock is now quite a factor at this establishment, and the shipments include Darwin tulips.

Peter Duris says that the Central Floral Co. never experienced such a heavy demand for cut flowers for St. Valentine's day, and that if the weather had not turned so exceedingly cold toward noon on Saturday, and below zero the following day, the sales would have been greater than those of Christmas.

Manager Degnan, of A. Henderson & Co., is making extensive preparation and expects a big retail trade this season. Joseph Marks and Simon Dernison, traveling representatives of this firm, have recently returned from their initial trip of the year and report excellent business.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association enjoyed a brisk St. Valentine's day trade with an early clean-up in stock. Manager Klingsporn is pleased with the sales for February so far, which are running considerably ahead of those of the same period last year.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is cutting a good supply of lilies, which are in good demand and clean up nicely at satisfactory prices. This firm had a heavy St. Valentine's day trade and disposed of all the cut flowers it had to offer at an early hour.

Mrs. L. M. Jones, of Percy Jones, Inc., has been on the sick list for two weeks with the influenza. She is greatly missed at the store, and her many friends in the trade are hoping for an early and permanent recovery.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. report business brisk, with the sales for St. Valentine's day exceptionally heavy. Bulbous stock is arriving in heavier supply here, among which is included particularly fine freesia.

Vaughan's Greenhouses are featuring cannas, their special damp storage houses keeping the roots in ideal dormant condition. A large quantity will soon be put in sand to start for potting later.

C. L. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn, is looking forward to a drop in prices on cut flowers, especially roses, which he says are coming in heavier crop.

Erne & Company report a very satisfactory demand for St. Valentine's day, with the sales showing a great increase over last year.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. report the best St. Valentine's day demand ever experienced, with a complete cleanup in stock.

O. A. & L. A. Tonner are featuring a splendid supply of bulbous stock, which is in good demand at present.

Peter Reinberg and wife and N. J. Wieter and wife have returned from Florida.

E. C. Pruner is back from a successful business trip through the southwest.

Visitors: Mike Rocklin, of Rocklin & Lehman, Sioux City, Ia.; R. E. Jones, of the Advance Co., Richmond, Ind.; F. C. W. Brown, Cleveland, O.; Wm. Kolb, Beaver Dam, Wis.; E. H. Mazey, Minneapolis, Minn.

Allied Floral Association.

The Allied Floral Association met at the Hotel Randolph, Monday evening, February 16, at 8 o'clock. There was a good attendance considering the extremely cold weather and considerable business was transacted, including the election of the board of directors, which resulted as follows: For three years, August Poehlmann, George Asmus and John Michelsen; two years, W. J. Smyth, Paul Klingsporn and Otto Amling; one year, Eric Johnson, A. Lange and Peter Pearson. A motion was made that the by-laws should be amended so as to permit the directors to elect the officers and to keep each branch of the trade represented by three members. This will be voted upon at the next meeting.

Hilmer V. Swenson reported much progress was being made, and that so far, about 300 have signed as members, representing over 100 retailers, 150 growers and 13 wholesalers. A special drive is being made this week so as to bring in as many more signatures as possible, for the assessment plan will go into effect March 1. Everyone in the trade, who has not already become a member should do so immediately, for much benefit will be derived by all.

ALLIANCE, O.—Fred Widmer has opened a flower store at 117-121 East Main street.

VALENTINE DEMAND DISAPPOINTING.

Conflicting, indeed, are the reports of the retailers on the results of their efforts to promote trade for St. Valentine's day. Many of them advertised the attractions they had to offer in both plants and flowers, and for the past two weeks all florists distributed by mail, and attached to the address labels on deliveries, the red heart stickers provided by the publicity committee. The results, however, seem to have been unsatisfactory with many, who claim that while the volume of business for the day was equal to that of last year, it was made up largely in funeral work at the prevailing high prices; and these prices that the public reluctantly yielded to for what was in a sense a necessity, that of offerings to bereaved families, operated to the disadvantage of the florists when the day came for the exchange of valentines in the form of "Say It With Flowers." Following a period of great scarcity, there was plenty of stock of all seasonable kinds for this occasion, especially in cut flowers. Violets were fine, and the supply far in excess of the demand. Sweet peas and freesia in fine condition, even at reduced prices, moved slowly. Roses, too, were in ample supply, contrasting with the past two weeks' shortage.

CLUB MEETING.

The club meeting, February 9, had a meagre attendance. Routine work and plans for a rousing meeting the early part of March were made. At the next meeting, a publicity campaign will be inaugurated to advance the slogan, "Say It With Flowers." Philip Breitmeyer, as S. A. F. director and F. T. D. president, has announced a special message to the club on this subject, and a large attendance is expected. At this meeting, ex-President Wm. Dilger will read a paper on "Horticultural Education." Resolutions of condolence were adopted and extended to John Warncke, whose mother passed away a short time ago, and to John Breitmeyer, Jr., eldest son of Fred Breitmeyer, who lost his young wife February 7 at Mt. Clemens. Pneumonia caused her death.

F. H. Morris, of the Foley Greenhouse Manufacturing Co., Chicago, gave a short talk to the club members on greenhouse heating. His firm had just completed the heating system of the new range they built for C. H. Plumb.

BUSINESS REACHES HIGH MARK.

Valentine business proved of record-breaking proportions, and were it not for the bad turn in the weather, no doubt sales would have been still greater. Most of the call, as in former years, confined itself to cut flowers, basket arrangements, corsages or novelties expressly created for the holiday. The wholesalers report business greatly in excess of last year and lament the fact that they did not have more stock to sell. While, in some instances, the prices asked were slightly in excess of those asked last week, as a whole there was little change, roses and violets showing a slight increase. Most of the rose stock is in prime condition, and the way things look now, prices have reached the crest. The continued scarcity of short roses has been cause for much worry to the smaller dealers, but now that bulbous stock is more plentiful, the situation will soon right itself. Short roses are quoted at $15 per 100, while the better grades bring as high as $50. Carnations remain the same. Tulips and daffodils are bringing about $8 per 100. Lily of the valley that is home grown, is good at $12. The retailers report business better than last year, some claiming a 40 per cent increase, while others say about equal. Taken as a whole, no doubt everyone was satisfied. Friday, February 13, turned out to be of mammoth proportions, and the trade looked to Saturday to be a repeater of the day before, but a heavy snowfall that melted as it fell, made transportation as well as walking bad and helped to slow up the business, but many telephone orders were booked. Florists' Telegraph Delivery business was 50 per cent greater than last year, much difficulty, however, arising through faulty spelling, no doubt caused by florists phoning the message to the telegraph offices. The proper way is to typewrite the message. That releases you from blame. One retailer received a message from Cleveland, which was unsigned. Not knowing to whom to charge the flowers ,the telegraph company was asked to trace it back. The manager of the company claimed they delivered many unsigned messages, and no signature was necessary. Only upon betting a cigar that he was wrong in this case, would he act. He lost the cigar.

NOTES.

H. W. Sheppard reports business as 25 per cent better than last year. Many new cupid creations and special valentine corsages were noticed here. Dainty baskets also went big.

Julius Baer, T. W. Hardesty & Co., Robt. Kelly and Edward Forter, all located on Fourth street, did a big business, which ran ahead of last year.

The wholesalers, C. E. Critchell, The Wm. Murphy Co., Cincinnati Florists' Exchange, L. H. Kyrk and E. C. Gillette, all sold out early.

C. C. Miller, of Covington, doing a wholesale and retail business, and being a grower of a general stock, did a big trade.

Edwards Floral Co., of Covington, has had a big season, but the high prices helped to keep the profits down.

Charles Jones, Walnut Hill, and the Avondale Floral Co., were more than satisfied with this year's business. K.

GOOD MOVEMENT IN ALL LINES.

The cut flower supply continues below requirements. A fine lot of daffodils are being received and move readily at $12 per 100. Paper Whites, while not numerous, have improved in quality. Sweet peas are in good supply and violets are moving freely, both double and single. A few hyacinths are now seen. Freesias, calendulas and carnations, while good, fail to meet all demands. The rose supply continues meager. Many of the florists are now depending to a certain extent upon artificial material.

NOTES.

The Wilson Florist Co. has been reorganized, and will open a retail store at 1119 East 138th street, corner of St. Clair. J. W. Wilson, and son, Kenneth, and Charles F. Bastian, recently with the Cleveland Plant & Flower Co., are the principal stockholders. They will open for business about March 1.

W. C. Priest, of the Cleveland Plant & Flower Co., is an influenza sufferer. Others who are affiicted with the same malady are Carlton Lowe, of Chagrin Falls, and Mrs. Charles Reif, North Olmstead, O.

Mrs. L. C. Chott, Fliet street florist, has one of her little daughters in the hospital suffering from scarlet fever.

GARDENIAS

Until the end of the season we will be very strong on GOOD GARDENIAS. The flower that we handle is the best, equally as good as any offered elsewhere.

We represent the largest Gardenia growers in this section. For that reason we are in a position to take care of your requirements and fill your orders to your satisfaction at the lowest market price. Place a regular order with us for your weekly requirements.

THE LEO NIESSEN CO., 1201 Race St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Philadelphia.

SUPPLY INCREASES BUT DEMAND HEAVY.

The feature of the week was the great demand of the February 13-14, which took everything in sight, and called for more. It was one of the best St. Valentine days on record, due unfortunately, to the extra calls for flowers for funerals. One of the large wholesalers, on receiving a number of telegrams, nearly all for flowers for funerals, said: "The flower business is growing more like the undertakers' every day, the demand being mostly for the sick and the dead." Although there has been an insistent demand daily in all the wholesale houses, nothing being left over at night to go into the ice boxes, there appeared to be quite an increase in the quantities coming from the growers for Friday and Saturday. Roses, particularly, were more in evidence, also carnations and violets. Very good sweet peas were offered, but there was not near enough for requirements. There were cattleyas and gardenias, some few of which one of the street men offered on a box lid on Chestnut street Saturay afternoon. He looked as out of place as a straw hat at this season. Daffodils were an important flower, but not at all equal to the demand. They readily brought 10 cents, although offered in the New York market at the time for $50 a thousand. Splendid freesia, which readily found buyers, was a feature. Yellow and white daisies, myosatis and pansies sold well, as did mignonette and calendulas. There was very little increase in prices, except for carnations, which for the best Matchless and Ward reached the top figures of 20 to 25 cents. Violets sold for $1.50 to $2.00, while 20 to 35 cents was the price for medium grades of roses.

February 16.—Everything had been cut so close for St. Valentine's day that the growers' shipments even with the extra day cut were not as large as expected, and with an increased demand on account of the heavy death rate there was not nearly enough to supply the many calls from local and out-of-town buyers. It is no longer a question of price. If stock is available, its cost is a secondary consideration.

ST. VALENTINE'S DAY.

While there appears to be a much more general demand in the stores, it was greatly augmented with the use of flowers for valentines, particularly by those who made a bid for this business. H. H. Battles, Pennock Brothers, Fox, Geiger, Grakelow, Gracey, Stahl, Ross, Callahan and others worked overtime in getting their orders out. The purely valentine demand did not appear to show much increase over last or previous years, but held its own in spite of the high prices.

Pennock Bros., who have always something novel to offer in valentine arrangements, were very busy. They had a very beautiful window, displaying hand-painted boxes and baskets, filled with choice flowers, and nicely decorated with ribbons that were unique and attractive. There were heart-shaped boxes and hampers and many other novelties.

John C. Gracey had a very good business, finding a great sale for Primula malacoides. Cut flowers were in great demand, the high prices seeming to make but little difference.

Charles Grakelow was very busy, and states that this was his banner St. Valentine's day, both for local and telegraph delivery orders.

Charles Henry Fox specialized in violets and cattleyas. There was a good demand for flowers for all purposes, as well as for valentines.

The London Flower Shop had so many orders that several of their customers turned in and helped. They made a good Valentine's display in their windows for the past week, and this brought in much additional business.

PRIMULA MALACOIDES.

C. U. Liggit can truly be called the "primrose king." Four years ago, one of his growers had a few hundred Primula malacoides, which Mr. Liggit so quickly disposed of that the stock the next year was given an entire house and 5,000 were readily sold. The third year the total reach nearly 25,000, and the present season, 36,000 were found to be not enough. They are all grown in 3½ to 4-inch pots, and are wonderful plants both in foliage and quantities of bloom.

THE FLOREX MISHAP.

The storm damages to the Florex greenhouses was very serious, the loss being the entire house, 150x600 feet, of which only the unbroken glass is saved, and it will be required to reglaze the other large house, 175x700 feet, which structure was not damaged, but which lost most of the glass on the south side. Strange to say, it was not alone the storm but the melting of the great mass of ice and snow by the sun, which by nine o'clock in the morning, had so softened the mass that it started to slide and carried all the glass out with it. A contract has been closed with the Lord & Burnham Co. for two standard iron frame houses, 72x700 feet each, to replace the 150x600-foot house as soon as the ground can be cleared.

NOTES.

The March meeting of the florists' club, the first Tuesday of the month, is to be ladies' night. The feature is to be an illustrated lecture by J. Otto Thilow, on his recent trip to Australia. Mr. Thilow took his camera with him, and made photos of many of the plants and beautiful garden scenery of that distant country. This will be a great treat to the members and their friends, who remember with pleasure Mr. Thilow's realistic pictures of the Hawaiian Islands and the lovely tropical scenery of these distant isles.

D. T. Connor is down with influenza, but is coming along nicely. George Aeugele has been having a hard time getting well; he has escaped pneumonia, and is coming along, but it will be another week or two before he will be seen at the store. H. S. Runk, bookkeeper for W. K. Harris, had the influenza, and then pneumonia. He was a very sick man, but is now recovering. His case was handled entirely by osteopathic physicians, who have had almost entire success in handling this serious malady.

A. R. Burton has just returned from a trip through the south, where he found the trade everywhere as busy as beavers. There was a much greater demand for cut flowers than could be filled, and a crying call for labor, skilled greenhouse help being very scarce.

The sudden death of Edward Habermehl came as a great shock to the entire trade. He was recognized as a leader in his profession, and his passing in the prime of life in the midst of his activities, was greatly deplored. Surely death loves a shining mark.

The 80,000 rose plants that filled the house at the Florex Gardens, broken down by the storm two weeks ago, were all disposed of by C. U. Liggit within a week after the accident. They were sold to plant men, who will grow them on in pots for spring sales.

Edward Reid has returned from a trip south for his health, he having, early in the winter, contracted a bad cold. He is much improved. Fancy double violets were in great demand for Valentine's day, he handling over 50,000. K.

New York.

CONDITIONS RETURNING TO NORMAL.

After more than a month of a shortage in stock, and a week of partial paralysis on account of the storm, this market is getting back to normal conditions. There is now plenty of stock to supply all demands; in fact, in some lines there seems to be a surplus. As a result, there has been a sharp decline in prices on roses, carnations and spring flowers. Special tea roses are slower than the shorter grades, the latter being most in demand, but all grades have dropped from $5 to $10 on the hundred, from the prices of February 1. There is a possibility that another long-continued period of bad weather might again boost rose prices, but that is remote. As for carnations, they seem to be down to stay, as the winter is now well advanced. On February 13-14, the latter being an exceptionally fine day, there was a fair movement in violets, but a good many of them got into the hands of the street men. Top prices for the best were $1 and $1.25 per 100. As previously stated, the weather was fine on St. Valentine's day, and it being a half-holiday, conditions were as favorable for business as could be expected. There is much variance in the reports from retailers on the day's business. A few have stated that it was better than last year; others that it was about the same, and yet others that it was not above the average Saturday business. It did not greatly affect the wholesadle district, so it is a reasonable conclusion that on the average it was about the same as in previous years. A number of retailers did their best to increase sales for the day, and with apparent success. Many heart-shaped boxes were noticed that had been filled with a variety of the smaller flowers, such as sweet peas, violets, forget-me-nots and spring flowers. Red roses were also used. There was a considerable trade in small plants and pans of tulips.

February 18.—There was the usual amount of Monday and Tuesday buying, but as a rule, at reduced prices. The best varieties of roses are holding up fairly well. Fair weather is bringing in an abundant supply of all stocks.

NOTES.

The annual ball and entertainment of the Greek-American Florists' Association will be held in the Hotel Commodore, Lexington avenue and 42nd street, on the night of February 26th. This event is looked forward to with great interest by a large majority of the florists—regardless of nationality—of this city and vicinity. The Greek-Americans have the inherited faculty of arranging good entertainments, and carrying them to a successful finish, and it is assumed that the coming one will be no exception, as an able committee is in charge. The tickets will be $5 per couple, or $3 for single gentlemen and $2 for ladies. Tickets are on sale in 28th street by D. J. Pappas, of the United Cut Flower Co.

Manager Rigby, of the S. S. Pennock Company's wholesale store, 117 West 28th street, has reason to be well satisfied with the present equipment of their establishment. A most complete refrigerating and ice-making plant has recently been installed. New and large refrigerators have been built, which are piped, and cooled from the apparatus located in the basement. There is a large tank from which 400 pounds of ice per day is taken. Brine is exclusively used in the operations, there being no ammonia entering into the operations. In addition, the entire interior of the store has been handsomely repainted and decorated.

At P. F. McKenney's, Fifth avenue and 42nd street, New York,'s busiest corner, it was said that business had been good. Mr. McKenney has been laid up with a bad cold, but the amiable Mrs. McKenney was on the job.

At the store of David Clarke's Sons, many good features were noticed, and they were having good business.

At the store of Ralph Armstrong, it was stated that they had good business in violets and corsage bouquets. Mr. Armstrong is recovering from an attack of influenza, and in the meantime Mrs. Armstrong is at the helm.

Myer, the retailer of Madison avenue and 58th street, has recently bought two houses adjoining his store. He already owned the corner in which his establishment is located. His buildings now contain 26 apartments.

Theodore Malandre, of Malandre Brothers, said that their business was good, and the customers on hand and the boxes going out was evidence to prove it. They had an appropriate window decoration.

Manager Perry, of the Dards store, stated that it was the best St. Valentine's day they had ever had. They were busy both on the 13th and 14th, and were well prepared with a fine stock.

William Kessler and wife have just returned from a stay of several weeks at Miami, Fla., and were well pleased with their trip. Both show the good effects of a rest and change of scene.

Maurice Christatos, of Christatos & Koster, is receiving many congratulations from friends. Cause—triplets, born February 12; two boys and a girl. Mother and children are doing well.

Curt Thimm, the grower of Roslyn, L. I., who has been ill with influenza and pneumonia is now improving.

William P. Ford, who had a severe attack of influenza, has recovered and returned to business.

Stephen Masur, the well known Brooklyn retailer,had the misfortune to have one of his legs broken by a fall, February 13.

Eli Futterman, who had a round with pneumonia, is again back on the job. A. F. F.

American Seed Trade Association.

E. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, 216 Prospect Avenue, S. E., Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer.

The thirty-eighth annual meeting will be held at Milwaukee, Wis., June 22-24, 1920.

THE price of bags at Chicago, February 18, was $64.

NEW YORK seedsmen report freight shipments greatly delayed by the recent blizzard.

A LEADING Chicago field seed house is reported to have made $600,000 last year on clover seed.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—Business for 1920 has started very satisfactorily with Wm. Henry Maule, Inc.

A. HENDERSON, of A. Henderson & Co., Chicago, is planning to attend the New York show next month.

THE senate agricultural committee has approved the bill repealing the government control of wheat prices.

LA CROSSE, WIS.—The John A. Salzer Seed Co.'s business shows a substantial increase over that of last year.

J. CHAS. MCCULLOUGH, Cincinnati, O., and wife, are at Palm Beach, Fla. Mrs. McCullough's health is rather poorly.

GARDEN TOOL manufacturers say they are oversold on account of their inability to secure steel in sufficient quantity for their purposes.

PAINESVILLE, O.—Carl Barto, of the Storrs & Harrison Co.'s seed department, is again at his desk after a prolonged siege of illness.

VISITED CHICAGO: A. Schravendeel, representing Segers Brothers, Lisse, Holland; A. H. Luck, representing S. M. Isbell & Co., Jackson, Mich.

POINT LOMA, CALIF.—Chas. N. Page and wife, recently injured here by a street car crashing into their auto, are now out of the hospital and recovering slowly.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—The J. Steckler Seed Co. recorded an increase of 50 per cent in volume of January business this year, compared with the corresponding month in 1919.

PRAYERS for rain to relieve the long continued period of comparative dryness throughout the state were offered in the churches of San Francisco, Calif., February 15.

FRENCH cable advices of February 13 indicate the bulb crop needs rain now. The drought, following that of last year, will have a considerable influence on the quantity produced this season.

CINCINNATI, O.—H. B. McCullough, of the J. M. McCullough's Sons Co., and wife, are now in California. Mr. McCullough is slowly recovering from the effects of his accident of last November.

LONDON, ONT. — Frederick James Darch, of the former firm of Darch & Hunter, died January 23, age 49 years. The seed business was sold about six years ago to C. Wesley Baker and Thos. A. Baker, now Dominion Seeds, Ltd., Mr. Darch taking the position as supreme secretary of the Independent Order of Foresters and residing at Toronto.

BOARD OF TRADE.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade, February 18, were as follows: Timothy, $10.00 to $14.00 per 100 pounds; $14.50 bid for March and offered for $14.80; red clover, $45.00 to $54.00 per 100 pounds.

TOLEDO, O.—Clover was steady February 16, opening unchanged from the closing price the previous day, with cash offered at $35.00, a drop of 50 cents during the week. Timothy was also steady with cash, 1919, at $6.95, March $6.95, April $6.90, and May $6.85.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—While mail order sales during January were considerably less than the same month, 1919, due to the fact that the catalogue was not mailed as early, Wood, Stubbs & Co.'s credit sales show a substantial increase and all indications point to excellent business later.

ONION SETS in the Chicago district have moved rather slowly the past week on account of the severe weather. Prices, however, remain firm at $3.50 for colors and $4.00 for whites, in carlots. Independent stocks are reported pretty well cleaned up, but the sets on hand continue in fine condition.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—Notwithstanding the fact that the catalogue of James Vick's Sons was held back by slow and inadequate transportation and unsettled conditions in the printing trade, January sales have averaged up to those of a year ago. Taking into consideration the severe temperature of the month just passed, business should start with a rush with the arrival of favorable weather.

California Rainfall.

January, 1920, was a month of very unfavorable weather for crop growth in California. The drought conditions which had prevailed during the preceding months were greatly accentuated by the remarkable absence of precipitation during January, usually a month of heavy rain. Not only was the rainfall decidedly below the normal for the month throughout the state, but at many places it was the least ever recorded in a January. Very little snow fell in the mountains, and at the close of the month, no snow remained on the ground at the 5,000-foot level, and at the higher stations the amounts were less than at the beginning of the month. From the 7th to the 15th, a cold spell prevailed, and heavy killing frosts generally, causing some damage to oranges in the San Joaquin valley. This was followed by warmer weather, which continued to the end of the month. On the 17th, the highest temperatures ever recorded in January occurred at San Jose and Los Angeles, and the record was equaled at San Luis Obispo. At the close of the month, all streams were very low and all crops were sadly in need of rain. The outlook for water for irrigation and power purposes during the coming summer was very discouraging.

Bean Tariff Proposed.

The California bean industry has been in a bad way for sometime, due principally to the heavy imports of beans and the high cost of labor. It is said the oriental countries produce a close imitation of nearly every bean grown in the United States. The Kotenashi bean is identical in appearance with the small white bean which constitutes 42 per cent of this country's production. The Kotenashi bean has been sold in San Francisco this year for as low as 3½ cents per pound, or about one-half the cost of production of beans in California. It has recently been quoted in every market in the United States at ¼ to ½ cent per pound below the similar domestic bean, showing that the consumer gets no benefit from the oriental importation, while the domestic article is excluded.

The principal bean growing states are California, Michigan and New York, and the average normal production of beans in the United States is approximately 10,000,000 bushels; the average normal production of beans in the orient is approximately 200,000,- 000 bushels. The average wage of the American field laborer is in excess of $4.00 a day; the average wage of the Asiatic field laborer is below 30 cents per day. Recent testimony before the food administration showed that the cost of production of beans ranged from $26.95 to $80.00 an acre, and the yield all the way from 300 to 2,000 pounds.

The growers of California, Michigan and New York have united in an effort to secure a tariff of four cents per pound on imported beans, and they are very hopeful of success. It is claimed as a result of the large importation, 2,000,000 bags of beans having been imported from the orient since last harvest, a large proportion of the 1918 crop of California beans has found no market even at prices below the cost of production. During all of the first half of 1918, the price offered for the product was below the cost of production. The Asiatic countries have productive resources sufficient to supply every demand of the American bean market. It is further stated that beans are the only important food product that have no ready market, that they are the only important food product that have sold at prices materially lower than the prices of the previous two years, and that they are the only important food product that have sold below the cost of production.

California claims to produce nearly one-half of all the beans grown in the United States, that the crop is second in value to only one other agricultural product in the state, that the industry brings from forty to fifty million dollars of new wealth to the state every year, that many thousands of acres of the richest bean land in California are unsuited for other crops, that bean growing is the most important industry in many counties of the state, that bean culture adds fertility to the soil and improves the land for other uses, that the ruin of the bean industry will bring heavy losses and in many cases

Sack Ownership Ruling.

Sacramento, Calif., Jan. 23.—Sacks and other containers generally used in delivery of wholesale lots of beans, potatoes, onions and other products do not change ownership in the transaction, and unless specified remain the property of the seller of the commodity, according to a ruling handed down by Charles G. Johnson, state sealer of weights and measures, as the laws of California require the selling of such commodities at net weight.

"Hamburg Late Pink" Chrysanthemum

Picture was taken Dec. 6, 1919, and will give a good idea of what "Hamburg Late Pink" looks like when grown to single stems and planted six inches each way.

"Hamburg Late Pink" is an improved late pink Maud Dean, having more petals, and if grown for late will hardly ever show an open center.

The average grower of chrysanthemums must have varieties which are easy to handle and from which he can cut as near 100% of perfect blooms as possible. "Hamburg Late Pink" has been grown for the last four years, and produces a very high proportion of good flowers. It is not an exhibition variety, but, for late pink, one of the best for commercial purposes. It can be had in bloom the latter part of November by taking an early bud, but some of the flowers will show open centers; but by selecting late buds, after October 1st, most of the flowers are cut during December, and would advise to select late buds, as the later buds will hardly ever show an open center, and some flowers can be had even in January.

Keeping qualities are excellent, and where a graceful pink flower is wanted, "Hamburg Late Pink" cannot be surpassed. "Hamburg Late Pink" will be disseminated in the spring of 1920. Plants will be ready March 1st, 1920, and all orders will be filled in rotation.

ST. VALENTINE'S DAY TRADE SETS RECORD.

St. Valentine's day business in this city was the best in history, according to reports of florists in the down-town shopping section. It was early in the day when the supply of roses or carnations was exhausted. The flowers which were most plentiful, were violets, sweet peas and jonquils. The demand was good for all purposes, but especially for parties celebrating the day. Quite a few masquerade balls and receptions were held. Funeral work has been active, because of the epidemic of influenza. There is also a large amount of other sickness, and flowers always play an important part. Most of the florists have been compelled to depend on outside shipments for their supplies, and in some instances, these were rather slow in arriving. Growers of flowers in central Ohio are laying plans for an extra large Easter business and prospects are exceedingly bright. Indications point to a good supply of lilies, tulips, violets and hydrangeas.

FLORAL VALENTINES IN GREAT DEMAND.

St. Valentine day, 1920, set a new record for that date, although a shortage of stock developed early in the day in cut flowers, which materially reduced the possible total receipts for the day. Flowering plants of primula, cyclamen, cineraria, freesia, etc., and made-up plant baskets helped to fill in the gap, besides taking care of their own demand, and rolled up an unprecedented total for plant sales for this occasion. Of course, prices were high, compared with previous years, but buyers seem to expect advanced prices, and little comment was heard. Weather conditions were all that could be reasonably asked for. Business, so far this year, has been good, and many days the demand has exceeded supply. Prices are almost at holiday figures. The call for funeral flowers has been quite heavy, and especially so since the beginning of the influenza epidemic. General business prospects for spring seem good, if present financial conditions are not too greatly upset.

Vegetable Growers' Association of America.

E. A. Dunbar, Ashtabula, O., President; Louis F. Miller, Toledo, O., Vice-President; S. W. Severance, Louisville, Ky., Secretary; H. J. Cheney, Grand Rapids Mich., Treas. Next annual convention September 1920.

FROST, February 15, damaged tender truck crops in North Florida.

WINTER vegetable shipments from the Rio Grande valley for the past several weeks have realized good profits for the truckers.

WILD RICE, according to Dr. Melvin B. Gilmore of the North Dakota Historical Society, is a neglected food crop although cultivation is practically done by nature.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, February 17.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, $4.00 to $6.00; celery, Michigan, square box, $2.50 to $3.00; leaf lettuce, per tomato box, 27½ to 30 cents; radishes, per dozen bunches, 70 to 85 cents; tomatoes, per crate, six baskets, $2.75 to $4.25.

New York, February 16.—Celery, per crate, $2.50 to $4.00; cucumbers, per dozen, $2.00 to $2.25; mushrooms, 50 cents to $1.75 per three pound basket; tomatoes, per pound, 5 to 40 cents; lettuce, per dozen, 50 cents to $1.00; radishes, per 100 bunches, $2.00 to $5.00.

Hotbeds and Cold Frames.

"Hotbeds and cold frames are devices which enable one to produce certain crops which will not reach full development in the ordinary growing season, to mature other crops earlier, and in some cases, to increase the quality of a product. They are in use by all gardeners, and would be an asset on many farms," says Prof. Robert B. Cruickshank of the department of horticulture of the Ohio State University. Directions for the construction and the use of hotbeds and cold frames are given in a 4-page bulletin that may be secured by writing to the Extension Service, College of Agriculture, Columbus, Ohio.

Cabbage Yellows.

The most destructive disease of the cabbage in Ohio is the one known as "yellows." The only way of avoiding losses, where this disease has become established, is to grow varieties or strains which are not subject to attack. Plant pathologists of the Wisconsin experiment station have developed strains of several varieties which are quite resistant to the disease. One of these, the Wisconsin Hollander (Danish Ball Head type,) a hard winter variety, suitable for storage and shipping, has been in commercial use for several years, and has maintained its resistance to yellows wherever tried. Resistant strains of All Seasons, which is a favorite with Ohio growers, and of the Brunswick have also been perfected. It is expected that sufficient seed will be produced by this fall so that these strains may be offered to the public.

Growers who are interested in obtaining some of this seed, either for use, or for trial on a small scale, may obtain further information from the local county agricultural agent or from the plant pathologist, botany department, Ohio State University, Columbus.

Diseased plants have a sickly yellowish green color. The yellowing is often more pronounced on one side of the plant, resulting in a twisting and curling of the plant and leaves. The latter beginning with the lower ones, are dropped prematurely, leaving the plant at the end of the season, if it survives, with a long bare stem and perhaps a small worthless head. Diseased plants may be killed, however, within a few weeks after being transplanted. This and other diseases of the cabbage, together with control measures, are fully discussed in Farmers' Bulletin 925, which may be obtained free from the United States department of agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Vegetable Markets.

Reports to the bureau of markets of the United States department of agriculture for the period February 8-14, indicate irregular conditions. Potatoes were higher, the demand and movement showing improvement and prices advanced in shipping and consuming markets. At shipping points, Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin Round Whites closed at $4.10-$4.20 per 100 pounds, sacked; Colorado Rurals and Pearls advanced 25 cents, closing at $3.75-$4; Idaho Rurals and Russets closed at $3.80-$3.90 and $4-$4.10 respectively; New York Round Whites held to last week's prices, $3.95-$4.10; Maine Green Mountains ranged $3.35-$3.50 per 100 pounds bulk. The market for old cabbage continued draggy and weak. Danish seed stock closed at western New York shipping points at $65-$75 per ton. Wisconsin Holland Seed closed in Chicago at $70-$85. New Florida Wakefields ranged $1-$1.25 per one and one-half bushel hamper. Texas Early Flat Dutch was $100-$110 per ton bulk at St. Louis. California Winningstadts closed at $4-$4.50 per 75-pound crate at Chicago. Onion values were lower. The demand and movement at western New York shipping points showed some improvement, but prices showed no change at $5-$5.25 per 100 pounds. Middlewestern yellow varieties in jobbing markets ranged mostly at $4.75-$5.75. California Australian Browns were quoted in Chicago at $5-$5.50 per 100 pounds sacked. Spanish Valencias ranged $5.50-$6.50 per case in principal consuming markets. Sweet potatoes were generally steady, little change occurring in terminal markets.

Seed Potato Crop in Wisconsin.

Wisconsin farmers produced 145,080 bushels of certified seed potatoes during the year just past, according to J. G. Milward in charge of the certification work for the Wisconsin College of Agriculture. The yield is divided among these five varieties: Triumph, 61,835 bushels; Green Mountain, 39,205 bushels; Rural New Yorker, 25,670 bushels; Irish Cobbler, 13,820 bushels, and Early Ohio, 4,600 bushels. Out of 280 applications, 157 growers received certificates showing that their stock was true to variety, and free from disease. Two inspections are made before a certificate is granted. The first eliminates potato stands which show degenerate vine diseases, unsatisfactory stand or cultural conditions, mixed varieties, or other minor causes. The second inspection after the potatoes are harvested rejects the coarse, misshapen stock, common scab, late blight, or other diseases, and general undesirable stock caused by frost injury or rough handling of the stock. A special list has been issued by Mr. Milward giving the names of the growers of certified potato stock in the state.

ROSE CLIMBING WOOTON does well in Florida.

ORCHARDS in Rock Island county, Illinois, are being badly damaged by ravages of the San Jose scale.

THE California fruit pack for the year ending February 28, 1920, is estimated at more than $70,000,000.

LAWRENCE, KAN.—The Mt. Hope Nurseries have opened downtown offices in the Lawrence National Bank building.

CAMPHOR is now being produced in this country, and it is believed that eventually, American production in Florida will suffice to take care of domestic needs.

CONGRESS has set apart 1,116,000 acres of land in Idaho, known as the Thunder Mountain district, as a national forest. It adjoins the Payette national forest.

THE University of California agricultural experiment station, Berkeley, has issued Bulletin No. 217 on "Selection of Stocks in Citrus Propagation," 30 pages, illustrated.

TOPEKA, KAN.—E. B. Cushman, of this city, has purchased the orchard of S. H. Hudlow, near Oronogo, Mo., consisting of 80 acres, the consideration said to have been $21,000.

ALBANY, GA.—The Keystone Pecan Co., a Pennsylvania corporation, has purchased the Arthur pecan grove of 740 acres for $229 per acre, a total of $170,000. The oldest trees are three years old.

"Manual of American Grape-Growing."

A complete book on grape-growing, under the above title, by U. P. Hedrick, horticulturist of the New York agricultural experiment station, a well known authority, has recently been published, giving to what is now a great industry in America, a treatise of its own, an up-to-date manual of propagation, manipulation and the handling of the grape for the commercial grower, and meeting the needs of the amateur in his city or suburban home. The book comprises 18 chapters, fully illustrated, among the topics being: "The Domestication of the Grape"; "Regions and Their Determinants"; "Propagation"; "Stocks and Resistant Vines"; "Vineyard Management"; "Pruning"; "Training"; "Grapes under Glass"; "Pests"; "Marketing"; "Botany of Grapes" and "Varieties." As a means of proper selection of an assortment of all kinds and for all places in America, the manual lists 158 varieties with information as to their susceptibilities to disease, etc., as well as points of special merit. The book of 468 pages is substantially bound in cloth.

Park Superintendents' Official Journal.

We have received a copy of "Parks and Recreation," Vol. 3, No. 1, the official journal of the American Association of Park Superintendents. It is published at East St. Louis, Ill., and Emmett P. Griffin, secretary-treasurer of the association, is managing editor. He is also superintendent of parks of East St. Louis. The pamphlet contains much useful information, including addresses delivered at the convention of 1919, held at Hartford and New Haven, Conn., by George A. Parker, Hon. Charles E. Gross, Hon. Henry H. Goodwin and others. Also, the letter of greeting to the association, from the then president, Theodore Wirth, of Minneapolis, Minn. The next convention will be held in Louisville, Kentucky, in September, 1920, the days of the month to be announced later. A number of fine illustrations are included in the publication.

Memorial Tree Plantings Registration.

The first Rotary Club in the country to report plans for a road of remembrance to the American Forestry Association, which is registering all memorial trees in a national honor roll, is the organization at Tampa, Florida. At a cost of $7,000 a tree will be planted along the West coast road for every man in the service from Hillsborough county.

At Middletown, Ohio, the welfare association will plant 1,000 trees along the Dixie highway next spring and at Chattanooga, the National League of Women's Service will plant a road of remembrance leading out of that city. In Minneapolis a road of remembrance between two parks is being laid out now and the trees will be planted in 1921. The Woman's Club of York, Pa., will plant 25 miles of the Lincoln highway with memorial trees.

"X" Liquid May Save You Thousands of Dollars in an Emergency

SUPPOSE you suddenly discover that an unusual cold spell has cracked the heating boiler and it leaks badly!

Do you think it necessary to shut off the heat and risk enormous damage to the contents of the greenhouse?

Not at all!

"X" Liquid will repair any leaky or cracked boiler in half an hour. It will do a job that would take two workmen a week.

"X" Liquid Will Do a $200 Repair Job for $10.

It is not necessary to locate the leaks or cracks or know how many there are.

The action of "X" is entirely automatic. When poured into the boiler it mixes with the water and soon gets to every break in the metal. It flows through—strikes the air—and then hardens right in the hole. This stops the leak or crack. The heat in the water then sets this repair, making it as PERMANENT and as SURE as any welding job. In fact, where welding won't hold—as on cast-iron sections—"X" Liquid makes a perfect repair.

Makes Boilers Rust-proof and Scale-proof. Saves Coal.

It is a remarkable fact that the same "X" Liquid used for repairing leaks or cracks will also eliminate rust and prevent scale from forming on the walls. This means greater heating efficiency with less coal.

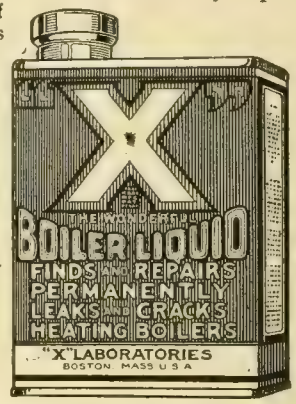
"X" contains no cement, powder or other injurious ingredients. It is an absolute liquid, a scientific process for making boilers LEAK-PROOF, RUST-PROOF and SCALE-PROOF. Beware of inferior imitations which are trading on the reputation of the genuine "X" Liquid.

A Strong Guarantee!

You take no chances in using "X" Liquid. It is unconditionally guaranteed to make good. If it fails, you get a new can—or your money back.

But your greatest guarantee of the value of "X" is the fact that it is used, sold and recommended by 99 per cent of the manufacturers of boilers and radiators. It is used by the United States Government.

If your boiler cracks or leaks this winter, you don't have to worry about your greenery—if you keep "X" Liquid handy. You can do the repair job yourself easily.



Get "X" Liquid from your steam-fitter, or we will ship, charges prepaid, on receipt of price.

MANURE

It is direct heat dried and sterilized, weed seeds, grass seeds, fungus and disease germs destroyed in a direct heat rotary drying process that does not change or destroy any of the valuable elements in crude manure.

Air dried manures cannot be sterilized and usually carry excess moisture that actually makes them cost more per ton than WIZARD BRAND even at the same or a lower price.

Look for the WIZARD BRAND Trade Mark tagged or printed on every bag. If it is not there you are not getting WIZARD BRAND protection for your crop and pocket book.

Your dealer can get WIZARD BRAND for you if you insist or we will quote with freight rate on any quantity from a bag to a carload promptly.

Corn Borer Quarantine Hearing.

Washington, D. C., February 24.

Trade Suggests Modifications.

More than half a hundred florists, seedsmen, nurserymen and others interested in the proposed quarantine against the European corn borer affecting the New England states, New York and Pennsylvania, appeared before the federal horticultural board at Washington, D. C., February 24, to present the views of the bodies they represented. This was the fifth meeting to be held on this matter, three previous conferences having been held at the national capital, and one at Boston, Mass. According to a preliminary statement by the chairman of the board, a quarantine covering the territory then known to be infested, was issued as a result of the first hearing, but affected only certain counties in Massachusetts, and corn and corn products. Since then, however, a great deal of investigational work has been carried on, and it has been found that the corn borer was far more widely distributed than was at first thought to be the case, and that also it infests a much larger variety of plants and flowers than first anticipated. These investigations are being continued, and those who attended this hearing were informed that any quarantine orders issued in the near future, should not be considered as final, as they would be subject to change as further facts regarding this pest developed.

Although the federal horticultural board has issued but one quarantine order, affecting only certain plants, and applicable only to a very small area, the matter has been followed more closely by the states themselves, with the result that stringent regulations have been issued in a number of states in the west and middlewest, and even as far south as Florida, while Canada also has made the matter one of regulation. It was because of the fact that the state regulations vary, and are extremely stringent, that the growers are anxious to have the matter taken out of the states' hands and made one of federal regulation, in which they are joined by officials in the states that have already taken action, as well as in a number of commonwealths where nothing has yet been determined upon

The quarantine order contemplated by the board is very wide in scope, and, according to Chairman Marlatt, was purposely made in order that today's meeting might bring out every possible point. It is probable, he told those present, that the order as issued will not include such a wide variety of plants, or cover so much territory, as proposed. The quarantine order covers all of New England, New York and Pennsylvania, and affects not only corn and broom corn, but cut flowers or entire plants of glodiolus and dahlia, excepting the bulbs without stems, other herbaceous plants, the cut flowers and entire plants of chrysanthemum, aster, cosmos, zinnia, hollyhock and celery, green or string beans in the pod, beets with tops, spinach and rhubarb, and oat and rye straw.

Recommends Quarantine Limits.

Following the conclusion of Dr. Marlatt's preliminary remarks, D. J. Caffrey, of the bureau of entomology of the department of agriculture, outlined the history in this country of the corn borer. He recommended that the quarantine order should be limited to the sections in which the insect is already settled, in the belief that it can be coped with successfully without affecting areas not yet infested. He declared that the insect does not travel from one section to another, but must be introduced in some product from a section already infested. Because of the fact that it is introduced into new sections in this way, he said it would be possible to handle the badly infested areas by field inspections, with certificates permitting shipment to be given to growers whose premises were found to be free from infestation. The withholding of the certificates, he declared, would result in other growers cleaning up their premises, so as to be able to make shipments.

Massachusetts Situation.

How seriously the florists of New England would be affected, was indicated by L. H. Worthly, of Boston, Mass., who is in charge of the clean-up work in his state. The Boston market alone, he told the board, ships each year more than a million asters, a million chrysanthemums and a half million gladioli. About one-third of the shipments are made to Canada, he said, and in making up these shipments, it is frequently necessary to mix stocks received from various sections, among them the stock from infested districts in Connecticut and Rhode Island. He declared that, in his opinion, it would be possible to inspect cut flowers in the flower markets with excellent results, as the borer could readily be detected in the stems. This would be better than any other method, he declared, as it has been discovered that the insect is not found throughout the entire section it is known to infest. This is due to the fact that some growers keep their places clean, and the borer has no chance to get a footing.

The Society of American Florists was represented by William F. Gude, Washington, D. C., who urged upon the board the promulgation of regulations with which it would be easy to comply. No steps that would injure the industry should be taken, he pointed out, and promised the full cooperation of his organization in the enforcement of any quarantine issued.

From the state of Connecticut came a number of requests for exemption. The exemption of the state as a whole from quarantine was asked by W. E. Britton, state entomologist, and Chas. R. Treat, of the state board of agriculture, who urged that orders be limited to the territory actually infested. Mr. Britton also asked the exemption of rye straw, which is largely used by nurserymen in his state for wrapping goods for shipment, declaring that most of it is grown by the users on their own land, and is frequently held for two or three years before being used.

Asks Chrysanthemum Exemption.

The exemption of chrysanthemums was asked by Wallace R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn. He declared that his plants are rooted in sand, and stated that he had produced more than one and a quarter million rooted cuttings and about a half million in pots last year. He asked that chrysanthemums in pots of two and a half inches or less, shipped not later than June 1, be exempted from the order. Consideration of chrysanthemums was also asked by Isaac S. Hendrickson, of John Lewis Childs, Inc., Flowerfield, N. Y., who asked the exemption of Long Island from the state of New York, because of the fact that it is entirely surrounded by water.

Cooperation, added Mr. Pierson, between the growers, the states and the board, would be the best way of handling this question, which is rapidly growing more important. He joined in Mr. Caffery's recommendation that certificates be given clean places, declaring that educational methods would in the end prove more valuable than any other, and result in less loss to the trade.

Seed Corn.

Growers of seed corn in Connecticut and along Long Island Sound are vitally interested in this question, according to F. W. Bolgiano, of Washington, D. C., who represented the American Seed Trade Association, and Fred M. Clark, of the Everett B. Clark Seed Co., Milford, Conn. The inclusion of Connecticut in quarantine orders, the board was told, would result in much unfavorable advertising that might seriously affect the industry. The question of unfavorable notoriety was also brought up by A. M. Merlbert, Massachusetts College of Agriculture, who declared that steps should be taken to allay the prejudice against New England's products that is growing as a result of the rumors that have been current regarding the great spread and danger of the insect. He asked that the board issue quarantine orders, modeled along the lines of the Massachusetts regulations, which conserve the interests of growers. He also asked that the shelled corn for seed be exempt.

Speaking for the New England Nurserymen's Association, John K. M. L. Farquhar, of Boston, declared that the members of his organization are in favor of the issuance of permits to growers having clean premises, and that they desire to be able to ship chrysanthemums in small pots, rooted in sand. He pointed out that the plants do not have stems favorable to the growth of the corn borer, and inspection also would be simple, as had been suggested by Mr. Caffery. Although a large percentage of stems on chrysanthemum plants in a number of greenhouses inspected, were found to be infested, said Mr. Caffery, in speaking again on this subject, there was no knowledge as to how they had become infested. The first intimation that this plant was affected by the insect, he said, was upon the receipt of reports from growers which led to the investigations. Representatives of those interested in Maryland, New Jersey and other states, not yet affected by the corn borer, also appeared for the purpose of urging the issuance of the federal regulations. These states, it was declared, had been protected against all possibility of infestation, and it was pointed out that unless a government order is issued, it is probable that the state authorities will take the matter up and issue regulations far more drastic and difficult to comply with than those suggested by the board.

Considerable disappointment was expressed at the failure of growers in Michigan, Indiana, Wisconsin and other western states, where state orders have been issued, to appear at the hearing. It had been hoped that those states would be represented by men who could tell what effect the local regulations had, and what results were being attained.

PROMINENT FIGURES IN THE PLANT QUARANTINE HEARINGS.

The Japanese Beetle.

Garden and horticultural products from uninfested sections of New Jersey will not be affected by any quarantine orders issued by the federal horticultural board in its campaign against the Japanese beetle, according to information secured today. While the order has not yet been issued, it is understood that it will follow closely the quarantine regulations already promulgated by the state. Inspection and the issuance of certificates for products found to be all right will permit of the movement of stock from sections where the beetle has been found to occur, while no restriction will be placed upon the movement of products from free areas.

Growers who appeared before the board at its hearing some days ago, declared that the state regulations were sufficient to cope with the beetle, inasmuch as it had not invaded the houses and could not live under the conditions existing in greenhouses. The soil used in the houses, it was pointed out, comes from uninfested areas and is carefully treated before being used, so as to prevent any possibility of the entrance of the beetle.

So successfully did they present their case that the board has been convinced that the state order is sufficient, especially as those present declared their willingness fully to comply with the state regulations.

Plant Growth Measurement.

London, Jan. 31.—In the reading room at the India office, before a large audience, Sir Jagadis Chandra Bose of India, who recently told of giving trees an anaesthetic, showed some remarkable discoveries in the analogy between plants and animals.

"There is a pulsation in certain plant tissues which with animals is heartbeat," he said. "Identical effects are caused by stimulants and poisons in animals and vegetables, and in the death spasm which occurs in both."

Referring to the diffiulty in recording these "incessant throbbings" in the apparently perfectly still plant, he stated that "the sluggish movement of a snail is about 6,000 times faster than the movement of growth in a plant, the average rate of which is one millionth part of an inch per second."

The crescograph (the name of his invention) would show the snail moving with a speed of 200,000,000 feet per hour.

Sir Jagadis, having graphically described his vast magnification, picked a leaf from a pot plant of cyclamen and placed it on the magnetic needle of the crescograph. From the mirror attached to the needle a spot of light appeared at once on the screen and moved backward and forward across the latter at a rate of 10 feet in 12 seconds.

PLANT NOTES.

Spiraeas.

The spiræas are always a very useful plant at Easter, but they are classed among the cheaper plants at that time, so should be grown in such a way that they do not occupy valuable space any more than necessary. They should be brought into a cool house by the middle of January and until the foliage begins to grow can be placed along the edge of the walks if room is not available, but they must not be left standing in this location too long, for when the leaves begin to unfold they quickly draw toward the light and a plant growing to one side of the pot will be the result. So as soon as growth starts they should be placed on the bench in full light. They can be grown quite close together for some time, but when the foliage begins to touch that of the plant beside it they should be spaced out and given room enough for the plants to grow shapely. Spiræas require a large quantity of water during their entire culture, especially those that are potted in as small a pot as possible, which is the general custom with all growers. To make the large specimens, two or three clumps are planted in the same pot when started. These will make large plants for church decorations at Easter. If the plants are grown in a house which is to be fumigated by tobacco smoke they should either be removed from the house or well covered with papers; the foliage quickly burns when subjected to tobacco smoke and the plants are blemished.

Hydrangeas.

The greatest demand for hydrangeas is in May and June, and to have them in the best condition at that time the plants should be started before March 1. While they may be started later and forced harder, yet the plants so grown are not as sturdy and do not give so good satisfaction after they are placed on the porches. Start the plants in a cool house and if the wood has become dry in their winter quarters frequent syringing will assist in softening it. When they begin to grow do not crowd them. Crowding and too much heat are the principal causes of the long, ungainly plants so often seen. If they are grown in a cool house, with plenty of room, the plants will be sturdy and short-jointed, covered with beautiful foliage and shapely, and are a great ornament, which surely cannot be said of the tall plants with small foliage and bare stems toward the base. When the plants begin to grow rapidly they will require plenty of water, and during the warm, sunny days of spring, when the houses are hot, all the ventilation possible, and at this time watch carefully for red spider, which gather in great numbers on the young growths and blooms and quickly spoil them. If they appear, syringe heavily until they are overcome. Keep the plants staked and tied as soon as required.

Cannas.

One of the most decorative beds for summer, especially if it is of large size, is a bed of blooming cannas, for they are very showy and will flower throughout the summer until frost cuts them down, and the varieties have been greatly improved during the last decade. To make the best showing the plants should be started early enough to have good, strong stock at bedding-out time in May and June. The plants should be started by March 1 and now is the time to procure stock of varieties of which the grower is short or which he has not on hand. The clumps when removed from the winter storage should have all the old soil shaken off, the dried up stalk and roots cut away. They are then cut up into small pieces and if the stock is plentiful two or three eyes can be left to each piece, but where stock is short they are cut up to single eyes, although with single eyes many weak plants will be produced. Often the clumps have started into growth and where this has happened the eyes should be sorted, those already started being planted together and the dormant eyes by themselves. Have boxes all ready and place an inch of soil on the bottom and then place the divisions on this closely together and cover with light, sifted soil and then water thoroughly. Keep the varieties separate and properly labeled, each box to contain but one variety and the name plainly marked on the box, for labels are often lost or misplaced. Place the boxes in a warm location—where hot water heating is used they can be placed on the return pipes. In two or three weeks the plants will have made sufficient roots to be placed in 3½ or 4-inch pots, when they can be grown on in a house with a temperature of 50° to 60°. In planting cannas outside it should always be remembered that they are very tender and should not be set out until all danger of late frost is past.

Early Annuals.

During the warm days of June the carnations deteriorate very rapidly and there is often a great need for some flower to take their place and an early bench of asters is a great boon at such a time, especially for those who have a good call for funeral work. Seed planted during February and grown in pots or flats until after Easter can be then transplanted to the benches in which the Easter crops are grown and they will be in bloom at the time when most desired. A good strain of early flowering varieties, either Comet or Victoria, should be selected and with good care a paying crop is assured. A sowing of candytuft by March 1 will also produce plants that can be benched after Easter in the same manner and a good cut for Memorial day be had. The strains of White Giant candytuft now offered make splendid spikes for the filling in of sprays at that great flower day. There are many annuals that can be grown for early spring blooming that are greatly apreciated by the trade, among which might be mentioned calendulas, nasturtiums, scabiosa, sweet sultans and bachelor's buttons.

Dahlias.

The forcing of early dahlias has been practiced successfully by growers the last few years, and roots started at this time will produce flowers for Memorial day and during June. A good, deep bench, in a house not too warm, should be selected, and while the plants are great feeders in the open ground, it is better not to have the soil too rich in the houses, for the plants grow very tall inside, and with a rich soil make a strong, rampant growth, which will not bloom as early. They can be fed when the buds begin to form by giving them a mulch of half-decayed manure, which will materially assist the flowering and also provide a covering that will prevent evaporation. They will require but little attention except that long, strong stakes will be necessary to keep the plants growing erect, to which they should be firmly tied, and then disbudded to produce the better blooms. Any varieties of which it is desired to increase the stock can be planted in the house and the young growths made into cuttings, which root easily at this time.

TUMBLER BASKET OF POMPON DAHLIAS.

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

As the winter passes on, and the days lengthen out, the supply of flowers, which by this time was expected to be sufficient to meet all demands, has increased but little. The second week in Lent, the dull period of the winter, is here with but slight change in the situation, the only quantity flowers being sweet peas, without which the trade would certainly be in a bad way. However, we must make the best of it, as such conditions cannot last much longer. The sweet pea growers say that the height of the crop will be about the middle of March, increasing from now on, and lasting until after Easter, with later houses well into the spring.

Spring flowers should now be kept to the front; pans of tulips, daffodils and hyacinths are in good supply, and if featured, will find ready sale. Primula obconica is now at its best. With its wealth of bloom, it is very showy and sure to attract attention. Suggest boxes of spring flowers as gifts, as in the various quantities and quality selections there is something to meet the purse of almost every buyer.

The mainstay of the business is flowers for funerals, for which, in the past two years, the demand has been phenomenal. It is astonishing, that in this time, nothing new in arrangement has appeared. Wreaths and sprays form at least 75 per cent of the selections, with pillows, crosses, baskets and the rest making up the balance. The high level of prices maintained throughout this period, has taught many a lesson that they should profit by, and that is, that people will pay good prices. Customers judge qualities by the price, and when they believe that certain flowers by the dozen, or arranged pieces, are worth the prices asked for them, they pay and are satisfied. It is now up to the retailers to try and maintain, to a degree, this greater valuation by giving better service and keeping their shops and stocks up to a higher standard than ever before. By every means in their power, they should try to make plants and flowers more popular. Suggestion has much to do with this propaganda. Keep before the people, that the birthday gift should be flowers, that obligations for attentions received, are best paid in something from the flower shop. There is nothing to so gladden and bring cheer to the sick room of the friend at home or in the hospital, as a blooming plant or cut flowers.

It is but five weeks until Easter, the greatest floral holiday of the year, and every spare moment should be given to preparing for this event, which will surely be the greatest in the history of the business. Right now is the time for those who have not already done so, to make up their list of plants, and place their orders with the growers. Prices will not go down; the tendency is still upward, and with the scarcity in some lines, there is no time to lose. There is great satisfaction, as the time draws near, in knowing that the stock has been secured.

The florists' supply men will be glad at this time to give your selection of plant baskets a distinct coloring that will have time to get hard and dry, and which, when in the store, you can experiment with to good purpose by filling in various combinations, and showing them as advance samples of your Easter stock.

Get out your Easter circulars. It is best to be ready for mailing ahead of time, which is another relief as the time draws near. Look up the newspaper advertising. Like all other publicity, it costs more, but it pays, if done right. Specials should be featured, things that people will want to come and see. Not one word about higher prices; extol the quality, and the cost will then seem in proportion.

Keep the F. T. D. idea to the front. It is growing fast. The association is sending out some very good literature that should be of great help, if well circulated through one's trade. When the people get to know what can be done in this quick interstate delivery of flowers, it will become, as it is even now with the live ones, a great source of new and profitable business.

Meeting Present Conditions.

The peculiar circumstances attending the transaction of the business in the flower shop at this time, have, on account of the scarcity of flowers and their extremely high prices, brought about a situation that is puzzling the best of them. For the past 18 months or so, it has practically been a seller's market, with the demand growing, and finally greatly exceeding the supply, until in the past three months, the shortage has become very acute, and without doubt, a great detriment to the business. There have been many reasons advanced, prominent among which were the high prices of everything that pertained to the growing of cut flowers, such as labor, coal, materials, and then the elements were made to take a large portion of the blame, too much or not enough rain during the summer, and the great lack of sunshine in the winter months. While all these causes are not without foundation, it is pointed out that weather conditions average up much the same one year with another, and men who have gvien the question serious thought, believe the main trouble to be under production. They point out that since the breaking out of the European war, the erection of commercial greenhouses has been very greatly curtailed, while the demand for plants and flowers which fell off slightly at first, is now greater than ever before, with but a half to a two-thirds production to meet it. Wholesale prices have advanced to unheard of figures, which have then been passed on to the buying public, who accept with but little protest, and come back for more.

Growers have suddenly awakened to the fact that the great demand is not just a flash in the pan, but a new condition brought about by the prosperity of the people, and greenhouse builders are fairly swamped with orders, giving preference to old customers and putting the new ones off until next year.

It is now generally conceded that it will be a long time before prices will return, if ever, to the level of those existing before the war. Conditions made it imperative that increased revenues were absolutely necessary, while the great demand raised and maintained a much higher level of values than ever before experienced. The retail florists, the men who have the final distribution of the stock, are a great factor in the business, and should meet the situation with courage, and it does take courage to ask a customer $4.00 to $5.00, or more a dozen for roses that he usually bought for $1.50 or $2. Carnations jumped from $1.50 to $4 and even $5 a dozen, and even then, there was not enough to meet the demand. Callas, selling at $5 a dozen, wholesale, is a price that growers never even dreamed of. These are just a few instances, the whole list being proportionately high.

Retailing under the present wholesale range of prices must be conducted with the greatest care, particularly in the handling and sale of cut flowers. In the first place, every salesperson should be instructed to meet customers and give prices with as much confidence as when they were one-half or two-thirds less. To announce a price, and then try to bolster it up with explanations, is very poor salesmanship. The fact that some complain that flowers are too high, and walk out without purchasing, is nothing; people are continually doing that, when they are most plentiful and cheap.

Good salesmen will immediately size up their visitor, and play the game to win. The first inquiry will give them a cue, and they can then offer their various items of stock that meet the customer's ideas as to price. Three to six roses can be sold to take the place of a dozen, if, with a little green, they are shown how prettily they arrange in a vase. Blooming plants, singly, or arranged in baskets, can be substituted for cut flowers. The visit to the store is to make a purchase of something in plants or flowers, and it is the business of the salesman to find out, without directly asking, what the flowers or gift is to be used for, and about what it was expected to cost. The great majority of purchasers do not have a definite idea of just what they want, and their minds can be turned to almost anything that is well presented. At times, they have come determined that the roses must be red, but as there are none on hand, they can be persuaded that pink is the correct shade, and go away satisfied at having bought just what they wanted.

Buying should be done with the greatest foresight; even at this time of great scarcity, it is possible to use discretion and profit thereby. Flowers to be used for funerals, should, whenever possible, be kept in stock until at their best. They are to last but a few hours, and the same or a better effect can be made with one-third less roses, if they are fully opened than if only half are in bloom or in bud. Choice tasseled fern fronds or other fancy foliage can be made to take the place of the more expensive flowers and produce just as good, or perhaps, a better showing.

The well made wreath of almost every kind of leaf foundation, which can be carried in stock, is at once ready for decorating with any available flower and requires from a half to two-thirds less to produce an artistic piece, that is quite the equal, if not superior, to one of all flowers.

While flowering plants have also cost more to produce, they appear greater value for the money than cut flowers, and as they last longer, are, for the dealer, not so great a risk. They also give a decorative effect to the store or window that has an advertising value which is well worth considering.

For all important orders, secure or engage stock immediately the booking is made. It is then up to your dealer with this advance notice, to see that you get the flowers on time. Waiting until the day before often leads to very unsatisfactory results. Carry a stock that is always a little ahead of the demand. Do not be afraid to ask a good profit. People are always satisfied with the price if they feel they are getting good value. Make a bid for the business and it will come to you.

THE CARNATION.

Care of Young Stock.

The results to be obtained from the mature carnation plant during its season of productiveness depends so largely on the care that is given the young plants in the early stages of their existence that it is very important that the grower give this part of the work his closest attention, especially at this time, when the cuttings are being transferred from the propagating bed to pots or flats. It is not luck by any manner of means that a grower has his plants in the best of shape and productiveness at this time when the prices of carnation blooms are high and in good demand, but it is because extra pains were taken to see that the plants received the closest attention from the time they left the propagating bench as rooted cuttings, and throughout their entire season of growth. I am firmly convinced that it pays to give the young plants the best of care, with the aim in view of having for planting out in the field the last of April or early in May, strong, well-branched bushy plants, and when the bench room was available, would go to the extreme of shifting the plants up into 3 or 3½-inch pots to obtain as strong vigorous plants as possible.

Figure up your requirements for the season, then arrange for the full number of cuttings to be on hand as soon as possible so that the stock of plants will measure up to an even grade throughout, which is a very important factor toward successful benches of plants next winter, the average production of a bench of plants of even size being considerably higher than is realized without a tabulated return of the blooms cut from such a bench, and one containing plants of a wide range of propagation. Every effort should be put forth to get all the cuttings of carnations in the sand before March 1. It is getting late now for them to make good plants in time for field planting, and from now on, the condition of the cuttings is not as good for propagating, and every few days the work is put off, makes it so much the more difficult to get a successful stand of rooted cuttings.

The young plants must not be forced in any way whatsoever, either by high temperature or by rich soil. The best plan is to grow them along as naturally as possible, using a fresh, medium soil, give them a light bench with a night temperature of 50 degrees with an advance of four to six degrees in the daytime and ample ventilation on every favorable occasion.

Watering of the young plants in the early stages of their growth is very often overdone by many growers, and though the young stock may not show any ill effects of it for some time, yet it has a tendency to cause long, wiry roots instead of branching, fibrous ones. The plants should receive water when needed, but the soil at the roots should never be allowed to remain extremely wet and become stagnant.

As soon as the cuttings have become rooted, take them from the propagating bed before they lengthen out and the roots get hard and wiry. As the cuttings are taken from the sand, dip the roots in clean water to wash the sand from them, then pot up and place away on their bench quarters. Shade a little if the weather is very bright, and keep a trifle close for a few days to give the roots a chance to take hold of the fresh soil. After the freshly potted cuttings are set on the bench, water them in well, after which allow the soil to dry out to a moderate degree before watering again, and be sure not to allow draughts or currents of cold air to play on the young plants.

The general routine care of the plants after potting should be carefully followed out. Water and air when necessary, and remove any weeds that may appear in the soil. Regular fumigations about every two or three weeks should be carried on. Also, pay particular attention to topping back the growth as quickly as they are in need of it. Whenever any of the young plants are in need of repotting, attend to them so that there will not be any chance for them to become rootbound and hard.

CARE OF FLOWERING PLANTS.

The carnation plants on the benches that are producing the blooms should be given the closest attention and the general routine work of their care must be carried out in every detail to enable the plants to keep up their steady production. If the plants are to continue blooming to the end of the season, they must not be stripped too closely of shoots for cuttings. It harms the blooms that are now in sight, as well as curtails the future crop.

Watch the disbudding closely and cut every bloom as soon as it is ready. At this season of the year, the stems stretch up very quickly, and unless they are placed in the wires before they get very long, they are very apt to become crooked.

Where the roots are showing through the surface of the soil, it will benefit the plants greatly to put on a mulch of equal parts of half-rotted manure and fresh soil. Do not spread it too thick; just enough to evenly cover the surface is plenty. Do not let there be any neglect in attending to the watering, temperature, and keeping the plants free from insects.

Jane's Advantage.

On the last day of school, I gave our neighbor's small boy a bouquet of flowers to take to his teacher. On returning home from school I said to him, "Well, Tommy, did you give your teacher the flowers?"

He replied: "No, ma'am, I met Jane and she looked better to me than the teacher, so I gave them to her." Chicago Tribune.

HARRISBURG, PA.—State horticulturists believe they have isolated the rose beetle which has caused thousands of dollars' of damage throughout the state in rose growing establishments.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—At the February meeting of the Rochester Rose Society, to which the public was invited, the feature of the evening was the address of President Edmund Mills on "Roses for the Home Garden." His talk, illustrated by lantern slides, was very entertaining and instructive.

National Publicity for Flowers.

Letters, such as the following, are gratefully appreciated by our publicity committee: "Bloomington, Ill., February 17, 1920. John Young, secretary. Dear Sir—Your statement for $50 to cover our 1920 pledge to the publicity fund is at hand. We are making our cheque $100, both because we think it is a good investment, and is an expression of our appreciation of the work the committee is doing for the good of the cause. . . . The greatest good will come in a year or two, or three from now, when production more nearly catches up with the demand.—A. Washburn & Sons."

A few carping critics have seen fit to question the wisdom of launching our campaign at the time we did. Results have proved that such launching was the greatest and most beneficial move ever made in the history of the florists' trade. To imagine that a continuance of the campaign because of an apparent shortage of flowers is an unwise step is wrong. What has caused the shortage, if not demand? There are as many growing establishments as ever, and, as far as is known, practically everyone is going at full tilt. At any rate, there are no more idle than is always the case. Has any particular glut been recorded since the campaign started? Was not every market bothered with periodical gluts before we became active with our publicity movement? The Washburns are right. The greatest good will come later on. Demand will not be allowed to exceed supply for long. Production is already increasing, and, naturally, will continue to increase. We must expect it, and we must prepare for it.

In spite of increased labor cost, and advanced cost of materials, have growers ever enjoyed as good returns for their products as they have of late? Yet the growers as a class have not supported our campaign to the extent expected of them. They evidently have not given our movement the serious thought it surely deserves. They have been content to profit through the better movement of their products brought about by the campaign, without contributing to the expense of the work. Surely the subscriptions from growers should be on a par with those from other sections of the trade.

The campaign can be active only so long as those who are to be benefited will share in the expense. Subscriptions certainly are not coming in as they should, and it is rather unfair that those who last year so generously pledged themselves to meet a goodly portion of the campaign expense this year should be allowed to finance the movement within a limit necessarily determined by the fund available? With the great number of florists to share in the benefits it should not be difficult to carry the funds to the amount required by the committee, $100,000. Is this such a very great sum to raise among 20,000 members of the trade? Assure yourself, Mr. Nonsubscriber, that it is not, and send in your cheque for the amount you think right for you to subscribe—or had one not better say, invest.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Are You Creating Influence?

We have in our business today, many men who are factors in creating optimism and influence by their generous endeavors. Some, by their manner of service, to do good to the trade, such as serving on committees in their local clubs or organizations; others, who are florists by day, but men also when away from their work, who are affiliating with other lines of work, semi-philanthropic and otherwise, get a great deal of pleasure in their outside activities. I would not give a snap of my finger for a man who could not go through life and feel that he is doing something for others to help make this a better world to live in. We have many men in our line, who are doing these things all the time, and who feel the pleasure it gives them inwardly for so doing, and peculiarly it is the greatest kind of pleasure—that little feeling that comes over you from doing something that is helping others.

This type of man is also the kind that has been helping our campaign fund, and his knowledge of helping others, has often helped him unconsciously to the extent of making him feel better and doing a better day's work because he has done his duty, and also made his influence more felt by so doing.

The best satisfaction comes from doing things, and we have every reason to feel proud of past achievements of the S. A. F. the last two years. We want our campaign fund to have on its roster the name of every man in the craft, so that its influence will be felt by all. Make "Say it With Flowers" a still more popular slogan. Your committee has its plans; it only needs your contribution. Watch the reaction.

GOOD DEMAND AT HIGH PRICES.

From all quarters, nothing but the best reports are heard as to the condition of business. Many more roses could be used if they were not in such short supply. High prices are being maintained for all arrivals. American Beauties are now very fine. The small amount of Russells coming in do not last very long. The influenza epidemic is making an extraordinary demand for all funeral stock. Carnations never brought higher prices in the wholesale market at this time of the year. The supply is large, but it sells out quickly every morning. Sweet peas have droped out a little this week and are not so plentiful. No outdoor stock has put in appearance as yet. Freesias are holding up well in price. The demand for them is heavy and all stock arriving is quickly sold out. There is a large supply of violets and they are coming in handy for cheap flowers for funeral work. The shipping demand for these is keeping up steadily. The orchid supply is now at its height and large displays are now being made at all the stores. Gardenias are not very plentiful, but are not missed greatly while the orchid supply lasts. Tulips are coming in slowly, and are wholesaling at $1.50 per dozen. There was a fine lot of flowering plants offered for St. Valentine's day. The demand seemed to run to cyclamens mostly. Some fine pink and white azaleas arrived, and sold out quickly. Dutch hyacinths in pans were great favorites. There is a brisk demand for acacias for basket and other decorative work. Ferns are very scarce, and very little asparagus is to be had at any price.

NOTES.

Fred Bertrand, manager of the Powell street store of the MacRorie-McLaren Company, has received his final patents on a combination shears and rose stripper. With one stroke, this invention strips all the thorns of cut roses, and owing to the ease and rapidity with which it may be operated, will no doubt become a necessary adjunct of every flower store in the country. It will be placed on the market very shortly.

The Art Floral Company arranged a novel window for three days representing a tropical jungle with orchids growing everywhere in the trees and branches. A three-month old leopard roamed at will through the foliage, lending a very realistic aspect, and drawing great throngs to the window.

Domoto Bros. report a brisk demand for their new double hydrangea, which they have named Hydrangea Demotoii. They were awarded a gold medal for this novelty at the Panama-Pacific Exposition in 1915. They also report the Evergreen Wistaria to be another aspirant for popular favor.

The E. W. McLellan Co. is receiving a great cut of American Beauty roses from their San Lorenzo greenhouses. The quality is very fine, and they are a welcome addition to our daily supply, which is so short at present.

The flower store formerly owned by Henry Mohr at 2667 Mission street, is now the property of Krose Bros. They will carry a large assortment of flowering plants and seeds in conjunction with their floral business.

H. Plath is supplying this market with the finest lot of pot grown Dutch hyacinths seen in several years. Ferns and fine bulbs are grown to the pan and the stock wholesales for $12 per dozen.

John R. Sievers, well known to the trade in this city, will open up a new store shortly at Geary and Larkin streets. He was formerly manager of the J. B. Boland store on Kearny street.

Joseph Scatena has purchased the entire season's cut of one of the leading daffodil growers at San Lorenzo. He intends to develop this business much more thoroughly next year.

G. Rossi & Co. are sending in much of the fine azalea and rhoddendron stock that is noted this week. This stock is all grown at their greenhouses at Colma.

Work on the new store of B. Avensino, on Geary street, is rapidly nearing completion and it is expected that it will be ready for occupany March 1.

Leslie E. Doolittle, proprietor of Doolittle's Dahlia Gardens, at Del Monte, says there is a strong demand for dahlia roots this season.

The Cypress Lawn Cemetery Flower Shop has opened an office at 995 Market street, in the Hewes' building.

M. H. Ebel, of Sacramento, was in town during the week, calling upon his growers.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. report business running far ahead of last year.

JAMES T. LYNCH.

Washington Florists' Club.

The Alexandria greenhouses of David J. Grillbortzer, of the Washington Floral Company, will be the scene, February 28, of a celebration of the results of the flower week compaign. Having a tidy little sum left in the treasury, the flower week committee has decided to stage an oyster roast, and local florists will leave their places of business early that day so as to be in time for the "big eats" and the bigger entertainment that is to follow.

J. Harper Hetherington, a member of the finance committee of the flower week campaign, is in charge of arrangements, and has promised to furnish an entertainment programme that will be the talk of the town for some time to come.

ST. VALENTINE SALES SHOW BIG GAIN.

St. Valentine's day business set a new high record. In many lines, the cleanup of stock held down a still greater volume of possible sales. Heavy funeral work of late has also served to keep the counters clean so there was little carryover for the event and orders for the following day were hard to fill in consequence. Freesia have saved the day on numerous occasions, being used in combinations that only necessity could have originated. Customers, however, were well satisfied. Newspaper advertising was used freely with good results and the publicity of the national campaign and the slogan, "Say It With Flowers," must be given great credit. The local cuts of roses are largely off crop and the same is true of carnations. California shipments, also, are not all that could be desired. A good supply of violets is maintained by vigilance. Tulips, freesias, jonquils, etc., are in good demand. Sweet peas continue to arrive from the north in large quantities. Pot offerings and fancy baskets proved good St. Valentine's day property. With one firm, pot lily of the valley was a popular feature.

NOTES.

William Goldberry, of Kenney's Home of Flowers, handled table decorations for the recent masquerade at the Sunset club. Tulips were used as centerpieces. Because of the better quality of the stock, tulips have been probably the best single seller of late, Portland supplying a part of this demand.

The Ballard Flower Shop carried on a special advertising by mail campaign just before St. Valentine's day, urging that residents use the small shop in their district for floral gfts, and reports a notable increase in the business as compared with that for the same holiday a year ago.

Influenza continues in the ranks of local florists' salesforces. Among those still confined is Fred H. Rowe, of McCoy's, while E. R. Peterson, of The Hollywood Gardens, George Rosaia and P. J. Case, of Rosaia Bros., have returned to work after a week's layoff.

The Holly Flower Shop, unable to secure a satisfactory location at a reasonable rental, has discontinued business. F. Hagerman has taken up landscaping and has several good orders under contract. C. Clark has retired to his ranch near this city.

A most effective window was used by the Hollywood Gardens on St. Valentine's day. A large heart was made of pussy-willows, acacias and greens, and centered on this were two intertwined hearts of pink carnations and roses.

C. S. McManus, of the Madison Park Greenhouses, has been featuring small pot ferns to good effect of late. The so-called "Holly" fern has been especially popular, and a good retail demand has been built up.

C. L. Mattson has opened a flower shop and nursery at Bremerton, near this city, the home port of the Pacific fleet. He reports a good call for cut flowers of all kinds.

Felix Rosaia devoted both display windows to tulips, daffodils and jonquils one day last week, and found this helped to catch the eye of most customers.

Rosaia Bros. had the order for the decorations at an elaborate society wedding at the New Washington hotel last week.

C. H. Baer, Georgetown grower, is planning on an increase in his range shortly to care for the growing local business.

Harry Crouch, of the Woodlawn Flower Shop, sums up the St. Valentine's day trade in that shop as "almost Christmas."

NO SURPLUS AND PRICES FIRM.

The market has been somewhat easier the past week, with an increased supply, and a demand a little smaller than it has been. Still, there has been no surplus, and prices, with a few exceptions, remain the same. The influenza is on the decline, and the number of deaths is much smaller, thus causing a falling off in funeral work, giving some of the florists who have been working day and night, a chance to get some much needed rest. The supply of roses is on the increase, especially in the medium and shorter grades. There are no American Beauties arriving to speak of, but they are not missed, as Premier, Russell and Columbia are of fine quality and florists are using one or the other of these varieties. The supply of carnations is also larger, and an improvement is also noted in the quality. Easter lilies and callas are still scarce, and sell on sight at high prices. One item that has helped out the local market was an extra large cut of freezia; in fact, it has been a long time since this market has handled so many of this popular flower. The supply of Paper Whites and tulips has fallen off, while jonquils are on the increase. White lilac has been very popular this season, and is usually all sold before arrival. The supply of sweet peas is increasing rapidly, but as yet there has been no surplus, in fact, it has been impossible to fill orders completely. Yellow daisies, calendulas and baby primroses are arriving in limited amounts, and move without any trouble. The supply of greens of all kinds has been short, but a heavier supply is looked for from now on. All the florists of this district report that February will be one of the largest months in their history; with only three weeks of the month gone, they are away ahead of the full month of last year.

NOTES.

Tuesday evening, February 17, Miss Marion Langhans, daughter of T. P. Langhans, of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., and Robert L. Thompson, Jr., of Ben Avon, Pa., were united in marriage at the bride's home in Perrysville avenue, North Side. The decorations were carried out with southern smilax, fancy decorative plants and spring flowers. The bride carried a bouquet of white orchids, lilacs and lily of the valley, while the matron of honor and bridesmaids bouquets were composed of lilacs, heather, pussy willows, snapdragons and pink roses, caught with blue ribbons. After an extended trip to Cuba, Mr. and Mrs. Thompson will live in Brighton road, Ben Avon, Pa.

In addition to their new Detroit branch, the McCallum Company has opened a branch store on High street, Cleveland, Ohio. James McLaughlin, one of the best known wholesale men in the country, is in charge of the new venture. In addition to handling cut flowers at wholesale, the new branch will also handle florists' supplies; in fact, everything that a florist needs and uses in his business. M.

STRONG DEMAND FOR LIMITED SUPPLY.

Business has been eminently satisfactory in this city recently, the only drawback being the shortage of stock. The weather has remained unusually cloudy, and the maturing of flowers of all kinds has been retarded by the unfavorable conditions.

LAFAYETTE STATE MEETING ABANDONED.

The State Florists' Association of Indiana abandoned its efforts to hold a late February meeting at Lafayette, both because of pressure of business, and the inability of F. Dorner & Sons Co., to accommodate the visitors at this time. The regular meeting, accordingly, will be held, March 2, at the quarters of the Smith & Young Company. The chief order of business will be discussion of plans for the entertainment of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery in the fall. Irwin Bertermann was named chairman of the committee, with authority to select the other members. Mr. Bertermann, however, has been somewhat under the weather, and he decided to hold over that business until the regular monthly meeting of the association.

NOTES.

Bertermann Brothers Company was the representative of the flower trade at the Optimist Industrial Show, held at Tomlinson hall February 17-21. Like the Rotary Club, the Optimists are made up of one member from each line of endeavor, Irwin Bertermann being the florist on the roster. A number of members connected with the building industry united to construct and display a model home at the show, and Bertermann Brothers provided the landscape work for the house, which, while in minature, was sufficiently large to make a highly favorable impression on the public and bring out the points the florists wished to emphasize. The landscape work on the model home apparently proved much more desirable, from the advertising point of view, than merely exhibiting a few flowers.

SUPPLY SHOWS MATERIAL INCREASE.

There is now a marked change in trade conditions, contrasted with the previous weeks, when flowers of all kinds were scarce and high priced, and an eager public seeking them, but often with resentment yielding to what they regarded the exorbitant demands of florists, who in self-defense exacted prices never before realized for the same items in the list of available stock. Now, with the advancement of the season, and longer and brighter days, the cut from most ranges has materially increased, and correspondingly, the death list is not half as long as it was constantly for the past eight weeks, and automatically this branch of the retailers' output is suffering. But now, let us hope it is only temporary. The spirit which usually prompts our friends to "Say it With Flowers" is dormant, and simply because of the idea that is now unfortunately prevalent, that prices of flowers are excessive. The business for St. Valentine's day would have been much larger, had not the public been saturated with fear to approach florists' shops. One could hear it on street cars, in office buildings, elevators, and everywhere the subject of flowers was referred to. Active publicity work, which is to be taken up energetically at once, will endeavor to first dissipate the idea of high prices, and once more restore in popular favor the flowers we now have most plentiful and never before seen in finer quality. Roses, carnations, sweet peas, and violets, are now so plentiful that forced sales at low prices even fail to consume satisfactorily. Bulbous stock in pots and pans are now in the stores, in the finest array, and these too are now offered at greatly reduced prices, but their movement is slow. An attempt was made by some shops to inject some spirit in Washington's birthday trade by offering choice examples of red, white and blue combination growing plants, appropriately trimmed, but only partial recognition resulted.

NOTES.

Robt. Plumb, in his capacity as secretary of the Michigan State Florists' Association, visited East Lansing last week. He stayed two days planning with J. A. Bissinger, chairman of the local committee, for an exhibition of flowers and plants to be held in connection with the first annual meeting of that association to be held there, March 16-17.

A. J. Stahelin, who was forced to reduce the temperature of his rose houses, due to the scarcity of coal, has now on hand a supply sufficient to justify the necessary degree of heat and is again making heavy cuts of fine roses, chiefly Premier, which variety he esteems most highly.

A. Pochelon, our energetic F. T. D. secretary will be the guest of the Chicago retailers' association at its meeting Tuesday evening, March 2.

Robert Rahaley, who has been on the sick list, is again back at his work and seems little affected by his enforced rest of three weeks.

M. Bloy and wife, who are enjoying the mild breezes of the coast of Florida, are expected to return, March 15.

ROSES NOW ONLY SHORT ITEM.

With the past week, market conditions took a turn for the better. With possibly the exception of roses, all other lines were well enough supplied to take care of all orders. For the first time this year, the cut of carnations was adequate. With the advancing season, sweet peas, violets, bulbous stock and the other novelties, are coming in heavier to the satisfaction of all concerned. It naturally would result in prices taking a drop to where it is more pleasure to both buyer and seller. With a falling off of orders for funerals, there are now more lilies, rubrum and Easter as well as calla, so that one does not have to order them a week ahead to get service.

NOTES.

The next meeting, March 4, of the florists' club will be devoted to a display of cut flowers and plants. President Welke has sent out a strong letter of appeal for all to make this a banner night, both as to attendance and exhibits. As a drive for new members is on, he enclosed application blanks so there will be no excuse for lack of knowledge of what is going on.

At a recent children's mask ball, Dorothy, youngest daughter of August F. Kellner and wife, dressed as a flower girl, with a ribbon bearing the slogan, "Say It With Flowers," was awarded first prize.

From present indications, there will be a good supply of cut flowers for Easter, while in pot plants, it will be the "early bird that gets the worm.

Paterson, N. J.

This, like other eastern cities, has been busily engaged in digging itself out of the snow. The florists are not complaining, as they have had a fair business throughout the winter. Edward Sceery stated that business had been good, and that trade was quickened on St. Valentine's day.

Felix C. Tamaroglio, formerly with Edward Sceery, now has his own store at 321 Market street, under the name of the Rosery Floral Shop.

John Cunningham, formerly with the Julius Roehrs Co., now has the range formerly conducted by T. H. Hemisley.

The Silk City Floral Co., located on Market street, near the Erie R. R. station, has been busy with funeral work.

A. I. Vescelius keeps busy as a rule, and this winter seems to have been no exception.

James Smith stated that business had been good. A. F. F.

DAHLIAS FROM SEED.—The British growers promise a race of miniature dahlias, height 12 inches, flowering the first season from seed.

To many a gardener there is nothing more exhilarating than making changes, planning a new pool, a new trellis, or steps. There is pure joy in thinking what one will do "next year." In this lies the garden's long fascination.—Frances Duncan, in Scribner's.

Says it With Flowers.

Edwin T. Meredith, the new secretary of agriculture, and editor of Successful Farming, is a practical advocate of the florists' slogan, "Say it With Flowers." Mr. Meredith's paper recently gave away 1,000 carnations with the following card:

"We are 'saying it with flowers' this evening, to express to you our good wishes and our desire to cooperate at all times with the members and officers of the Iowa Retail Clothiers' Association and the Apparel Club."

Michigan Edict Excludes Garden Plants.

GLADIOLUS AND OTHER BULBS EXEMPT.

Whereas, the European corn borer (Pyrausta nubilalis), an insect not known to be present in the state of Michigan, has been found in the states of New York, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and Pennsylvania, and is likely to be in the neighboring states, since it has been shown that this insect is a serious pest and causes great damage to corn, broom corn and other farm and garden crops, and because this insect spreads rapidly and will be extremely difficult to eradicate if it is brought into the state of Michigan upon any of the plants upon which it feeds.

Now, therefore, the undersigned, state inspector of nurseries and orchards of the state of Michigan, by virtue of the authority vested in me by the provisions of an act entitled: "An Act to prevent the importation from other states and the spread within this state of dangerous insects and dangerously contagious diseases affecting trees, shrubs, vines, plants and fruits," (Compiled Laws, Section 7422), hereby prohibits and declares unlawful, from and after the first day of March, 1920, until otherwise by him proclaimed, the importation into the state of Michigan and the shipment within said state, of any corn or broomcorn, including all parts of the ear or stalk, the shelled grain only excepted; and also celery, beans in the pod, beets with tops, spinach, rhubarb; rye, oat, wheat or other straw, sedges or rushes, whether used as such or as packing materials; cut flowers or entire plants of chrysanthemum, aster, cosmos, zinnia or hollyhock; also cut flowers, or entire plants of gladiolus, canna, peony and dahlia, except the bulbs thereof without stems, and such other herbaceous plants and shrubs as have hollow stems, or a large pith likely to shelter the European corn borer, and which have been grown or propagated in the states of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York and Pennsylvania.

Notice is hereby given to all persons, firms and corporations, and especially to all common carriers, that any one who brings into the state of Michigan, any of the plants enumerated above, which have been grown or propagated in the states named, will be guilty of a misdemeanor, and if any plants are brought into the state of Michigan, contrary to the provisions of this quarantine, such plants will be destroyed. The penalty for such misdemeanor is a fine not exceeding $100 or imprisonment for not more than 90 days, or both such fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the court.

The following varieties of gladioli are offered for registration by John Lewis Childs, Flowerfield, N. Y. If no objections are filed prior to March 15, 1920, the same becomes complete:

Conspicuous (Childsii). Beautiful clear cardinal red, with a large white throat. A very attractive combination of color. Originated by John Lewis Childs.

White America. Buds and partially expanding flowers pale flesh, 136 (1-2). Flower opens snow white, 2(1), with a faint streak of violet mauve, 195(1), or paler in the throat. Has the same strong habit of growth, form of flower and substance as America, of which it is a seedling.

A. C. BEAL, Sec'y.

Flowers Antidote of Bolshevism.

E. G. Hill, of the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., is as popular outside of the trade as in. Mr. Hill, whose services at meetings of the trade are much in demand, also is called on frequently to address gatherings of men in other industries. Mr. Hill's most recent appearance was before the Richmond Ministerial Association, his address emphasizing the value of beauty in fighting lawlessness and Bolshevism. "Attractive homes," he told the ministers, "are the best antidote for the poison of revolution. Homes can be made most attractive by the use of flowers."

GOOD DEMAND IN GENERAL.

The week which ended up with St. Valentine's day was an eye-opener for florists of this city. The business transacted on that flower day gave them an indication that the rest of the flower days of the year will show a healthy increase. Those who thought high prices would deter the public from buying flowers, were sadly mistaken, and business showed a fine gain over last year. This, despite a great shortage of some varieties of cut flowers. Very little advertising was done here, and yet almost every florist worked far into the night taking care of orders. A heavy call for funeral work added to the valentines, made the day a record-breaker, almost similar to a Christmas demand. There has been a great shortage of cut flowers here for some time, but fortunately florists were able to secure a fine supply of violets, and these sold well for valentine orders. Carnations and roses were hard to get, and there were scarcely any sweet peas in this market. Plants sold well in this emergency and a great quantity of primroses, cyclamens and tulips were disposed of. Quite a few telegraph orders were received here. February was a very prosperous month and surpassed all previous records. This, of course, was due to the unusual number of deaths here. The weather has improved, and several days of sunshine have helped materially to increase the supply of flowers, and from now it is hoped the market will catch up with the demand.

NOTES.

The big feature of the week in local flower circles, will be the farewell banquet to be tendered S. N. Peck and his wife, at the Commerce club, Tuesday evening, by the florists' club, of which he is secretary-treasurer. After almost a quarter century of business life, during which he acquired the loving esteem and respect of his fellow florists, Mr. Peck will retire from the business. He has disposed of his retail store on Superior street, and after a vacation in Florida, will spend the rest of his days in the cultivation of the flowers he loved so well. The florists of northwestern Ohio are planning a big get-together to honor these veteran florists.

Frank Schramm said that it certainly pays to advertise flower days when the public needs a little education. "Thought we had a young Easter rush on, and broke all records. We could not get many cut flowers, but we did get violets, and sold lots of plants." Others reporting big business were Mussbach Sisters, A. G. Imoberstag, Max Spanner, Fenniger's, Kusel, John Barrow, Miss Helen Patten and Helmar's.

Earl Metz, of Metz & Bateman, said that he was certainly surprised at the manner in which St. Valentine's day came across, particularly in view of the prevailing prices.

YOUR buyer of Japanese Lily Bulbs and other imported goods left for the Orient on Wednesday, February 18th.

You didn't know it? Well—

Chas. H. Fisk is his name. Until recently he was one of Chicago's most successful retail florists—been so for twenty years, in fact. Before that he was a wholesale florist. So you see your buyer knows your requirements.

There is an old adage "Well bought is half sold." We have been searching for a buyer to go to the Orient to buy on that basis. We knew that if he bought with your interests in mind, he would buy right.

Mr. Fisk was recognized as the ideal man for the task. He consented to handle it, and is now "on his way." His instructions are "Buy for the Florists—bear their interests in mind, always, and you will then be an efficient Randall representative." So you see—

YOUR buyer has left for Japan.

A WORD ABOUT LILY BULBS

One of the biggest single items Mr. Fisk is going after is Giganteum Lily Bulbs. Randall standards are so high that the quantity of bulbs which measure up to them is limited. The demand exceeds the supply even in normal times. We are booking orders now at open market prices. How many cases for you?

Pennsylvania Horticultural Society.

The third lecture of the present winter's course, was given at the New Century Club, Philadelphia, Pa., February 17. The attendance was very good. J. Franklin Meehan, was the lecturer, his subject being, "Landscape Work, With Special Reference to the Suburban Garden." He gave a very good lecture, imparting much valuable information to those present. He divided his subject into three parts. First, conception, conceiving and planting work to be done; Second, executive, or carrying out the plans; Third, maintenance. The lecturer dwelt at great length on the third part of his subject, and said, "Where are the men to come from in the future, who can take care of the work done by the landscape gardener, after he is through with the operation?" He stated that the gardener of the old school, was fast disappearing, and that there were no new men coming along to take his place. By the gardener of the old school, he meant, the man in charge of the private estate, capable in all branches of horticulture, who loves his work, and loves plants and flowers, and if you visit him, and in walking around the estate, you stop to admire a specimen tree, this man can give you the whole history of that tree, and all peculiarities pertaining to it. In a few years, that type of man will not be found, as the laborer in the mechanical trades is receiving more money than the gardener in charge of an estate. Men are therefore constantly leaving the horticultural profession. The speaker stated that it was up to everyone interested in horticulture to talk and write all they possibly could upon this subject, and to do their utmost to place horticulture on a higher plan, where it belongs.

The illustrations used by the lecturer were very good. He began by giving views of landscape work under way, then showing views of the completed work, and other views of the same work three or four years later. Several views of prominent places were shown to illustrate the proper effect of harmony in planting. Quite a number of views were devoted to flowering shrubs, showing proper methods of pruning, and some showing improper methods. Some very good illustrations were shown of trees to illustrate proper methods of pruning. Some very interesting views of trees, damaged by hail storms, were shown, and the proper treatment of such trees was fully described.

The exhibit of cut flowers and flowering plants was a very good one indeed, there being five entries for best two cyclamens, six entries for best two cinerarias, four entries for best vase of mixed cut flowers, three entries for best vase of carnations, and two entries for best vase of roses.

The fourth lecture of this winter series will be held March 16.

DAVID RUST, Sec'y.

Big Drop in Flower Prices

The decline in prices which we advertised in last week's issue of this paper set in last Saturday and is continuing. We call the attention of our customers to the reduced prices charged on their orders and assure them that all flowers will be billed at market prices on the day of shipment. Today prices are lower than yesterday and this decline will probably continue.

One great advantage in buying direct of the growers is that we must please our trade both in price and quality as the value of our greenhouse investment lies in our ability to retain our customers. All our flowers are grown by specialists and the quality of our stock is famous all over the country. Give our flowers a trial and then compare our service with what you have been getting.

Tulips, Jonquils and other bulb stock as well as all miscellaneous flowers are in large supply at much lower prices. Any flowers which we do not grow ourselves we will buy for our customers and give them the advantage of the lowest market prices and best quality. Greens of all kinds, especially fancy asparagus in large stock on hand always.

STOCK IS IN HEAVIER SUPPLY.

Stock is in heavier supply at this writing, consequently prices have dropped considerably, which was expected by some of the larger growers, who kept pretty close tab on conditions. Business was rather quiet last week owing to the opening of Lent, but trade is showing a great improvement and large quantities of stock have been moved the past few days. The shipping trade has been surprisingly good considering conditions and the local demand is gradually showing a decided improvement. Roses are in heavier supply, especially in the longer stemmed grades. American Beauty roses are having a good call and the same holds true for Mrs. Chas. Russell, Columbia and Premier. Ophelia, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Sunburst, Milady, Hoosier Beauty, Killarney, Killarney Brilliant, White Killarney, Champ Weiland, Montrose and a few of the other varieties grown for this market but not already mentioned are to be had in heavier supply. Carnations are a big factor in the market this week and an increased supply may be expected in the near future with continued favorable weather. White and yellow daisies are obtainable in limited supply and there will be a fair cut of mignonette for a few more weeks. Orchids are to be had and the same holds true of gardenias, although the latter seem to be holding their own. Lily of the valley is plentiful. Lilies and callas are seen at a few of the stores in fair sized quantities. Sweet peas are arriving in larger supply and so are violets. Calendulas, stevia, snapdragons, stocks, pansies and candytuft are included in the offerings. Tulips, Darwin tulips, jonquils, freesia and narcissi are to be had in the bulb line and are quite plentiful at this writing. Advertising in the local dailies right now would help the market considerably and some of the retailers, wholesalers and growers, who have signed in favor of the Milwaukee plan of advertising, feel that something should be done at once notwithstanding the fact that the assessments do not begin until March 1. A little printer's ink would move a lot of stock that is now accumulating in the market and mean hundreds of dollars in the pockets of the retailers, wholesalers and growers. Those who have not already signed in favor of the great publicity movement should do so immediately for they have everything to gain and nothing to lose by doing so. Many of those who signified their intention of not signing have done so within the past few days for they are broad-minded enough to realize that it would be unfair for their competitors to share the burden of the cost when they are realizing the same benefits.

NOTES.

Harry Blewitt and John Prickett, proprietors of the Des Plaines Floral Co., had such a good season that they have both invested in a new Reo touring car. A nice crop of daisies is in sight at this establishment.

J. E. Pollworth, of Kennicott Bros. Co., has been dividing his time between the store and the Ravenswood hospital, where his wife is seriously ill with double pneumonia.

Chris. Blameuser hit it lucky with a crop of mignonette in the market this season which brought him high returns. It was of splendid quality and found ready buyers. Carnations are grown principally at his range at Niles Centre and one thing that attracts the attention of the visitors is a device called a marker used for planting carnations. It consists of a number of boards nailed together on the bottom of which are about 50 or more pegs arranged separately about the distance the plants should be set apart. The pegs are forced into the soil and all the grower has to do is drop the plants in the holes and the rest is easy. It will bear investigation.

Ed. Blameuser has everything at his place in splendid condition, and some very promising varieties of carnations are being tried out at his range at Niles Centre. Good Cheer and Theo are seen at his place in quantity. Broadway, a sport of Good Cheer, looks promising as does No. 37, a dark pink seedling of Good Cheer, and Matchless. A red Laddie has originated here as have several other new sorts.

In the bankruptcy matter of William Langhout, Sidney C. Eastman, referee in bankruptcy, has given notice to creditors that a meeting will be held in his office, 907 Monadnock building, March 2, at 10 a. m., at which time a hearing will be held on a petition for an order to compromise a claim against the Delaware, Lackawana & Western railroad.

Albert Lies is growing carnations and roses at his place at Niles Centre. He has done nicely since he has been in the greenhouse business and is one of the old reliable shippers to this market. Most of the ranges in Niles Centre are devoted to carnations and he is one of the few that give much space to roses.

Nic Dahm has a good cut of carnations, and a few sunshiny days will hurry along the stock which is in splendid condition. Judging from the appearance of the carnation plants here the proprietor should have no reason to complain of his investment the past six months.

Emil Blameuser, of Niles Centre, has had much success growing Enchantress Supreme carnations in the past and will produce them on a large scale again next season. Joy occupies considerable bench space at his range and is considered a good paying variety.

Zech & Mann received word this week from S. N. Peck, Toledo, O., that he has sold his store to Mrs. Edith Navarre, who will conduct the business in the future under the name of the Navarre Flower Shop. Mr. Peck will leave for Florida in the near future.

The Commercial Flower Growers' Association held a meeting at the Hotel Randolph, Thursday afternoon, February 19, when the principal topic of discussion was publicity, particularly the assessment plan that goes into effect March 1.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is featuring orchids in quantity and some particularly fine stock in this line is obtainable. Cattleyas comprise the greater part of the orchid shipments.

Herbert Hansen reports business as good at Peter Reinberg's store and that the demand so far has cleaned up their supply notwithstanding the present market conditions.

Hans Jepsen, of Maywood, has placed an order with the Foley Greenhouse Manufacturing Co. for two new pipe-frame houses 32½x200 feet and also one propagating house.

Wietor Bros. are having a strong out-of-town call for stock, especially roses and carnations and no complaint is heard in regard to the demand at this establishment.

George Wittbold has booked an order for a store decoration for the Marshall Field Co. that will call for a large quantity of stock in this market.

C. L. Washburn reports that February 23 was a big day with Bassett & Washburn, the demand from out-of-town points being surprisingly heavy.

Theodore Vogel, formerly with W. J. Smyth, and wife left, January 25, for Los Angeles, Calif., where they expect to make their home in the future.

Herbert Baumann, of Niles Center, will operate his carnation range until July 1 when the new parties who have purchased it will take charge.

Nic Schmidt, formerly with Frank Schram, at Crystal Lake, has rented the Sigwalt place at Arlington Heights, taking possession last week.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. report a good call for sweet peas, which they are handling in quanaity. This item has been one of their leaders all season.

Andrew Chronis reports business as very good at the Alpha Floral Co.'s store with the sales Saturday, February 21, exceptionally heavy.

Fred Krauss, of the E. F. Winterson Co., is still seriously ill at home, but is expected to weather the gale and be back on the job soon.

Peter Kellen has erected two Ickes-Braun houses at Niles Centre and is about ready to harvest a fine crop of lettuce and radishes.

Mrs. L. M. Jones has recovered sufficiently from the influenza to again attend to her duties at the store of Percy Jones, Inc.

The Weiland-Risch Co. is filling a large number of orders for pussy willows this month. Their pink one is a winner.

Dan Lundin, formerly with Bassett & Washburn as a rose grower, is now with the Weiss-Spandikow Co. at Maywood.

At the Joseph Foerster Co.'s store fancy sweet peas are now attracting the attention of the buyers.

The florists' club will meet at the Hotel Randolph, next Thursday evening, March 4, at 8 o'clock.

Chas. H. Fisk and wife are on their first lap of their journey to the Orient and probably have reached San Francisco, Calif., by this time. The Randall Co. is confident that in selecting a man of Mr. Fisk's ability and experience that the class of merchandise he will select will be best suited to the needs of its customers. At Tonner's the receipts of sweet peas seem to have increased with the shipments of other stock, consequently there does not appear to be any shortage on this item.

BETTER SUPPLY AVAILABLE.

No change of any moment has taken place in market conditions since our last letter. However, the commission men are having a little more peace of mind, since stock has improved somewhat in quantity, and they are better able to take care of the big demand. Columbia roses are showing improvement in quality, and with Premier, bring top market prices. Carnations are of good quality, and the past week has not shown any difference in prices, although receipts are about equal to demand. The same can be said about sweet peas. They are fine. Daffodils are good, though somewhat short stemmed, and find a ready market. Single tulips are arriving in good supply, and with the double, meet a brisk demand. Paper Whites are not in very great favor since other bulbous stock is on the market, and as they are running short, the supply is about equal to the call. Freesia is also in good demand, the white variety being about the only one grown locally. The rainbow shades are being shipped into this market. The retailers are kept busy principally with funeral work, and now that Lent is here, business no doubt would be dull, and prices down, were it not for the ravages of sickness, which is general throughout the country. Sunday, February 22, was set aside by the American Legion as a day of respect to the boys that lost their lives in war service, and though a great deal of propaganda was brought into play, Governor Cox asking every one to wear a flower, little if any business resulted to the florist. Our government is certainly poorly advised in this respect. Better results would have been obtained were the florists consulted. Wearing a flower is not a proper way to express our sympathy. No one wears them at funerals, and likewise on Mother's day, we do want to tell the world that our mother is living or dead. Florists will get more business by pushing the sale of flowers in general. Anyone who buys flowers, knows that carnations would cost 25 cents a piece, and if a big demand were created, the price would go to 50 cents. Too much reverence cannot be shown our illustrious dead, but do not let us proclaim our respect from the house tops or with a band. Let us grieve in silence.

CORRECTION.

In a recent issue, your correspondent quoted Gus Adrian, Jr., as saying that the day for overtime for greenhouse helpers was soon here. This was the opinion of your correspondent, and undue haste to make the mails, caused this slip up. We take full credit for the statement, and are glad to say, we are for every one, large or small, employer or employe, and would consider ourselves unfit for this work, if our opinions were biased.

DEMAND INCLINED TO LAG.

Business during the week following St. Valentine's day was rather quiet, but that is to be expected, and all of the florists discount it. But there was a good run of sales in various lines, and prospects are good for a brisk trade in the near future. Funeral work is not as active as formerly, as the epidemic appears to have spent its force. Flowers for sickness are also not in as good demand. But to counteract that falling off, there is much more activity shown in party and reception work. Weddings of prominence are also scheduled for the first part of March, and it is believed that branch of the business will show increased activity. Florists in the down-town section report quite a good demand for loose flowers, and many sell out their supply in short order. The scarcity of stock, which characterized the business during the former week, is past and supplies are more plentiful. This is true in all lines. Roses are coming in better and are of good quality. They are mostly Premier, Sunburst, Killarney, Russell and Ward. They sell from $5 to $10 per dozen. Sweet peas are also coming in well. There is a rather plentiful supply of carnations which retail in the neighborhood of $3 per dozen. Violets are also of fine quality and are in good supply.

GRATIFYING INCREASE IN SUPPLY.

At last a change has come. For the better shall it be, or,—well anyhow there are more flowers; roughly, about 20 per cent increase with an automatic decrease of about the same amount in price. There was a very good demand all the week, which, notwithstanding the larger consignments of the growers in the last two days, cleaned up everything in sight at but a slight concession in price, except in violets, daffodils and calendulas, which toward the last had to be jobbed off. American Beauties at $1.25 to $1.50 are seen to be scarce. All other varieties of roses are more plentiful, the shorter grades, and, in fact, all lengths, dropping about 20 per cent in price. The quality is very good. Carnations are a trifle more plentiful, and competition among the commission men, to have nothing to carry over Sunday, shaded prices a bit. One lot of 500 was reported as selling for $30.00, but $12 to $15 was the market for the best stock with a few specials at $18. Laddie held well to last week's prices. There were increased shipments of sweet peas. All cleaned up, however, at from $1.00 for the shorts up to $3.00, and a few specials at $4.00. Daffodils are coming a little too fast and were sold at half last week's prices. Narcissi are scarce and hold well. Violets are now almost at full production; they have to be jobbed to clean up. Lily of the valley is plentiful. It is from the New York market, and is not in great demand. Lilacs, double and single, are in better supply than ever before, but prices are maintained very well. Cattleyas are ahead of the demand, with shaded prices, but quantities are sold. Take it all together, the market has absorbed the increased supply at a slight reduction and is in a healthy condition.

February 23.—A combination of rainy weather and the holiday made a bad market, but nothing alarming in the situation, as there is still a strong demand for funeral flowers.

THE SEASON'S SUPPLY.

That the business is growing rapidly is seen in the great demand throughout the entire season, and particularly the past six weeks, when production fell far short of the continuous call for flowers of every kind. Many attributed this to under production, but the large wholesalers say their books show they have handled quite as much stock of all kinds, except carnations, as last season, which proves that the outlet for flowers is growing faster than the supply, and it is up to the growers to in some way speed up production. Edward Reid, in speaking of prices, stated that the high cost of production had nothing to do with prices, they being governed entirely by supply and demand. Last week, daffodils were scarce at 12 cents, while seven days later, they go begging at 6 cents, yet they cost the same to grow. A short supply makes an active market. There is no philanthropy in business; it is get all you can on the one side, and buy as cheap as possible on the other. Competition is a good thing, but not the kind that gets cold feet from the first adverse breeze.

In speaking of the tendency of growers to discontinue carnations, and turn to roses, a large dealer thinks it is the height of folly for a man who has been successful with carnations to give them up. Their largest accounts have the past month been with carnation men. Roses will be much more plentiful the coming spring than carnations, a condition which should make the thoughtful grower sit up and take notice.

CLUB MEETING.

The meeting of the florists' club, March 2, is growing in interest. In addition to the splendid illustrated lecture of J. Otto Thilow, on "Australia," the W. Atlee Burpee Co. will exhibit a collection of orchid sweet peas from their trial houses at Fordhook. They are nearly all new crosses by George W. Kerr, their sweet pea expert, who will be present. These new seedlings are wonderfully fine, with exquisite shades of coloring that should attract the attention of all growers of these lovely flowers. This is also to be ladies' night, and all lady members and their friends are earnestly requested to be present.

NOTES.

Most of those on the sick list are improving. George Aeugele made his first appearance at the store, February 21. It will take another week or two to put him in fighting trim. D. T. Connor is about again ,and spent the week end in Baltimore.

year, and that not as many will be planted this year as last. Growers who understand carnations, he thinks, will make a great mistake at this time to throw them over for something else.

The Robert Craig Co. is particularly pleased with their Easter lilies, which are looking exceptionally well. All other items of Easter stock are also coming along in fine shape.

The opening gun of the local publicity campaign has been fired, the first ad. appearing, February 19. More are to follow as the interest increases.

Berger Bros. are featuring carnations, sweet peas, daffodils and violets, which can now be handled in the stores at popular prices.

Gardenias, roses, snapdragons and sweet peas are quantity items with the Leo Niessen Co.

LENT SHORTENS DEMAND.

The past week has been lacking in activity so noticeable for some time past and the cut flower supply has increased. Prices remain practically unchanged however, a few to a lower level being hardly noticeable. Funeral work seems to be quite brisk. Roses of all grades and varieties are fairly plentiful. Carnations, sweet peas, freesia and bulbous stock are also increasing. Violets move slowly. Greens are in short supply.

NOTES.

Al. Barber has leased the store and greenhouses of W. A. Calborn, 13, 226 Euclid avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Knoble, Clarence Myers and Mrs. Frank Schoen are reported on the sick list.

LENT BRINGS PRICE DROP.

It is now certain that extraordinary high prices are at an end for this season. It is true that the beginning of Lent always causes some falling off in the trade, but this year it is but an incident. Some of the most level headed men in the trade—and they are not confined to the retail branch—agree that prices have been too high this winter for the good of the business. So much has of late been said and written about profiteering in food, clothing, rent, etc., that a large portion of the public got the idea that the florists were also profiteers. Consequently, they stopped buying flowers or bought them only in negligible quanties. Again, the winter is now well advanced, the sun now does a good day's work and crops of roses and carnations that have been "off," are now coming forward. Consequently, there is a great increase in the supply over that of a few weeks ago, and the let up in buying from the previously mentioned causes, has caused a heavy drop in prices. We do not mean to be understood that there is an exceptionally heavy supply of stock on the market. There is not. But it is too heavy for the demand. Orchids and lily of the valley, about the only stocks that were plentiful during the scarcity, are now literally going a-begging, the former at $25 to $50 per 100, the latter at from $3 to $6 per 100. Roses will usually hold on, if anything does, but reference to our market quotations will show that there has been a heavy decline. Good carnations are selling for less than half of what inferior stock brought a month ago. Sweet peas are in almost the same condition. There is always a demand for sweet peas, but as the sun returns, there is a great increase in the supply, and a big drop in prices was inevitable. And thus it goes, all along the line. The minor stocks, such as mignonette, wall flowers and calendulas, are now looked on with but little favor. Some good double stocks are beginning to come in, and are more popular than the above mentioned. Good tulips are probably as much or more in demand than any stock on the market, excepting roses. Yellow and white narcissi and violets come near being drugs. All this may seem like a dark picture, but there is no cause for alarm. There has been a long period of high prices, and it was inevitable that a reaction would come. Easter is not far off, and there will undoubtedly be good business, but indications point to the best of it going to the plant trade.

February 23.—The market is quiet, with declining prices. Such stocks as mignonette, calendulas, wallflowers and cut primulas can scarcely be moved.

NOTES.

Miss Meta Ammann, daughter of Charles Ammann, of Yonkers, died in St. John's hospital, Yonkers, February 18, age 36 years. She was born in this city, where for many years her father conducted a florist business. For some years past, he has conducted a nursery on the Tuckahoe road, Yonkers, but recently sold it. Only a few hours after the death of Miss Ammann, her brother-in-law, Thomas Buchanan, passed away, after a long illness. His home was at 407 Warburton avenue, Yonkers. He was a retired manufacturer of oil cloth.

Christ. Karadontes, a member of the firm of Claremont Florists, 3185 Broadway, died, February 11, of pneumonia, at his home in Marsemere, N. J., age 33 years. The firm has greenhouses there, and he was in charge of them. He is survived by his parents, residing in Greece, and three brothers in this country.

R. Franke and wife, of Carlstadt, N. J., have the sympathy of the trade on account of the death of their daughter, Olga, 21 years old, who succumbed to an attack of throat trouble, February 6. Mr. Franke is salesman in this city for the Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J.

On February 16, H. E. Froment, president of the Wholesale Florists, Incorporated, signed a 10-year lease with the owners of the Siegel-Cooper building, Sixth avenue and 18th street. The florists will occupy the first floor.

The roof of a large greenhouse conducted by Edward Wang in Flushing, collapsed after the recent storm, destroying a large number of carnation plants.

President Henshaw, of the florists club, who was obliged to take care of himself during the recent bad weather, is all right again, and back at the store.

At the offices of Hitchings & Co., greenhouse builders, it was recently stated that barring the high prices on material, the outlook for the season is good.

Traendly & Schenck are now handling a fine quality of lily of the valley and orchids from the range of the Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J.

Fine cut stock of acacia is now being received at the store of Geo. C. Siebrecht, 109 West 28th street.

Frank Sheehan, well known in the wholesale district, is now with the Henshaw Floral Co.

A good quality of sweet peas has been noticed at the store of John Young & Co.

Percy B. Rigby, of the S. S. Pennock Co., is visiting his parents in Johnson, Florida.

The United Cut Flower Co. is receiving a good supply of Easter lilies.

George C. Siebrecht's is now headquarters for cut acacia.

G. J. Polykranas is receiving good stock of buddleia.

Nassau County Horticultural Society.

A special meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held in Pembroke hall, Glen Cove, N. Y., February 18. President Thos. Twigg occupied the chair.

James Hitchinson, Herbert Woodger, Stanley Balance, Alfred Woodger, David Dean, William Young, Robert M. Burnett, Edward Manda, John D. Wilson and William Alexander were elected to active membership and one petition for active membership was received.

President Twigg was empowered to appoint a committee to secure judges for all shows and exhibitions to be held by the society in the coming year. George Platt, an active member, died with pneumonia last week and the secretary was instructed to write a letter of sympathy to Mrs. Platt and family.

The exhibits for the next monthly meeting, to be held March 10, will be pot or pan of tulips, 12 mixed roses, 12 spikes of antirrhinum.

BOARD OF TRADE.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade, February 25 were as follows: Timothy, $10.00 to $14.00 per 100 pounds; March sold for $14.50; red clover, $45.00 to $54.00 per 100 pounds.

J. L. HUNT, of the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y., has the sympathy of a large circle of trade friends in the death of his son, Legus, a young man of about 28 years of age, who had been in ill health a considerable time.

IT is interesting to learn that the seedsmen contributed more than any other allied trade to the great million dollar advertising campaign of the canners, the only one of the allied branches going over the top and exceeding its quota of $10,000, approximately 57 per cent.

TOLEDO, O.—The clover seed market opened unchanged for old seed, February 24, while October, the new crop month, was down 25 cents. Cash closed at $35.30 and October at $25.50. Timothy was practically unchanged, with March at $6.75, April, $6.70 and May, $6.65.

NATHAN DICKINSON, former treasurer of the Albert Dickinson Seed Co., Chicago, died February 22, at Lake Geneva, Wis., age 72 years. Mr. Dickinson was connected with the firm until ill health forced his resignation as treasurer in 1913. His widow, two children, and two brothers, Albert and Charles, survive him.

VISITED CHICAGO: D. A. Sherwood, of the Sherwood Seed Co., San Francisco, Calif.; Carl Chesmore, of the Chesmore Seed Co., St. Joseph, Mo.; R. C. McGill, of R. C. McGill & Co., San Francisco, Calif., left for the east last week; J. W. Edmundson, of the California Seed Growers' Association, San Jose, Calif., and M. G. Lion, of Fosgate & Lion, Mt. View, Calif., returned home. Mr. Edmundson left the far east unvisited, expecting to make another trip later in the season.

The Late Nathan Dickinson.

Beet Seeds From Poland Offered.

Consul Harry A. McBride, Warsaw, Russia, in a communication printed in Commerce Reports, January 26, says that a Polish merchant, hearing that beet seeds are wanted in America, offers 250 tons for shipment from Danzig in two months, requesting that offers with prices be cabled to the consulate at Warsaw.

Rain Relieves California Growers.

John C. Bodger, of the John Bodger & Sons Co., Los Angeles, Calif., advises as follows, February 25: "Southern California has been favored with one and a half inches rain, breaking the long drought and saving a large acreage of early planted flower seeds, especially sweet peas. We are still behind our normal rain fall, but this amount will start up active farming operations, and if we get another such storm within the next month, will be able to grow fair crop."

Potato Profiteering.

Charges of alleged extensive profiteering in potatoes have been brought to the attention of the government, it is learned, and are being investigated. Consumers in many parts of the country are now being forced to pay at the rate of $3.20 per bushel for potatoes sold over the counter of retail grocery stores, it is learned. Farmers who grew these potatoes received slightly more than $1.57 per bushel, which was the price paid for them in November, according to reports.

CHOICE mules for cotton planters' work sold recently at Kansas City, Mo., at $300 each.

GAINESVILLE, GA.—The Gainesville Seed Co., opened for business February 16 at 17 North Bradford street.

SEATTLE, WASH.—Alfred E. Lilly, of C. H. Lilly & Co., has been named a member of the established industries committee of the local chamber of commerce.—H. M.

SOME catalogue firms are now convinced that the present conditions in the printing trades render it necessary that they make an early start on their fall books and in the purchase of paper.

ALEXANDER'S DAHLIAS

For Florists and Seedsmen

If you are looking for something good for your florists' business, try my New Cut-Flower Varieties offered below. I highly recommend them:

MAUDE ADAMS (New Show Dahlia). A pure snowy white, very daintily overlaid and suffused the sweetest shade of rose-pink imaginable. It is the best of my introductions for florists' use, and a variety I can highly recommend. "Maude Adams" is the most prolific Dahlia of its color, being more than twice as free-flowering as either "Nymphea" or "Sylvia." It has good stems and is an early Dahlia to blossom, continuing throughout the entire season. It has the necessary features that make it stand shipping well, and makes up good in all kinds of work. It has already been tested out in all parts of the country, Raymond Champe, of Michigan, finding it his best commercial variety. I can furnish strong divisions at $3.50 per dozen, $20.00 per 100; and clumps at $5.00 per dozen, $35.00 per 100.

HORTULANUS FIET (Giant Decorative Dahlia). Beautiful salmon-pink with a slight blending of yellow. Good divisions, $15.00 per 100, $2.00 per dozen.

MADONNA (New Peony-Flowered Dahlia). A very beautiful white, very slightly tinted with a most delicate shade of lavender-pink. The touch of color adds greatly, rather than detracts from its value, especially when made-up in floral work. The form of the flower is perfectly original, each petal curling and twisting in a very pleasing manner. An excellent cut-flower variety. Strong divisions, $1.50 per dozen, $10.00 per 100; clumps, $3.00 per dozen, $25.00 per 100.

Field View of Dahlia Maude Adams.

MINA BURGLE (Decorative Dahlia). The finest scarlet cut-flower Dahlia to my knowledge. Flowers of large size, on long, wiry stems, well above the foliage. Good divisions, $1.50 per dozen, $10.00 per 100; clumps, $2.00 per dozen, $15.00 per 100.

If you are interested in Cut-Flower Varieties, I will be pleased to recommend you the best varieties in the colors you want, and will give your communication my careful personal attention and the benefit of my twenty-five years' experience as a Dahlia Specialist.

My Trade List for 1920 gives complete descriptions and prices of Over 300 of the Most Up-to-Date Dahlias in the World, and is mailed free. Write for it now.

FRANK A. WALKER (New Decorative Dahlia). A charming shade of lavender-pink, with long stiff stems, making it first-class as a cut-flower Dahlia. Produces its flowers in great abundance, and is an exceptionally early bloomer. Good divisions, $3.50 per dozen, $25.00 per 100; clumps, $5.00 per dozen.

MRS. WARNAAR (Peony-Cactus Dahlia). Gigantic flowers of creamy white, suffused a delicate shade of pink. The early flowers are full to the center, and giants of the Hybrid Cactus type, but as the season advances they show the beautiful golden yellow center which lends an individual charm to the flower, a characteristic of the peony-flowered type. An early continuous bloomer. Stems anywhere from eighteen to thirty-six inches long. Good divisions, $5.00 per dozen, $35.00 per 100.

"Hamburg Late Pink" Chrysanthemum

Picture was taken Nov. 23, 1919, and will give a good idea of what "Hamburg Late Pink" looks like when grown to single stems and planted six inches each way.

"Hamburg Late Pink" is an improved late pink Maud Dean, having more petals, and if grown for late will hardly ever show an open center.

The average grower of chrysanthemums must have varieties which are easy to handle, and from which he can cut as near 100% of perfect blooms as possible. "Hamburg Late Pink" has been grown for the last four years, and produces a very high proportion of good flowers. It is not an exhibition variety, but, for late pink, one of the best for commercial purposes. It can be had in bloom the latter part of November by taking an early bud, but some of the flowers will show open centers; but by selecting late buds, after October 1st, most of the flowers are cut during December, and would advise to select late buds, as the later buds will hardly ever show an open center, and some flowers can be had even in January.

Keeping qualities are excellent, and where a graceful pink flower is wanted, "Hamburg Late Pink" cannot be surpassed.

"Hamburg Late Pink" will be disseminated in the spring of 1920.
Plants will be ready March 1st, 1920, and orders will be filled in rotation.

Daylight Saving Farmers' Menace.

Heed this grave word, this solemn warning, you city people, you workers in other industry: Your pay, your hours of work, your mode of life, are such that for years towns have grown at expense of country. War stimulated this, until today farms are denuded of labor.

Now add to the farmer's costs by "daylight saving," more taxes, more officials, more waste in public and private, lessened production of goods by shorter hours at higher pay, thus increasing what farmers pay out while seeking to decrease what they take in, and the farmer is forced to restrict his crops to what he can do himself, with machinery instead of hired help.

Reduced supply of food will be the inevitable result. Famine prices will prevail, if not famine itself. America's area now in winter wheat is nearly 25 per cent less than last year. These conditions apply to farming throughout the land, not to New England alone. The world's supply of old grain will be exhausted in July.

Menaced by starvation, you ignore it. You seek special privilege to add further to your ease, but make us sweat for it. Your unions have the gall to ask us to vote for "labor," which now works much shorter time yet earns far more than farmers, so that city may discriminate yet more against country.

This thing must stop. Give farmers a square deal. If you do not, you will not get food. That is the naked truth. You are living in a fool's paradise. Wake up before it is too late. Do not foolishly cry out that farmers threaten strike. God knows that they have fed you for years at such petty profit that country blood has always been leeched away to city. Even in your folly, the farmer will feed you so long as he can. But today he is up against conditions utterly beyond his control. He will do the best he can, but that is not enough to insure you against starvation.

You add to your own peril by whatever you add to the farmer's burden. The least you can do is to let the clock alone. Go to work an hour earlier if you want more leisure before summer's sundown. Can't you do this trifle as some insurance against famine? Forewarned is forearmed.—Herbert Myrick in Boston Post.

The Labor Situation.

At present, no doubt the livest of the live issues, is the labor situation, especially so to the farmer and truck gardener. Fortunate is the industry whose output is of such a nature that any adequate advance in selling prices can always be made to correspond with the increase in wage demands of the workers. That this is not the case with the farmer and gardener is evident, also to the casual observer, as these producers have very little to say in regard to prices received for their products. Especially the truck farmer is in a serious position, as his goods are perishable and must be sold when ready, or be lost entirely. The truck producer today faces the grim determination of the consumer to obtain his supplies at pre-war prices, and on the other hand, his labor demands hours and compensation on an equal with automobile shops and steel-mills. Added to these difficulties must be the advanced costs of all kinds of supplies, and finally the trucker's mainstay, animal manures, threaten to become totally unobtainable. All these conditions require the most careful consideration; each producer must think as never before in order to protect himself. We realize that it is fairly easy to criticize, but to offer efficient remedies is another problem. However, we have seen many years of gardening and trucking, and we believe that we have not yet seen the place where operations could not have been curtailed to the profit of the owner. In other words, as much as we have seen of this business, we believe the average operator attempts too much, each and every season. These excessive operations always bring some losses, at times heavy ones, and if we could eliminate these wasted efforts, a great deal would be gained. Under present conditions the wise motto must be to curtail operations in scope and do well whatever we do undertake. Each and every operation should be crowded to a successful finish and all doubtful issues should be dropped at the beginning.

Thus it would be better for many producers to reduce their active acreage and sow the balance to clover or some other manurial crop. This is not only our idea, but almost a universal one among farmers and gardeners.

School Garden Army.

The United States school garden army, conducted under the department of interior, in which more than 2,500,000 children in the United States, Hawaii, Porto Rico, Alaska and the Philippine Islands are enrolled, has through Helen Fitz Randolph, special assistant director, Washington, D. C., issued a number of interesting publications, several in the form of stories for children in which the technical gardening information is provided. Among the publications, which include garden manuals, adapted to varying climatic conditions, and a complete plan of the organization, are : "The Fall Manual of the United States Garden Army," "The Spring Manual," "The Garden Lady's Stories," and "Over the Garden Wall" and "The Victory of the Gardens," pageants.

"Blackboy Tree of Australia."

A peculiar product of the vegetable world is what is known as the "blackboy" tree which flourishes in the state of Western Australia, according to the Canadian department of trade and commerce. It is, in fact, a species of the grass tree, and grows to a normal height of seven to 10 feet, and is found to be useful for a variety of purposes.

Until recently no attempt has been made to utilize the tree commercially, but a company has now been formed to work and market its by-products. The establishment consists of 19 sets of retorts and furnaces, condensers, receiving tanks, etc., and can deal with 100 tons of gum and other material derived from the tree. The company at present employs about 20 men, besides cutters, and among other things being produced are tars (free from harmful acids), tarpaulin dressings, rope tar and sanitary tar, lacquers (such as Japan black), steam and refrigerating pipe lagging, paint for ironwork that requires stoving at high temperature, stains and paints, pitches for marine insulating, phenol, benzol, and alcohols, coke, potash, and pryogeneous acid. The production of dyes, perfumes, and formalin, and various kinds of varnishes is also planned.

The formation of this company is the outcome of experiments made by the late Henry Lowley, the city analyst of Perth, who devised the methods of extracting and treating the gum, pith, and fibre of the tree.

SUPPLY SHOWS SLIGHT INCREASE.

Demand holds up well with little variation in prices. The supply of stock has increased with the warmer weather, the most noticeable gain being in carnations. Roses are none too plentiful at 15 to 50 cents wholesale. Dark weather of the past few weeks caused bud drop of sweet peas, but they are now showing improvement. Bulbous stock is coming on fairly well. Pot plants of all offerings move freely.

NOTES.

The Wm. L. Rock Flower Co. is able to take care of its trade in good shape with an increase in supply. This store is now closed on Sundays except for the handling of Florists' Telegraph Delivery orders.

Alpha Elberfield, of the Alpha Floral Co., has returned from Panama and reports an enjoyable trip. This firm had its delivery truck wrecked, February 14, when another machine collided with it.

The Pinehurst Gardens Co. is now located at 1121 Grand avenue. Roses are still scarce here but the supply of freesia, carnations, jonquils and daffodils is on the increase.

W. J. Barnes had a busy week of hospital and funeral work. He is at present having good cuts of carnations, tulips, narcissi, snapdragons, etc.

A. F. Barbee is cutting good carnations, but the supply is short of the demand.

T. J. Noll & Co. report stock more plentiful but still insufficient to fill all orders.

John Stevens is now bringing in carnations, jonquils and calendulas.

H. Kusik & Co. report good business with an increasing supply. E. J. B.

Nashville, Tenn.

DEMAND AS HEAVY AS EVER.

The flower shortage continues with the demand as insistent as ever. More than one person has remarked that even the floral world has joined in the general unrest and discontent at a time that these beautiful gifts of nature should be plentiful and cheap. Noting in one of the stores recently a wealth of red carnations, we were surprised to learn that the price was $4 per dozen. The flowers were shipped here from northern markets. Roses are doing fairly well, but before they have time to mature, they are cut and on sale. Pot plant sales are helped considerably by the advent of hyacinths and tulips. These offerings are taken as fast as they reach the market. A few jonquils are also offered, also a very nice lot of freesia. The great demand is for funeral work. The weather continues very mild and outdoor vegetation is advancing rapidly. M. C. D.

Lancaster County Florists' Association.

Rather a small number attended the meeting February 19, in spite of the fact that the matter of increasing the dues was up for consideration. This was partly the fault of the weather, as many of the members of this association are men who attend their own fires and cannot leave if the weather is severe.

The dues were left at the old rate, but all of the ladies who transferred from the ladies' auxiliary, are to pay full membership dues, and be entitled to full membership privileges. We are not going to be left behind in the emancipation of women movement.

It was voted that the secretary send out notices to have as many of our members as possible attend the New York flower show, and as Thursday suits the majority of our members better than any other day of the week for visiting, Thursday, March 18, was selected as the day, and this trip will take the place of the regular meeting.

The lecture of the evening was by F. C. Bucher, farm expert for Lancaster county, and the topic, "Soils." Mr. Bucher knows his subject from A to Z, and it is a pity that not more of our members could have heard him, as the information regarding our local soils was worth both time and money. Many were the questions fired at him, and many of them were answered, with those that he did not know argued out between us, making this the best meeting we have had for many a day.

Visitors were T. J. Nolan and a representative of the Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

The W. Atlee Burpee Co., Philadelphia, exhibited a vase of their new sweet peas in such fine shape that there are no adjectives to properly describe them. ALBERT M. HERR.

Rochester, N. Y.

BUSINESS MAINTAINS FIRM TONE.

Business has been brisk the past two weeks with a strong demand for plants, wedding accessories, funeral designs, etc. Spring flowers are very popular. Carnations are more plentiful than they have been for several weeks. Roses of all kinds are excellent. St. Valentine's day developed a heavy call for stock in all seasonable lines from plants to novelties.

NOTES.

Upon the occasion of his seventieth birthday, February 18, Superintendent of Parks Calvin C. Laney was tendered a complimentary dinner at the Rochester club by his friends and associates. John Dunbar was toastmaster.

Frank G. Newell, who was first to propose the erection of greenhouses in Highland park, died at his home in this city February 17. He had been a member of the park commission for many years.

Stephen J. Mahoney, widely known in the florist trade in this section, passed away at Saranac Lake, in the Adirondacks, February 18. The funeral was held from his late residence February 21.

The Rochester Floral Co. has been very busy with orders for a number of large funeral pieces.

Salter Bros. are showing some excellent Cineraria stellata and pans of bulbous stock.

Trade has been fairly good during the past week. The warm weather, however, brought a slight falling off in orders as compared to the cold weather of two weeks ago when the florists here were rushed and had about all the business they could handle. Taken as a whole, trade this year has been better than it was during the corresponding period of last year.

Emil Niednagel, who recently was married to Miss Sadie Meadows, has returned from his bridal tour.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Sweet Peas From Cuttings.

New sweet pea varieties being always expensive and not always seeding freely, multiplication by cutting may be made to increase the production from a certain amount of seed four or five fold. First of all, the mother plants must be grown short and stocky, for cuttings from weak plants would be worthless. When the plants are four to five inches high and have five to six joints, make the cuttings with a good pair of scissors, just above the third joint. Scissors are better than a knife, on account of the fibrous stems, which, resisting the knife, are apt to tear or pull the roots. Remove the leaves from the cutting, except the upper two, and pot in sand in thumb-pots, taking care to place them near the edge. Water before and after potting and cover with glass; wipe the glass now and then, to remove superfluous moisture, and shade if too hot, though the cuttings like the light. They will be rooted in two or three weeks, when the glass may be removed, and a week later they may be repotted and treated the same as seedlings, well cared for, and will bloom and give the same results about the same time.

Marguerites.

As the warm days of spring approach, the marguerite plants will bloom profusely and those in pots will have, to a great extent, exhausted the plant food in the soil, so to keep up the size of the flower and length of stem watering with liquid manure will be necessary. Liquid cow manure can be safely used in frequent waterings with no danger of any injury if the plants are in a healthy condition. The flowers should be cut daily and placed in water; they will keep much longer than if allowed to remain on the plants, where they quickly fade if not picked when the warm spring days come on. This should be prevented, for it not only gives the plant an untidy appearance but takes the strength of the plants and the following flowers are often much shorter in stem. A few well bloomed plants are very decorative at Easter, especially in churches, where they make a splendid showing. Propagation for next year's stock should now be carried on; the cuttings root easily and there are plenty to be obtained at this time. As soon as rooted they should be grown on in good soil, and to secure the best results another year given the best culture.

Easter Lilies.

The one important crop to the plantsman at this time is the lilies for Easter, for they must be properly timed to be at their best on that date. Easter this year comes April 4, and most growers like to see buds on their plants six weeks before that time. If the buds are not showing, the temperature will have to be increased to 70° at night. This will do the plants no harm if they have good sunlight during the day and are given all the ventilation possible, but the ventilators should not be opened unless the sun is shining and the thermometer at least at the same degrees as the night temperature, and avoid all draughts possible, for the plants grown so warm are very tender. It is next to impossible to bring a lot of lilies in all together, so it is better to grow them so the slowest ones will be in on time, and move those that are more advanced into a cooler house and retard them, but this should not be done until the buds are nearly full grown. A lily retarded when the buds are forming is very difficult to start into active growth again, but after the first buds begin to turn white the plants can be moved into a house of 50° or lower and they come on slowly and will be of better quality than those grown warmer. The plants should be all tied to a neat stake as soon as the buds form, if not already done, for the buds add considerable weight to the top of the stems and they bend over very quickly. When the buds form, if the plants are pot bound, a watering of liquid manure will increase the size and substance of the flower. It will be a continued fight against aphis from this time on, and fumigation or spraying with nicotine will have to be regularly and continually practiced to bring the plants into bloom in the best condition.

Mignonette.

The grower will always find some plants in his beds of mignonette that produce exceptionally large spikes of bloom; the plants are more vigorous in foliage or the blooms of better form, and these spikes that show special characteristics should be selected and the seed saved, and in this way the grower can procure a strain which, after two or three years' selection, will be far ahead of any seed he can buy. This seed should, however, be saved before the bees and other insects are flying around and attracted to the houses, for they will cross-fertilize the flowers with undesirable strains. The seeds of mignonette do not ripen all at once, and as the pod remains open the ripe seed falls out and is lost, so special preparation must be made to receive it. Select the spikes that are to be saved for seed and tie them to strong stakes and mark them. The flowers should then be cross-fertilized by rubbing a camel's hair brush up and down the flowers. This should be done every bright day, so as to secure a thorough pollination. To catch and hold the seed, take a piece of heavy brown paper and roll it into a cone shape, and after winding a piece of cotton around the stem and stake below the flowers tie the small end of the cone-shaped paper around the cotton, the paper spreading upwards so as to catch all the seeds that drop out of the seed pods. This can remain until all the seed has ripened, and as the spike grows, the cross-fertilization continues, but care should be taken that no water gets into the paper to wet the cotton, and the seed must be gathered before the days become so warm that insects and bees are in the houses.

Violets.

With the approach of spring the violet plants grow rapidly and quantities of runners will spring from the old stools and propagation of the runners at this time will save much time and room later in the season when the spring stock is insistently demanding space, and much better plants are procurable from cuttings taken now than from divisions in May, when the days are often warm and the plants more or less exhausted. And if the young stock is procured now the old plants can be thrown out as soon as through blooming, securing available room at once. These runners or laterals root easily at this time in a propagating bench or can be taken off with a few small roots and either potted or placed in flats and will take but little room, and as early as possible placed in a cold frame. Treated in this manner, splendid stock may be obtained for planting out early, either in the field or in the houses, and with good strong stock to start with much better results are sure to be attained than by being obliged to plant small, weak stock later in the year. As the warm days approach the houses will need to be shaded, for the sun bleaches the flowers, and a watering of liquid manure will greatly assist in maintaining the size of the blooms and also keeping up the color.

Lily Prospects.

There will be a fair supply of Lilium giganteum for the Philadelphia, Pa., market if all those now under cultivation arrive on time. They were planted for the most part in early December, and the various stocks show first class condition, being exceptionally vigorous and free from disease. They appear to be forming or are well set with a good quantity of buds. Most of the stock is the standard size, 7 to 9, while Alfred M. Campbell is forcing 10 to 11 as he believes the strength and vigor of the larger size gives an extra quantity and quality of flowers that warrant the increased price of the bulbs. About 40 per cent of the stock will be grown for cut flowers, the balance finished in single or made up plants for the Easter market.

Some of the growers are not quite sure as to the proportion of stock that will be ready for market. There is always a period of worry and uncertainty about this time, and as Easter is early this year, much will depend on the weather. The rule is that it takes at least six weeks after the buds can be counted, to get them ready, and the date of delivery is not Easter, April 4, which many include, but Palm Sunday, a week earlier. At the price which lilies are likely to bring this year, it will be best to have the buds well advanced, as 25 cents or more per, for green nubbins one-inch in length, will be likely to bring violent protests.

In the Chicago territory, lilies for Easter are looking well and promise from three to five blooms per bulb. August Poehlmann, of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., says his firm is growing about the same quantity as in previous years, and other growers appear to be similarly situated in the matter of supply.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

At last, the long hoped for period has arrived. One sunny day follows another, and there are flowers enough to fill all orders, with some to spare.

The most important thing, at this time is to carry a good stock and feature the plentiful items, such as sweet peas, violets, calendulas, daffodils, tulips, etc. Small vase or tumbler baskets are most useful in showing these shorter stemmed flowers to advantage. A half dozen or more bunches of sweet peas are often jammed in a jar, much to their detriment, while they add nothing in decorative effect. Arranged a bunch to a basket, with a little green, there is at once an artistic effect that attracts attention. Each spray stands out in its graceful form and coloring, while the flowers in the six baskets, as compared to the one crowded jar, are very much more attractive and salable.

There is an art in the display of all kinds of goods that has much to do with their sale. The tailor spreads out his cloth to show the patterns and their colors to the best advantage. The haberdasher arranges his various gents' furnishings with the greatest care, many with the most expensive window fixtures, and so feature the novelties that they are sure to attract attention. In many other lines, everything possible is done to show articles off and present them in the most attracive manner. Even the newspapers have trained men whose business is to write alluring headlines, and so feature the various news columns that they will not be overlooked.

It should from this time forward be the business of the whole trade, and particularly the retailer, to keep the public posted by displays, store literature and advertisements, that flowers are plentiful—and prices moderate. This can be greatly helped by a good showing of flowering plants, which are now available in considerable variety. Primula obconica are seen at their best, cinerarias are fine, and still a few cyclamens and heathers are choice stock. There are azaleas and genistas, tulips, daffodils and hyacinths in single pots and pans, all of which, when decorated, make a fine display and give an atmosphere of spring that is a decided incentive to the sale of the stock.

The difference between a good, active business and one that just drags along, is very marked. In every case, the credit or discredit lies with the management. With the successful man, "now is the time," no waiting until tomorrow or next week. Get everything possible out of it today because if not utilized, it will be only a lost opportunity by tomorrow.

TAUSENDSCHON ROSES WELL SET WITH BUDS.
Photographed at Wm. K. Harris', Philadelphia, Pa., February 28, 1920.

Boxes of spring flowers can be featured to good advantage at this time. A dozen daffodils, a spray or two of pussy willow, and a bunch of pansies, will arrange prettily. A bunch of sweet peas adds variety for a box a trifle more expensive. Window displays are now in order, such as a number of small vase baskets of sweet peas, of daffodils or calendulas, each basket of a shade in blue, green, yellow or orange, as will best contrast or blend with the flowers used. Pink sweet peas or short pink roses look best in light blue baskets, the daffodils in light green, and the calendulas in bronze or orange tints. Two color or duo-tone shades are better than all of one. A little knot of fibre, silk or chiffon ribbon at the handle is a great help. Displays such as these are sure to attract attention, and in stores in the crowded shopping districts, move off quickly.

Preparations for the busy days ahead, incident to Easter week, should now occupy every spare moment. A large grower of Easter plants stated recently, that with the exception of certain buyers, very few storekeepers began placing their orders until two weeks before the event. It is a great mistake to leave the purchasing of this important stock until such a late day. Scarce and choice lines of plants are only to be looked at by that time, when two weeks before they were open to purchase. There is so much to do the last two weeks, each day bringing its increased pressure, that everything possible, particularly the ordering of stock, while it is available, should be attended to at once.

St. Patrick's day, is the great Irish holiday, an event that should be planned for. While of no great moment as a flower day, yet it gives an opportunity to feature flowers in connection with a celebration that is given considerable newspaper comment. The florist supply houses always have something in the way of novelties to offer, while the growers' stocks of shamrocks can be relied on, and planted into receptacles that properly displayed meet with a ready sale.

As sweet peas are now so plentiful, a bunch of choice stock in a cornucopia paper or small box, sent as a "Breath of Spring" to some of the best customers, will bring splendid returns. Such attention is appreciated, and the expense can well be charged to publicity.

Do not forget the birthday anniversaries. This feature of the business has great possibilities. It should be kept to the front all the time.

St. Patrick's Day.

This holiday in memory of the patron saint of the Emerald Isle celebrated March 17, comes in the middle of Lent, the dull social season. While the celebration creates no extra demand for flowers, it presents an opportunity to make an attractive window decoration in keeping with the sentiment of the day, a subject which is always well played up by the newspapers. Stationers always present something novel in cards or souveniers, as do also the confectioners in their line of sweets. Hibernian societies and other Irish associations have dinners in the evening, at which the decorations are sometimes quite elaborate.

A number of the trade grow shamrocks in pots and shamrock shaped pans especially for this occasion with which considerable business is done in stores who carry enough of this stock to feature it. The largest grower of shamrocks in this country is Wm. K. Harris, Philadelphia, Pa., who handles over 70,000 two-inch pots annually. These are grown for a large department store, which presents each customer at the store for a few days before the 17th with a pot of shamrock. There has been much discussion as to the name of the real shamrock. The solution is easy; it is shamrock in Ireland, and clover in America, the dwarf, small-leaved white clover.

A pot of this bright, fresh green shamrock is a treasured possession on St. Patrick's day, particularly to those who were born in Ireland, and they are very good stock to carry and feature all the week before the event. Each little pot should be covered with green crepe paper, and can have as an addition, a small Irish flag, which come in miniature sizes. All sorts of odd conceits are made up; one which has been found to be a good seller is a good-sized potato, hollowed out on the side at one end, in which is planted a small shamrock. A band of narrow green ribbon around the center, tied with a bow, makes a color finish. A box of the size to hold one of these so that it can be delivered or mailed to a distance safely, gives it an added value that makes it attractive to many.

Miniature wheel barrows and hods, the appliances of the Irish laborer, are filled with shamrock, as are clay pipes. All of these are tied with narrow green ribbon. Miniature gilt harps, with a small receptacle at the base filled with shamrocks, are very pretty and more symbolical than the tools. But as these are all made up to sell, they work in together, and if well displayed, will attract attention and a ready sale.

Greened flowers, principally carnations, were at one time quite a novelty, and sent the market price of white varieties up two to three times, as these alone would take the color perfectly. Nearly all white flowers can be greened by placing their stems for a few hours in a jar of water, colored with green dye.

LILIUM GIGANTEUM AT WM. K HARRIS', PHILADELPHIA, PA.

All flowering plants can be featured to be in keeping with the day and answer as appropriate gifts by a little decoration of green chiffon or ribbon and the addition of an Irish flag or two. Quite a display can be made with plants touched in this way for a day or two, which decoration can be removed the day after if the plants are not sold.

Storekeepers are often heard to say of Paddy's day business: "It does not amount to anything with me," and when asked, "Well, do you stock up for it?" "No, what's the use," and, of course, the result is no interest created, and no sales.

Letting such opportunities go by shows lack of enterprise. The hustler grasps at every such event and plays it, not so much for the gain, as for the attention or publicity he can get out of it. A feature for the window is a good sized harp, the frame made of wrapped leucothoe leaflets or leaves of the leucothoe sprays. These can be used green, or after being made up, given a coat of gilt. Miniature green electric lights, studded rather closely, and outlining the frame, make this a very striking and conspicuous window ornament. Corsages of Killarney roses, tied with green chiffon, and a miniature Irish flag, are appropriate for the day.

Attractive Windows.

Successful, wide-awake retailers value the publicity gained by their well arranged and frequently changed windows as the greatest factor in holding the old and creating new business. Almost invariably, customers who are calling to give an order or make a purchase, stop to take a look in the window before they enter, some because they enjoy the beautiful decorative effect that is always on view, and which is sure to be different from that of the week before, and others, to see if the plants or arranged flowers on display will help them to a decision as to just what they want.

The florist's window should be, from one year's end to the other, a series of well planned, seasonable and effective decorations, examples of his skill, and at the same time, featuring the stocks in which he desires to interest the public. Their effectiveness, as is the test of good advertising, is in their pulling power. Do they help to sell flowers? Is there seen to be an extra demand for articles following their display in the window? If not, why not? Last week's results were fine, but somehow the display now in, while apparently just as showy and complete, fails to move the stock. There is a medium between failure and success that is hard to determine. It is so in many lines of business. Certain songs, of which much is expected, do not take. It is the same with books, and is seen in expensive settings on the stage. Generally speaking they are not quite good enough, lacking the originality or finish that gives them the necessary punch to put them across.

Every decoration, however plain or simple, should have a theme or an object. It may be only a study in pink, which in the various shades, can in their arrangement from the darkest to the lightest tones, be made very striking. This, as well as every decoration, should have its explanatory card or cards. There is something almost compelling about an attractively written window card. One feels as if they must stop and see what it says. The most simple, those that tell their story in the fewest words, are the best.

Recently, a window display consisted of a vase of each variety of roses then in the market. These were nicely placed, but the throngs on the street passed them by almost without notice. Cards on which was written the name of each variety, were to have been placed on each vase. These were mislaid for a time, and an hour later set in place. Immediately, a crowd collected before the window, all reading the names. This continued until the closing hour. People are like sheep; one follows another in much that they do. If one stops to look, another wonders what he sees of interest, and these two soon attract two more, and so on.

A good idea is "Flower Values," the window to be filled with a vase of every kind of flower in stock. Each vase bears a small card with the price per bunch or dozen. This will make an attractive display, and show that flowers are not as expensive as many suppose them to be. The large card marked, "Flower Values," should occupy a central position.

Anniversaries is another good subject in which a number of more or less elaborate arrangements from corsages and small vase baskets, up to a vase or basket of choice roses or other flowers, included in which can be a line of various sized flowering or foliage plants. Each item should have a card. A filled wooden receptacle is marked, "For the wooden wedding," the tin utensil, "For the tin wedding." One basket is inscribed, "Sister's Mother's;" a choice blooming plant, "Mothers birthday;" a basket, all yellow, is for the "Golden Wedding;" a handsome corsage bears a card, "for Her birthday.' Such a display will be favorably commented on, and found productive of good results.

The picture frame is a striking novelty for the window after the store is closed. A gilt frame, with rather a wide moulding, mounted on a low easel, over which and attached to the top, is a concealed electric globe, which lights up the flower picture. A vase or basket, which arranged with velvet background of a shade to get the best color effect, is sure to be noticed and spoken about to others. Well lighted, this stands out brilliantly in the darkened window and can be readily distinguished, even across the street.

Shower effects, in which the whole window space is hung with small baskets of short stemmed flowers, are very striking, and particularly when a special in sweet peas, pompon chrysanthemums, pansies, etc., is on.

The above are just a few suggestions of the many that will occur to the man who is planning out seasonable decorations. When worked out on paper, and the list of the various articles required is on hand, it takes but a short time to complete the work.

INTERNATIONAL CLEARING HOUSE.

To Canadian and American F. T. D. Members:

To facilitate, encourage and develop a closer relationship and a larger volume of international F. T. D. business, this office has decided to broaden out and establish an international clearing house, whereby to save our members the unnecessary exchange rate that is forced upon our Canadian brothers.

The F. T. D. office has decided to establish a bank account on the Canadian side, as well as an account on this side, to mail checks owed by American F. T. D. A. members to Canadian members from the Canadian bank, and Canadian bills due American members will receive American checks from the F. T. D. A. office.

Therefore, if you have any bills due Canadian members, send them to this office with your check to cover. This will be deposited in the American bank, and a check to cover your bill issued from the Canadian bank, and likewise with the Canadian bills, their checks deposited in the Canadian bank, and a check issued from the F. T. D. A. office instead.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Plants for the Coming Season.

The arrival of the 1920 chrysanthemum catalogues, reminds us that it is time to give our attention to securing the stock for another season's planting. A good list of novelties, both the large flowered and the pompons, as well as some very fine single varieties, are being introduced this year. A large majority of these new introductions have the endorsement of the examining committees, by having been awarded the Chrysanthemum Society of America certificate, some of them receiving very high scores. This endorsement shows that the committees consider the varieties worth while novelties, and worthy of the growers' attention.

The price of these new chrysanthemums may seem rather high, but to allow the originator to be repaid for his labors, and considering the cost of producing seedlings, the price is very reasonable, and unlike roses and carnations, plants of chrysanthemums purchased up to the end of March, can be propagated and the stock increased, so that when it is time for benching in June, or later, there will be enough young plants on hand to lower the actual cost to very little above that of standard varieties.

A good plan to follow to increase the stock of new introductions, or any scarce variety of chrysanthemum, is set apart a section of one of the front benches in a carnation house, prepare a medium-rich, light soil, fill up the bench and then when the plants are received, plant them directly into it. As soon as the roots have taken hold of the soil, and the plant has lengthened out enough, take off the top for a cutting. After being topped, the plants will very soon branch out and also throw out suckers from the bottom. These can be taken off and propagated. This can be carried on until early in May when one or two of the top shoots should be left on the plants and the plants lifted, potted into 3-inch or 3½-inch pots, and grown on for planting in the benches in June. The cuttings should be taken out of the sand as soon as rooted, potted into 2½-inch pots, and a little extra care given them to push them along so that they will be in good shape for June planting. Cuttings taken from young healthy plants planted in the bench in this manner, come along and grow into vigorous planting stock much faster than cuttings taken from stools carried over from last year's flowering plants, and some of the earliest rooted ones may need a second shift in the pots to prevent them becoming hard before planting time. The important point to consider in following this plan of increasing the new stock, is not to allow the cuttings to accumulate on the plants after they are ready for the sand, but push them along from the start to the time for planting.

By the introduction of some fine late varieties, the chrysanthemum season has been extended to well after the Christmas holidays, into January. This gives the grower a better chance to increase his stock of the novelties because the late flowering varieties do not have to be planted into the benches before late in July. The originators have been giving their particular attention to the production of novelties that have some outstanding improvement over the existing standard varieties, either by late or early flowering, or an improvement of color, form and stem, and intending purchasers will do well to study closely the novelties being introduced this year and add some of them to their stock. It is the same with chrysanthemums as in other lines; the public demands some variation in color and form over the general run of commercial varieties, and it pays to cater to this demand.

EASTER LILIES FOR 1920.

PREPARING PLANTS FOR PROPAGATING.

It is a little early in the season to start the general propagation of the commercial varieties for the season's requirements, but it is none too early to overhaul the stock plants and prepare them for the production of cuttings. First of all, clean up the plants, removing any decayed or diseased leaves, then bring them into the full light so that they will produce sturdy cuttings. Make sure the plants are free from insects, and keep them so by fumigating regularly every week or 10 days. Stock plants of chrysanthemums do not need to be kept very wet at the roots, but do better when the soil is held moderately dry, and the plants grown cool with liberal ventilation on every favorable occasion.

Commence the first of March to propagate the early varieties intended for benching in May, following them up with the second earlies, aiming to reserve the last week of the month or the early part of April for propagating the bulk of the stock. The exhibition sorts, or those that have to have a long season of growth to produce their best blooms, can be started at once, but they must be given the closest attention as to their requirements, or early propagation will not bring the results desired.

It would take too much space to give in detail a description of the full number of the novelties being offered this year, but there are some of them that stand out so prominently as to be worthy of special mention. Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich., as usual, have a strong list of bona-fide novelties in the commercial section. Their December Beauty looks to be one of the best for late. Flowers of this variety were on the Chicago market a few days before Christmas, and sold at a good price. Rose Perfection is another variety reported by the C. S. A. committees to be of exceptional merit. Sunray is a fine yellow that will do well for early October, and Sunbeam, another yellow, is particularly good for Thanksgiving. Smith's Sublime, a fine pink for early October, should be given a thorough trial by commercial growers. Coming in at a season when good, clear pinks are scarc, it ought to be a winner. This firm is also offering a very fine lot of small flowered or button pompons that are very attractive and will well pay for growing.

The Chas. H. Totty Company, Madison, N. J., features a set of six large varieties that are wonderful. Mrs. J. Leslie Davis, or Pink Turner, will be grown very largely on account of it being a fine pink sport from that wonderful variety, Wm. Turner. Mendon Surprise, a sport of one of the best exhibition varieties, is another good one. Mrs. Charles W. Johnson is considered by some the best white chrysanthemum ever produced. It has all the fine qualities of the best exhibition varieties, and is equally good for commercial purposes, being of good color, fine form and splendid stem. The Chas. H. Totty Company is also featuring a fine list of hardy varieties, pompons and singles.

The E. G. Hill Company, Richmond, Ind., also makes a particular feature of the varieties Pink Turner and Mrs. Chas. W. Johnson, and in addition to these two, gives a prominent place to the new Golden Eaton, or Celebration, a fine variety for Thanksgiving. Richmond, a fine yellow for October, is one of the best, if not the very best chrysanthemum, that the E. G. Hill Company has disseminated. The past year, it did exceptionally well in every section of the country, and will be grown in greatly increased numbers the coming season. As a fine commercial yellow for October, it is unsurpassed.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., are again very strong on pompon varieties of exceptional merit, many of them being seedlings of the fine sorts which this firm has disseminated. Their stock of seedling pompon chrysanthemums is considered one of the best and largest in the country, giving them a good list to select their novelties from.

C. W. JOHNSON.

Pre-Quarantine Reminiscenses.

We are in receipt of the following interesting communication from a veteran florist of Fredericton, N. B.:

"I was intensely interested in reading the discussion of Plant Quarantine No. 37 by prominent members of the trade, published in THE AMERICAN FLORIST of September 13; also, what could or would be grown in Canada and the United States in the near future. Perhaps among the smaller growers the azalea will be missed the most. As an old-time gardener, my memory carries me back to a period more than half a century ago, in 1866, when I was employed by a small nurseryman and florist named Kinghorn, in the vicinity of the Kew Gardens, Richmond, near London, Eng. He was a genius in the production of geraniums, azaleas and a number of other plants. One of his best azaleas was named Kinghornii, while another excellent variety, light in color, was Ivory. If I am not mistaken, one of the most popular pink, single, bedding geraniums, which was immensely popular at that time, was Christina, named after one of his daughters. The writer was placed in charge of one house devoted principally to geraniums, verbenas and young bedding stock, all in 3-inch pots on a back shelf about two feet from the glass. The stock was about one foot in height, and other employes informed me it was one year old and that about the same number of plants were grown every year, those good enough to name being retained, and the balance used to graft on, largely in house splice grafting.

"The seedlings in 3-inch pots were the picture of health, and all growers with experience with azaleas, know how easy it is to produce seed on these plants after blooming. Will not some of your readers give their ideas in this matter of production, so that through their co-operation both the United States and Canada may be relieved from the present unfavorable conditions resulting from the restrictions. If Mr. Kinghorn was able to sow seed and produce them as easy as scarlet geraniums, surely the expert growers of the present day can do something better.

"At that time, and also later, the camellia was the popular flower for funerals, and also for ladies' adornment. The rose, however, with its long stems, is better suited to our climate, but about 40 years ago C. M. Hovey, of Boston, Mass., produced camellias from seed of named varieties, varying from 10 to 15 feet in height, which produced dozens of flowers in red, white, pink and striped colors, and previous to his death took a large shipment to London, where he disposed of it. He also produced hundreds of azaleas from cuttings. Of course, they develop more rapidly on strong-growing stock.

"In conclusion, I have a large Azalea indica alba, which comes into bloom about January or February, in a cool house with a temperature of about 45 degrees. This is very valuable for funeral work, and I would not dispose of it for $40. "J. B."

Chicago Publicity.

Albert Pochelon, well-known secretary of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association, was the central figure at an enthusiastic and well attended meeting of the Allied Floral Association, held at the Hotel Randolph, Chicago, March 2, in an excellent address on the importance of the co-operation of the various branches of the trade in placing the business on a better and more up-to-date basis. Chairman Asmus introduced the speaker, who was warmly received, and Mr. Pochelon told at length, in his own most interesting and instructive style, how the national publicity campaign had helped telegraph delivery, and how not only the national body, but all local societies and the individuals themselves could help one another in meeting conditions. It was very good of Mr. Pochelon to give any consideration to the possible help derived from outside sources, when everyone well knows that the great growth of the telegraph delivery is due to the hard and constant work of Mr. Pochelon himself. In season and out of season he talked telegraph delivery, and as he well says, it was only when the rough road had been well smoothed down, that the rank and file of the trade would consent to travel on it.

The meeting marked the beginning of the assessment plan of the local body for publicity purposes, the growers, wholesalers and retailers combining to contribute varying percentages, according to the value of the plants and flowers bought and sold, March 1 being the opening day. Thanks to the energy of Chairman Asmus and his co-workers, large numbers in the three lines have already joined the movement, and the secretary reported new names coming in by every mail. So far, the plan is working well, and the promoters feel that everything will be running smoothly and the majority of the trade working in harmony before the end of the month. The suggestion to connect the retail stores with the advertising by means of a trademark or other sign, will go a long way toward bringing the retailers into line, and one of the participants said elimination would work similarly upon the growers and wholesalers.

Carl G. Wilson, of the Floral Syndicate, Cleveland, O., showed a number of floral promotion movies. C. C. Pollworth, Milwaukee, Wis., and James S. Wilson, Des Moines, Ia., also addressed the meeting. Henry Rahaley, of the Michigan Cut Flower Co., Detroit, Mich., was among the visitors.

National Publicity for Flowers.

Had flowers been plentiful, the business for St. Valentine's day would have been such as to make the day rank, as a flower day, next to Mothers' day. The unfortunate condition of the flower markets throughout the country, which existed before and during the St. Valentine's day business period, curtailed possibilities very considerably, and the volume accomplished was limited only by the supply of flowers available. In the emergency, there was a generally good demand for plants.

Now, what has placed St. Valentine's day on the map of business if not our publicity campaign? Two or three years ago, the business for this day was very ordinary in character. A good business prospect was passing into obscurity for want of exploitation. Our publicity committee took the matter in hand, and through judicious, yet most impressive advertising in the magazines, and dissemination of reading articles which were favorably received by a large number of newspapers throughout the country, among them some of the largest, in all of which articles the suggestion was apparent that flowers were more suitable for St. Valentine's day gifts than anything else, the public were led to see that a splendid old custom was falling into the discard, with the result that there has been a revival highly profitable to our industry. This campaign work continued through two more seasons has had the effect desired. To insure all possible publicity for the day, our promotion bureau has urged florists individually to connect with the campaign advertising through the use of their local newspapers' advertising columns, and has supplied many hundreds of special electrotyped advertisements for this purpose, all of which in use have added to the publicity for the day as well as serving the local interests of the advertisers. An additional aid this season has been the enormous quantity of poster stamps and window posters put out by our promotion bureau.

A similar procedure has characterized the campaign work for Mothers' day. We all know this has been a "made" day for florists, made through publicity, in which the work of our publicity committee has been wonderfully conspicuous. All in the trade would suffer if interest in Mothers' day were allowed to lag. Already attempts have been made by hostile interests to sever the connection of flowers with this day of days. Only organized effort can cope with a situation of this kind, and we have it in our publicity campaign.

But the publicity campaign can be only what the members of our trade make it, and they are far short of making it all they could. Only a small percentage of those engaged in our industry, are contributing to its support. These contributors have the interests of the trade generally at heart. They are conscious of the great good our campaign is accomplishing, see their share of the benefit materializing in their own business. They know, and are certain in their knowledge, that we cannot reap the benefit that is in store for all of us with the small fund so far available, and which they have provided. Many of them could contribute even more liberally, but why should they shoulder your burden Mr. Non-Subscriber? Have they not a moral right to expect your assistance in so worthy a movement, one that produces as much good for you as for them? You are only expected to contribute a trifle, nothing that need hurt you. If you can only send a cheque for $5, it will be most welcome, a multiplicity of such contributions would carry us to our goal. Take hold of "the big idea," and let us hear from you right away.

Men of Character.

The Ohio Newsboys' Association, of Columbus, is made up of business and professional men who started in life as newsboys on the street. The members give up their business one day a year, and devote their time to the sale of newspapers for the benefit of the organization. The Ohio State Journal donates its entire issue for that day to the purpose. In its first year the association raised $700; last year it raised $18,000, a thousand dollars of this amount being paid by a Columbus business man for the first paper off the press of one of the Columbus dailies on the date set apart for the collecting of the funds.

Now, what has this to do with our publicity work and its fund? Only the fact, that appreciation is its own reward. The men who are big and successful in later years, know full well the early struggle they had as newsboys, and now big as they are in Columbus, go out and do the newsboy stunt once a year, as an inspiration and a help to the present generation of boys. What a pleasure, as well as a noble act, this physical living demonstration of willingness to do things for a cause.

Does it not make one feel proud to have done his duty to our unselfish cause, when you take into consideration the vast number who as yet have not been sufficiently interested in the national campaign movement enough to send in a first subscription, while others have contributed thrice already. Wake up, you who have not given, and get a little of the spirit shown by the men of Columbus, Ohio.

There may be many who cannot see the wisdom, or even the benefit, of this kind of an investment for their own good, yet those who have already contributed, have felt the pulse. We are in need of further funds to speed up our campaign, and your committee feel its merit more now than ever, and quoting Sir Joshua Reynolds: "Present time and future may be considered as rivals, and he who solicits the one, must expect to be discountenanced by the other."

If we are to bring the demand for more flowers to a higher level, and everybody shares in the effort, then that is what our campaign stands for, and for which you are contributing.

HENRY PENN.
Chairman Nat. Publicity Campaign.

National Association of Gardeners.

A gardeners' conference, under the auspices of the National Association of Gardeners, will be held in the Engineering building, 29 West 39th street, New York, March 18, at two o'clock, to which all those interested in the profession of gardening are invited. An opportunity will be presented for a general discussion of the association's policies, the work outlined for it, and the operation of the service bureau. This meeting occurs during the week of the flower show, at which time many members of the profession are expected to visit New York from distant points.

The Garden Club of America, which is manifesting an interest in the aims of the national association, will be addressed by William N. Craig, of Brookline, Mass., on "The Gardener and His Cause," at the meeting of the club in New York, March 17. Congressman M. L. Davey, of Ohio, will also address the meeting on "Plant Quarantine No. 37." In a recent issue of the Garden Club Bulletin an article appeared by M. C. Ebel on "The Professional Gardeners."

National Flower Growers' Association.

March 17-18, the committee on constitution and by-laws for the National Flower Growers' Association will meet in New York. We will appreciate suggestions anyone has to offer. Write them to the undersigned.

Immediately after Easter, I shall be ready to visit any community, and assist in organizing a local organization. Write so that dates may be agreed upon. We shall not encourage the organizing of locals with a membership of less than 25. Let us take time by the forelock and organize as many locals as we can prior to the big national meeting at Cleveland in August. Illinois already has one local with 100 members, and we expect in the near future, to organize two more locals. So, get busy, you other states: write the undersigned and let us help you.

Why you need a national growers' organization: Because—

It will certainly work for your interests as a flower grower.

It will elevate the flower business in general, and make it both more pleasant and profitable.

It will safeguard your heavy investments in an extremely hazardous business.

It will afford protection from unjust, unfair and harmful legislation.

It will assist you in the production of high grade flowers and plants.

It will remove the drudgery of the grower.

Its activities will procure prices for a grower's products commensurate with the chances he takes.

It will help you to solve many perplexing problems.

It will extend the demand for your products.

It will minimize the annual waste of flowers.

Why the national growers' organization needs you: Because—

With you the organization is stronger than without you.

Your experience will be a valuable asset.

Team work is a necessity always.

More abuses in the trade can be corrected with your assistance.

Meetings are of greater value when many participate.

We live but a short time, so let's make the most of it.

Your financial support will permit the organization to extend its activities.

The more intelligence assembled, the greater force.

In unity, there is strength.

It will add one more booster for better conditions in the trade.

Your interests are common with those of many others.

Michigan State Florists' Association.

At an executive meeting of the Michigan State Florists' Association, held at the Michigan Agricultural College, February 16, 1920, it was decided to hold a spring exhibition of cut flowers, pot plants, florists' supplies and anything pertaining to the florists' trade or horticulture in general, at the Michigan Agricultural College, East Lansing, March 16-17.

A banquet will be held on the evening of March 17. Prominent speakers will be present. The ladies are especially invited. A special invitation is extended to the ladies' auxiliaries of the various florists' clubs of the state to attend in bodies and hold their meetings in Lansing at the same time. This being the first exhibition and annual meeting of this new and hustling association, the executive committee will appreciate it very much if you will make a special effort to be present and to exhibit if possible. A nominal charge of 10 cents per square foot will be charged to exhibitors to defray incidental expenses. Applications for floor space should be made at once to the secretary of the association, who will also supply further information on exhibits. There will be no charge for admission to the exhibition, but complimentary tickets can be secured from the secretary by any member wishing to give same to customers or friends.

This is your organization.—Let's go and co-operate.

ROBT. M. PLUMB, Sec'y.

State Florists' Association of Indiana.

At the monthly meeting of the State Florists' Association of Indiana, held at Indianapolis, March 2, plans for the annual meeting of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association, to be held in that city, October 12-13, were discussed, and the following committees were appointed, the first named member in each instance being the chairman: Novelties—A. F. J. Baur, Fred Dorner and John Hartje. Finance—Joseph Hill, Herman Junge, George Blackman, W. W. Coles and L. S. Elder. Hotel—O. E. Steinkamp, T. D. Hefler and Irwin Bertermann. Entertainment — E. E. Temperly, Charles Fahud, E. G. Hill, William Roepke and Glen E. Moore. Show windows — Arno Nehrling, Albert Pochelon and John Rieman. Decorative—Clarence Green, Homer Wiegand and Otto Laurenz. Publicity—Ella Grant Wilson, Oscar G. Carlstedt and Charles Barnaby, Jr. Irwin Bertermann will act as general chairman of the state association, since he is vice president of the F. T. D., and is therefore familiar with the wishes of that organization. He emphasized the fact, however, that the state association has a free rein in the matter of arrangements for the October gathering, since the F. T. D. is relatively a new body, and has no set programme. Mr. Bertermann will call a meeting of the committee chairmen in the near future, and plans for the October convention will be mapped out and put into motion.

October 12-13, the dates selected by the F. T. D., appear a little early for the meeting, and it is possible that the Indiana association will ask that they be changed slightly, so that there will be more flowers available for the exhibition to be held in connection with the meeting. There was much discussion as to the advisability of admitting the public to the show, but consensus was that the advertising possibilities of a flower exposition should not be overlooked. The Claypool hotel is the only one in Indianapolis which can provide accommodations for the public, and that hostelry accordingly will be the scene of the convention and show, unless some change in plans is necessitated. In connection with the arguments for and against a flower show in connection with the meeting of the F. T. D., it was stated that no less than 15,000 persons attended the regular fall show of the state association in 1919 and twice that number may be expected at the coming affair, because of the nature of the meeting.

Anders Rasmussen, of New Albany, president of the state association, presided at the meeting, which was held in the quarters of the Smith & Young Company, who served a buffet supper after the business session.

Mr. Rasmussen told of the meeting of the board of directors of the S. A. F. at Cleveland, and A. F. J. Baur described the recent carnation show in Chicago. Mr. Rasmussen said that the Journal of the S. A. F. was authorized to accept advertising and indicated that his personal opinion was that this was hardly fair to the trade journals which serve the flower trade.

A committee on the good of the order was appointed to formulate a definite program for future meetings of the state association. Oscar G. Carlstedt, of the Smith & Young Company, is chairman, other members being T. D. Hefler and E. E. Temperly.

The April meeting was postponed a week because of Easter and will be held the second Tuesday instead of the first in that month.

The following new members were admitted: Thomas Appleck, Norman W. Hukreide and Fred R. Hukreide, of Indianapolis, and Frank D. McConnell, of McConnell & Lutz, of Boonville, Ind.

Southern Illinois Florists' Association.

The pre-organization meeting of florists of southern Illinois, advance notice of which was given in our issue of February 7, page 156, was held in the city hall, Centralia, February 27, but after due consideration it was thought best to defer further action until the organization of the National Flower Growers' Association was completed, and a meeting of all florists in the southern section of the state will be held at Springfield in April, the call to be issued by Secretary J. F. Ammann of the national body upon his return from an eastern trip. It was the unanimous opinion of all present that a local of the national growers' organization be formed. The subject of spring prices was discussed, and it was decided that the minimum price of good 4-inch geraniums of the Nutt variety should be $2.50 per dozen, and $3 minimum for Poitevine. Many were in doubt as to whether these prices would return a fair retail profit above the wholesale cost of growing. Several growers stated they expected to sell 4-inch geraniums at 35 cents each or $4 per dozen as a maximum figure. The majority of those present expressed the opinion that on soft-wooded stock, such as coleus, etc., from 2 and 2½-inch pots the minimum should be $1 per dozen, and that lilies should sell for not less than 50 cents each. One concern represented, said that while its cut flower department made a good profit during the past year, the pot plant business showed a heavy loss. Discussion brought out the fact that there seemed to be little accurate data as to the cost of production and that this is much higher than previously estimated.

LENT BRINGS USUAL SLUMP.

The arrival of the Lenten season brought quiet business and a decline in prices. Roses are offered at six to 20 cents each, carnations $6 to $8 per 100, violets, $1 to $1.50 and sweet peas, $1.50 and $2. Easter lilies are holding at $25 per 100.

NOTES.

After 20 years in the capacity of buyer for Philip L. Carbone, Inc., Seymour K. Grose has passed that end of the business on to E. T. Denham, and will hereafter devote all of his time to store details.

William Nicholson, of Framingham, is slowly recovering from his illness, pneumonia following influenza. His stock is being sold by William Hastings.

B. A. Snyder & Co. and the H. M. Robinson Co., wholesale florists, have consolidated and the business will be continued at No. 1 Winthrop square.

The orchid show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, scheduled for February 28, has been postponed owing to unfavorable conditions.

Penn, the Florist, reports excellent business. The windows at this store were very attractive during the past week.

Charles E. Evans is planning to tear down two of his old houses, which will be replaced with one modern structure.

Dolansky & McDonald report excellent trade with a remarkable increase in orchid sales.

William Gibson is back on the market after a month's illness with influenza.

The Houghton-Gorney Co. has been busy of late with funeral work.

LENT FAILS TO CUT DEMAND.

The opening of the Lenten season seems to have had little or no effect upon the demand for flowers. There is still a steady call from all quarters, particularly for funeral work, which continues to be very heavy. The rose supply has increased somewhat, but there has been no decline in prices. There is still a shortage of good red roses. There is a heavy call for carnations of all grades. They are holding up in price, owing to the demand. Daffodils are again very plentiful and prices have dropped quite sharply this week and great quantities are being handled by the street vendors. Tulips are to be had in limited numbers. The first lily of the valley seen here in a long time is now coming in and sells out quickly at $12 per 100, wholesale. In pot plants, hyacinths and tulips are the leading bulbous stock offered. Good made-up plants in pans find a ready market. Azaleas, rhododendrons, cyclamens and primulas about complete the list of flowering plants.

NOTES.

Victor Ferrari, of Ferrari Bros., has plans ready for the erection of four large greenhouses which will be devoted to gardenias. He is rebuilding several of his older rose houses. The new houses were to be erected last season, but had to be postponed, owing to the difficulty in securing glass. The Pathe Film corporation has just finished moving pictures of their orchid range. One house had over 5,000 blooms open at the time. There are now 10 houses of cattleyas and two of phalaenopsis. A house of lily of the valley is in full bloom at this writing, being the first grown here for a long time.

As one grower aptly put it the other day, "There has been an enormous demand for several years past for all kinds of flowers." This, coupled with the fact that there has been little or no new glass erected for some years, the supply is not equal to the demand. This year it is very probable that there will be quite a lot of building going on.

The California Evergreen Nursery has begun the erection of two large greenhouses to be devoted to the growing of Russell roses. This firm, which is rapidly becoming quite a factor in the local supply of plants, has 17 houses.

Alfred Cuneo, designer for the Art Floral Company, who has been critically ill at St. Joseph's hospital from an attack of spinal meningitis, is reported to be improving slowly. His legion of friends are hoping for his early recovery.

The first Rambler roses of the season, grown in pots, are now being shown at the store of Podesta & Baldocchi. They are very beautiful, and add greatly to the appearance of this handsome establishment.

The Thomas Floral Company, at Ellis and James streets, has secured a desirable location at Polk and Sacramento streets, and will open a branch store there about the first of this month.

The growers of Dutch bulbs this season have realized a handsome profit on their stock. Freesias wholesaled at from $1.00 to $1.50 per dozen, and Dutch hyacinths brought like figures.

J. A. Axell, on Bush street, says that rose prices for the past month have been higher than those received at Christmas. He reports a steady out-of-town demand for all stock.

The Cottage Gardens Nurseries, of Eureka, are shipping large consignments of daffodils to this market. The stock is very fine, and is being distributed by G. Rossi & Co.

The Edward Schwerin greenhouses are sending in an excellent grade of pot plants. This is to be a large feature of the business in the future.

TRADE CONTINUES SATISFACTORY.

The past week has been one of unusual activity, both as to work and weather. The Lenten season has somewhat lessened the demand for social events, but an unusually large wedding order was a factor and funeral work has been more than plentiful. The supply has been equal to all requirements and bulbous flowers are now becoming quite numerous. Roses are in good supply at prices ranging from $6 to $18 per dozen with a few short stemmed offerings in Killarney quoted at $3 and $4. Carnations are bringing $2.50, $3 and $4, the latter price being for Ward. Violets in corsages return $4 per 100, showing price unchanged. Tulips and jonquils are selling at $2 per dozen. The retail florists' association at its weekly meeting dropped prices on nearly all stock which action should be widely heralded, as no other line of industry exceeds the florists' in proportionate coal consumption.

NOTES.

The event of the season was the auto show, and Albert Reichert certainly produced something original in the way of decorative features. In addition to about four carloads of fireproofed smilax, there were used quantities of palms, birch boxes filled with flowering plants, ferns, etc., studded with many electric lights.

The trade will miss a good member in Robert A. Scott, who has severed his connection with the Wm. Scott Co. to enter other business.

The florists who have been on the sick list are now on the road to recovery.

W. A. Adams spent part of last week in Albany.

PRICES DROP WITH INCREASING SUPPLY.

The past week has witnessed a marked change in the cut flower market, stock in all lines being in greater supply and prices have dropped accordingly. Carnations are now offered at six and eight cents for the good grades and roses have also declined to a much lower level. Greens have been rather limited.

NOTES.

Frank Schoen has the sympathy of many friends in the death of his wife, which occurred February 22, at St. Anne's maternity hospital from pneumonia, which developed from a slight cold. She is survived by her husband and five children.

Mrs. Radi, sister of Mrs. Adrieny, and member of the firm of Adrieny & Radi, 2623 Lorain avenue, died of pneumonia, February 23.

INTEREST rate on commercial loans at Chicago has been advanced to 6½ per cent.

TWENTY per cent more soft coal was mined the past 12 months than in the preceding year.

NOBODY in any business will admit profiteering. If Diogenes were now alive, his search would be, not for an honest, but a dishonest man.

WITH a higher scale of coal prices to be announced April 1, according to the Coal Trade Journal, "railroad rates will advance 25 per cent before that date." Operators and miners will meet to discuss wages, March 9.

THE Anaconda Copper Co. will soon be making a double acid phosphate from prosphorus rock at the rate of 35 tons per day, containing 48 per cent phosphoric acid. The high acid content is expected to enable Anaconda to overcome the handicap of heavy freight rates to eastern markets.

COMMITTEE MEETINGS AT NEW YORK.

The national flower show committee will meet at the administration offices, 1170 Broadway, New York, March 16, at 3 p. m. At this meeting, the most important business will be the selection of a place for holding the next national flower show. The committee will be pleased to receive suggestions from anyone interested in the project.

The committee on tariff and legislation will meet at the same address, March 17, at 2 p. m., when some very important business will be taken up for action.

The publicity committee will meet at the offices, March 18, practically all of its members being in attendance at the flower show on that day. At this meeting, various details in connection with the national publicity campaign will be discussed, looking to a vigorous continuance of the campaign. Edwin J. Fancourt, Philadelphia, Pa., who has given splendid service on this committee since its inception, believing that someone who can give more time to the duties of the position than he can, could better serve the committee and the campaign, has tendered his resignation, and President Miller has appointed C. C. Pollworth, Milwaukee, Wis., to fill the vacancy thus occurring.

LIFE MEMBERSHIP CERTIFICATES.

The issuance of life membership certificates to those who took out such memberships in the closing months of last year has been delayed through circumstances not under the control of the secretary's office. The dread influenza invade the office of our engrosser and the work of engrossing the certificates was impeded. The framer, who had the contract for framing them, likewise suffered, and in addition, has been obliged to vacate the premises in which his business was established, resulting in delay also from this quarter. The work of dispatching the certificates is now, however, proceeding, and it will not be long before the several hundred held up will reach their destination.

The epidemic, also is responsible for an awkward delay in the receipt of the transcript of the stenographer's notes of the meeting of our executive board at Cleveland last month, consequently an account of the proceedings has necessarily been withheld from publication. Despite the solicitations of Vice-President F. C. W. Brown, who has been in constant communication with the reporting firm, the period of waiting could not be shortened and we have had to curb impatience.

President Miller has engaged, at his own expense, space for a booth at the forthcoming flower show, New York, March 15-21. There he will be pleased to meet all S. A. F. members, as well as visiting florists who are not members, and places at their disposal the facilities afforded by the booth for the receipt and dispatch of mail, interviews, care of inquiries and furnishing information in regard to the trade in and around New York, and any other matters. The booth will be well furnished, and all are invited to make it their headquarters during the show.

Life members are reminded that there is a good supply of life membership buttons at the secretary's office, and a button will be forwarded to any such member on receipt of the price, 75 cents.

American Rose Society.

REGISTRATION OF NEW ROSES.

Frederick R. M. Undritz, West New Brighton, N. Y., has requested permission of the executive committee of the American Rose Society to change the name of the variety of rose registered by him August 23, 1917, as Frederick R. M. Undritz to General John Pershing. Inasmuch as this rose has not yet been disseminated, the executive committee of the American Rose Society voted to allow this change of name. Unless objections are received in the office of the secretary of the society within three weeks of this publication, the registration will become permanent.

General John Pershing, H. W. Dr. W. Van Fleet x Mrs. W. J. Grant (Belle Siebrecht). Climber; foliage same as Dr. W. Van Fleet; very vigorous, perfectly hardy; flower double, four inches in diameter, dark pink, center projecting, medium long, quite fragrant; bud pointed and firm; fifty-three petals, curved stiff, center close; blooms profusely in June; may bloom later; lasting quality, on bush five or six days.

E. A. WHITE, Sec'y.

American Carnation Society.

The American Carnation Society has continued the committee which was to look after the welfare of Belgium, France and possibly England, insofar as new varieties of carnations are concerned. It is herewith requested that our leading growers send the introductions of the past two years, so far as it is possible, to either W. E. Wallace, Eaton Bing, Dunstable, England, or C. Engleman, Saffron Waldon, Essex county, England. These gentlemen will see that any plants which arrive in their care will be properly distributed, and have made arrangements for same. Also please see that the information with regard to the sending is mailed to the committee. Since the American Carnation Society has undertaken this kindness, every prominent grower of carnations ought to do his part.

Lloyd George Took All.

BUT DID NOT BECOME HORTICULTURIST.

When Lloyd George was about 14 years of age, his guardian uncle, Richard Lloyd, was puzzled what to make of him. To help him in choosing a career for the lad, he put him in a room with a Bible, an apple and a shilling. If the boy chose the Bible, he was going to be a parson; if the apple, he was to go into horticulture, and if the shilling, he was to be a lawyer. When the uncle went into the room some time later, he found young David seated on the Bible eating the apple, having painted the shilling to look like a sovereign.—Buffalo Commercial.

Why Florists prefer BULIS Boxes

Because of their sturdy construction. Bulis corrugated Fibreboard boxes invariably deliver flowers in perfect condition.

The patent metal corners eliminate the necessity of glue or tools. Easily put together, they snap in place like a glove and never let go.

Bulis boxes in all sizes comply with the respective rulings and requirements of Parcel Post and Express and are the safest way to send flowers by either method.

Shipped flat, knocked down in bundles of twenty-five, which is the minimum order.

STRONG DOWNWARD TENDENCY IN PRICES.

The long expected drop in prices has come and everyone is venturing a prediction as to how low they might decline until Easter will act as a stabilizer for the time being. February, while having an extra day this year, still is considered of short duration and short on opportunities to put the balance on the right side of the ledger. The wholesalers have reached the point where everyone must be shown a little more courtesy, and others who have sought stock elsewhere, must be won back into the fold. Already the retailers are swamped with out-of-town price lists. While the drop is more rapid in large shipping centers, on account of greater volume, in smaller cities it takes somewhat longer to produce the same effect. Roses are about equal to the demand. Carnations are quoted at $8 per 100, and other grades in proportion, consistent with the quality. Calendulas are bringing $4 for the best stock. Paper White narcissus is not so plentiful. The majority of the bulb stock growers are now specializing in daffodils. Sweet peas are coming in at present in large quantites. Now that the prices are reaching a lower level, it would be advisable to use the publicity ads. to notify the public to this effect. Nothing is more demoralizing to industry than exorbitant prices; since flowers are not a necessity, so much being said to the contrary, notwithstanding, it being an item that people can do without though, they do it reluctantly. The retailers have weathered the siege in great shape, and though put to a severe test at times, they are now getting on speaking terms with their patrons. So few realize that the welfare of the industry is in the hands of the retailer, they being the ones to meet the public. On their shoulders falls the greatest burden, to serve the public in a satisfactory manner. Business men, old in experience in the trade, have been selling many items at little more than cost, and will receive their reward in increased patronage in the near future. The prevailing idea that the retailers have made money the past 60 days is a mistaken one. The percentage of profit has been below normal.

STOCK IS PLENTIFUL.

Stock is more plentiful at this writing, and there is enough in almost all lines to go around with some to spare, which is due not so much to the increased cuts, as it is to the falling off in the demand. Lilies are seen at several of the stores in good sized quantities this week and the receipts of callas have accumulated to such an extent that one might believe that they are in great oversupply. American Beauty roses are seen in larger numbers at present, and it is the same old story that they are best when they are cheapest. Roses in general are in heavier supply and some particularly fine Mrs. Charles Russell, Columbia and Premier are to be had at very attractive prices. The other roses grown for this market are also to be had at very reasonable figures in quantity lots. Carnations have dropped considerably in price, but are cleaning up nicely each day considering the general market conditions. Sweet peas are being sold at prices ranging from $1.50 to $2.50 per 100 for fancy stock, and in some instances more or less, according to the quality and the quantity that one has to offer. Violets are having a good call. Lily of the valley and orchids are in heavy enough supply to meet the demand at very reasonable figures. Daisies, snapdragons, white and yellow narcissus, freesias, calendulas, mignonette, pansies, snapdragons, jonquils and tulips are included in the offerings. Pussy willows are seen in quantity. Greens are having a good call and ferns have advanced in price at some of the stores this week. Some local advertising was done in the leading daily last week, which helped the demand considerably. The assessment plan is now in effect, and everyone is gradually joining the ranks of the members of the Allied Floral Association. It does not seem possible that anyone in the trade can hold out from becoming a member and enjoy the fruits of the advertising that some of the others are paying for. It will only be a question of time before every retailer, grower and wholesaler will be contributing to the publicity fund, and then a campaign will be conducted that will make everyone feel that he at least tried to do his part in making it a wonderful success.

NOTES.

Poehlmann Bros. Co., has a fine crop of lilies in sight for Easter, and it is expected that there will be at least 150,000 buds and blooms ready for cutting and shipping for this occasion. August Poehlmann says that the firm's supply is about normal, and is looking for an early clean-up at the advertised quotations. Everything in Plant "A" is in splendid condition, and the force is busy planting young Premier and Columbia roses. Dunlop and Butterfly are among the new roses that will be given bench space this season at this establishment. Columbia, Premier and Ophelia will be grown the most heavily. The young carnation stock is in particularly fine condition at this place. Mr. Poehlmann's eldest son, Earl, is devoting his entire time at Plant A and is very much interested in the production end of the business.

C. L. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn, was 62 years young, February 27, when all the visitors to his establishment were treated to a fine smoke. He has spent about 28 years in the florist business, during which time he built up a splendid trade and made a large number of friends, who are steadily increasing. O. P. Bassett will celebrate his eighty-fifth birthday at Pasadena, Calif., March 31, and E. B. Washburn will be 33 this month. Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Washburn are making a western business and pleasure trip this week, with stops at Kansas City, Mo., and Wichita, Kans.

A meeting of the mid-west branch of the Woman's National Garden Association will be held at the Fine Arts building, March 22-23. Among the speakers will be Mrs. Francis King, president of the organization; Loring Underwood, of Boston, Mass.; W. A. Murrill, of New York, and Mrs. George W. Crocker, president of the New England branch.

Ronsley reports a very satisfactory season, and is optimistic in regard to the spring business. He filled an order last week for 400 corsages of double violets and Milady roses and 25 corsages of orchids and lily of the valley when the members of one of the Masonic lodges held their annual affair at the Edleweiss Gardens.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. report that their sales for February were the best ever experienced, with the heaviest demand from out-of-town points. This firm has not yet secured new quarters, but has several in sight in the immediate vicinity of this market.

Many out-of-town buyers have been in the city the past week making arrangements for their supply of Easter lilies and other stock. The local florists had better get busy and buy what they need, for everything points to an early clean-up in this line.

At Wietor Bros.' store, the receipts of Premier and Columbia roses are much heavier this week and include fancy stock. They have had wonderful success with Premier and the blooms they cut all through the season were of unsurpassed quality.

Arthur Christianson, of the Bohannon Floral Co., was operated upon for stomach trouble last week at the Lutheran Deaconess Home and Hospital, 1138 North Leavitt street. His many friends are hoping for an early and permanent recovery.

In the bankruptcy matter of William Langhout, before Sidney C. Eastman, referee in bankruptcy, March 2, in petition for an order to compromise a claim against the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western railroad, compromise was authorized.

The Wayside Inn at Morton Grove was almost totally destroyed by fire on the evening of March 1. Quite a number of members of the trade have had dinner at this well-known place when visiting the Poehlmann greenhouses.

J. A. Budlong Co. reports the shipping trade as good, considering conditions, and has no complaint whatever to make in regard to business in February, which was the best in the history of the firm.

The E. F. Winterson Co. unpacked a large shipment of baskets last week, which kept the force busy for several days. Fred Krauss is back on the job after being on the sick list for over a week.

Kennicott Bros. Co. is handling a good supply of American Beauty roses, which are moving nicely considering the large supply of stock now offered in this market.

Zech & Mann have started to book orders for Easter lilies and according to Allie Zech, their supply will be even larger than last season.

Luke Schrer, formerly with the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, is planning on going into the retail florist business in the near future.

Peter Reinberg is cutting a good supply of roses and carnations which are moving nicely, considering the general market conditions.

Vaughan's Seed Store reports liberal bookings of advance orders for bulbs, the demand for French bulbs showing better than last season.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is handling a good supply of lilies and is bookng advance orders for Easter.

The American Bulb Co. unloaded one car of cannas and caladiums this week and another is in transit.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. have had a splendid season with the total February sales the largest on record.

Ed. Vilter is the latest addition to the force at the Joseph Foerster Co.'s store.

B. Zima has joined the store force of the E. C. Amling Co.

Visitors: J. S. Wilson, Des Moines, Ia.; John L. Johnson, DeKalb; C. C. Pollworth, Milwaukee, Wis.; Albert Pochelon, Detroit, Mich.; P. W. Peterson, Joliet; Henry Rahaley, Detroit, Mich.; R. A. Simmen, La Salle; R. Wilson, Cleveland, O.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.—William Penn and wife, Boston, Mass., are here for a two weeks' vacation.

ELMHURST, ILL.—The charter of the Meyer & Dramm Co. has been amended and the concern will be known in the future as the Dramm Greenhouse Co., Inc.

ACTIVE DEMAND IN ALL LINES.

The flower trade in this territory has ruled steady during the past week. Every branch has been active and florists are having a good volume of business. Social activities are now coming back briskly, and quite a few have been held during the past week. Weddings are also numerous. The trade in cut flowers is active, and most of the down-town shops report a satisfactory demand. On the whole, the tone of the trade is satisfactory and prospects are good. The supply is ample, although very little, if any, is left over at the close of business. Roses are selling well, and the supply is sufficient for present needs at from $3 to $10 per dozen. Carnations are also in good demand and there is a fairly good supply. They retail at $3 per dozen. Violets are one of the strongest points in the trade and sell at about $2 per bunch. The quality is good. Sweet peas are good property and retail from 75 cents to $2 per bunch. There is also a good call for jonquils, tulips, freesias and forget-me-nots. Some plants are in the market and the demand is good. Greens are plentiful. The outlook for an active Easter business is exceedingly bright. Preparations are being made to supply a large demand. There is some doubt if lilies will be available at that time, because of the continuous cloudy weather, which is holding them back.

MARKET FAST BECOMING NORMAL.

The long expected break in the market is with us at last; the demand seemed to fall flat over night, and with an increased supply arriving daily, prices dropped quickly. The influenza epidemic is under control, and the death list is again normal, thus causing a falling off in funeral work, which has been the mainstay of the business for the past two months. The oversupply is not in roses and carnations, but in bulbous and miscellaneous stock. American Beauties are more plentiful, but there is no demand for them at any price. All varieties of roses are coming stronger, but with a big cut in prices, there has as yet been no surplus. The supply of carnations still falls short of the demand. Sweet peas are now arriving in large quantites, and at times, it is hard to move them at any price. Easter lilies and callas are cleaned up daily as the supply of both is still small. White lilac is another item that is hard to move. Tulips, jonquils and Paper Whites are in big supply, and are only bringing about one half what they were selling for one week ago. Forget-me-nots, baby primroses, calendulas, freesias, snapdragons and mignonette meet with no demand whatever. The call for violets, lily of the valley and orchids has also fallen flat, as is usually the case during Lent. Taking everything into consideration, it is nothing more than was to be expected, and with prices back to normal again, and the trade all boosting, "Say it With Flowers," it will only be a matter of a short time until the counter trade is back where it was before the shortage of stock and high prices. The street boys were hard at work Saturday night, the first time since last fall.

Washington Florists' Club.

About 50 local florists and their guests participated in the oyster roast staged by the "Say it With Flowers" committee of the Florists' Club of Washington, D. C. The affair took place in one of the large greenhouses of the Washington Floral Company, in Alexandria, Va., arrangements there being made by David G. Grillbortzer, president of the company. The trip to Alexandria was made in a fleet of "jitneys," led by J. Harper Hetherington, who was chairman of the oyster roast committee. Upon arrival at the greenhouse, the guests were welcomed by Mr. Grillbortzer. He told them that the American Carnation Society would meet in Washington next year, and that it was up to each grower to do his part in an effort to make that meeting a success. The growers on their part, pledged the cooperation that he asked for, while the retailers expressed a willingness to do their share in the work.

William F. Gude spoke of the value of the get-together meetings of the club, and enlarged on Mr. Grillbortzer's plea for a successful carnation convention. He also spoke on behalf of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, which plans to hold its convention in Washington this fall.

One of the entertainment features was the proposed presentation of a "cut glass" punch bowl to the florist who could tell the biggest lie. Secretary Rodman was declared the winner by the committee of judges, and Adolph Gude was selected to make the presentation speech. Mr. Gude said it with flowers, but was very careless in presenting the punch bowl with the result that just as Mr. Rodman reached out his hands to receive the prize it fell on the concrete floor and, as one of the colored waiters aptly described the incident for the benefit of THE AMERICAN FLORIST correspondent, "it was just nachally ruined." The award was made when Mr. Rodman declined to tell a lie by declaring that he had never told a lie in his life.

The house was decorated with palms, ferns and American flags. During the evening a colored orchestra played lively airs. There was plenty of both solid and liquid refreshments, and it was voted that this was the best event in many months given by the florists.

INCREASED SHIPMENTS, FAIR DEMAND.

The increase in stock continues, while the demand appears about the same. Some retailers report quite a falling off in their sales, while others are very well satisfied, being helped by the call for funeral flowers, the death rate being still above normal. The increased shipments are mostly of sweet peas, calendulas, violets and from growers of bulbous stock, daffodils being particularly plentiful. There are also very good crops of freesias. Roses are also more plentiful, but not to any great extent. In carnations, there is very little additional stock, but as the market is not cleaning up as well as usual for the past month, their prices have receeded, the low level for good stock being 10 cents, and from that up to 15 cents. The rose stock is of very fine quality, Premier, even on short stems carrying enormous blooms. This is certainly a wonderful rose. Snapdragons are improving, and will soon be a quantity product. Mignonette is a bit draggy, though of good quality. The great majority of the retailers should be taught how to use or sell calendulas, as there is plenty of fine stock in the market at prices much below carnations. Callas are more plentiful, and the first of the cut giganteums have arrived. There appears to be more acacia than usual, but it cleans up very well. Cattleyas are ahead of the demand, to judge by prices, which are at last week's low level.

March 1.—Quantities of flowers, and but little demand, was the situation this morning, with the inevitable shading of prices. There was a drop of 50 per cent in sweet peas over prevailing prices of a week ago. In many other lines, quotations softened considerably. The weather, while cold, is bright and sunny, which should help the transient trade.

FLORISTS' CLUB MEETING.

The meeting of the florists' club, March 2, was a great sucess. J. Otto Thilow's lecture on Australia, his graphic descriptions and wonderful pictures, with the speaker at his best, made a combination that delighted his audience of 400 or more persons. There were many ladies present who greatly enjoyed the lecture and the fine exhibition of cut flowers, included in which were W. Atlee Burpee Co.'s collection of sweet peas and other entries of this flower, the Joseph Heacock Co.'s roses and William Kleinheinz's acacias, all of which were unusually high in quality. A more detailed report of these features will be given in a later issue. Following the lecture, refreshments were served. This was, without doubt, the most important meeting ever held by the club.

PUSHING CUT FLOWERS.

A prominent commission merchant, in speaking of conditions, said he thought the market, while softening, was in very good condition, as generally, the first two weeks of Lent saw a great oversupply, with quite a slump in prices. Bulb growers were unfortunate in bringing in so many daffodils at this time, while the extra shipments of sweet peas were expected, so many carnation growers substituting sweet peas when their plants failed them last summer. He thought it was up to the retailers to push sweet peas, daffodils and other plentiful flowers at this time, as at the prices, they could get choice flowers in quantity lots. It should prove very profitable to them, and help keep down the surplus.

NOTES.

A large grower of plants for the Easter market said that few realize, that in three weeks Easter week would be on them. Much of the success of certain crops depends on the weather, which to get everything in without hard forcing, would have to be generous in sunshiny days. His advice to retailers was to get their orders in early. So many leave it to the last minute, and expect the stock to be saved for them, which when certain essential items, such as lilies and rambler roses are so scarce, it behooves them to be on the job at once.

The advertisement of the local publicity committee, which appeared in three prominent papers the past week, was given an OK as being very fine by all in the trade. Next week's sweet pea ad will be very opportune. What is wanted now, is a cash endorsement, a trifle of one cent added to every dollar's worth of flowers purchased.

EVERYTHING THE BEST IN FLORISTS' SUPPLIES
1127 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Little as it may seem from each individual, it will make a large sum in the aggregate. Sign your contract slips and send them to the secretary and get behind the movement with a will.

The large house, 72x300 feet, of the Joseph Heacock Co., Roelofs, Pa., planted with sweet peas, is now coming into crop. They are very fine, many having from 15 to 18-inch stems. They will cut heavily from this house until after Easter. Exceptionally fine Premier roses are leading features of their rose stock.

The ground will soon be broken for the large power plant and greenhouse of the Edgeplain Floral Co., at St. Leonards. A lot of the material is now on the place, and work will commence as soon as the weather permits. The house is expected to be ready for planting early in May.

As the time for the New York show approaches, considerable interest is shown, and it is expected that a large number of the trade of this city will visit the exhibition, and also inspect the various Easter stocks of noted growers.

The broken glass of the large house at Florex Gardens is now nearly all reset and the ground for the two new 700-foot houses will be cleared at once, so that their erection may proceed as rapidly as possible.

The large block of giganteum lilies of A. M. Campbell's, at Strafford, are in splendid condition. Those in pots are all 10 to 11-inch bulbs, and should make superb plants.

Russell roses, sweet peas, lilac and cattleyas were features of the Leo Niessen Co's. stock the past week. Receipts were much heavier, but were well handled by their large sales force.

The market is helped by a very good demand from out-of-town points; from the large shipments, it would appear as if half the stock was disposed of to florists of other cities.

Casper Altemus has opened the Larchwood Flower Shop at 442 South 60th street, which makes the fourth florist below Market street on this busy thoroughfare.

Berger Bros. are looking for a new location, their lease expiring the first of April. Sweet peas, violets and daffodils are quantity items.

Alfred M. Campbell says: "Men may come, and men may go, but the run of automobile trucks to the repair shops goes on forever."

Exceptionally fine Mrs. Ward and other choice carnations are features of the Edward Reid stock. K.

New York.

PRICES CONTINUE TO DROP.

The situation in the wholesale district has steadily grown worse since our notes of February 28 were written. It would seem that prices should have, by this time, reached bed rock, but they continue to decline on almost all stocks. Orchids, which have been comparatively reasonable in price throughout the winter, seem to be falling off in supply, and while, as yet there has been no marked advance in prices, there is a possibility that there may be. But practically every other stock dropped. No. 2 roses are down to $4 to $6 per 100, and the longer grades have fallen in proportion. Excepting Laddie, carnations are running at from $4 to $6 per 100. Gardenias, that for a time wholesaled for $1 each, are now a glut, and the best are going for $3 per dozen. There is an enormous stock of sweet peas on the market. Short stock is offered as low as 50 and 75 cents per 100; the best, very fine stock, at $3 per 100. Good tulips sold well for a time, but quantities of them are now seen in almost all the wholesale stores. There is now on the market a giant daffodil, an exceptionally fine production. Here it goes by the name of "Albert S.," but we cannot vouch for that being its true name. It has been selling for $2 per dozen, wholesale. Other yellow stock and Paper Whites are going as low as 50 cents per dozen. The supply of American Beauty roses is not heavy, but there is so little call for them, that specials range at the wholesale rate of $45 to $75 per 100, depending on quality. It would seem that such great reduction in prices on the bulk of stock should quicken the demand, but no such movement has as yet materialized. Some of the leading retail stores report that the most they are doing is in funeral work. And again, there seems, in certain quarters, to be a disposition to "knock" the florist business. A Jewish rabbi was recently quoted in one of the newspapers, as saying that his people were being advised not to buy flowers. That need not cause great alarm as similar statements have been published in the past. Over in Hackensack, N. J., there is a man who has gained some prominence as an astronomer and weather prophet. He attributed the late war, and pretty much all the "cussedness" that attended it, to spots on the sun.

March 1.—There is considerable buying this morning, but prices are on the decline. Fair weather is increasing the supply.

GREEK-AMERICAN FLORISTS' ASS'N. BALL.

The thirteenth anniversary entertainment and ball of the Greek-American Florists' Association, was held in the grand ball room of the Hotel Commodore on the night of February 26. There was a large attendance, and it was a most successful affair. The stage and balconies were handsomely decorated by a committee, of which Theodore Malandre, of Malandre Brothers, was chairman. Other members of the committee were: George Hanges, George Roudires, D. Anargyros and S. Papadakos. Other well known Greek-American florists were prominent on various committees. Other well-known men noticed were George D. Nicholas, D. J. Pappas and George J. Polykranas. A two-hour entertainment preceded the dancing in which there were clever acrobatic feats, a balcony scene from Romeo and Juliet, topical songs and "bits of grand opera." The grand march was a noteworthy feature of the ball. The officers of this association are: N. J. Lales, president; J. T. Caparell, vice-president; J. Soteriades, treasurer; C. Thomas, secretary, and A. Frank, assistant secretary. A large number of florists, not connected with the association, including native Americans, attended.

FLORISTS' CLUB BANQUET PLANS.

President Henshaw, of the New York Florists' club, is anxious that the banquet to be held on the night of St. Patrick's day, at the Hotel Biltmore, shall be a success, and he hopes that the club members and other florists will turn out in force. We join him in his laudable endeavors. Many visiting florists in the city, attending the flower show, which opens March 15, will be invited to attend. The club has generally been successful with its banquets, and it is hoped that this one will be preeminently so. It should be a banner get-together affair.

NOTES.

The Sun and New York Herald, in its issue of February 29, publishes the following: "To Readers of Farm and Garden Department—Because of the serious shortage in newsprint paper the Sun and New York Herald is compelled to discontinue its Farm and Garden Department." Before the two newspapers were merged into one, the "Farm and Garden Department" was a feature of the Sunday Sun.

The next meeting of the New York Florists' Club will be held in its hall in the Engineering building, 25-33 West 39th street, on the night of March 8. It is expected that extended reports will be made on the final arrangements for the spring flower show, which is to open on the 15th; on the arrangements for the club banquet on the night of the 17th, and on various other matters.

The sympathy of the trade is with Abraham Tischworz, salesman for George C. Siebrecht, whose wife died February 17, of pneumonia, leaving two small children.

Joseph A. Millang is receiving fine stock of the Francis Scott Key rose. Hitherto, it has been largely considered as a summer variety, but it has done well this winter.

Robert G. Wilson, of Brooklyn, now has the cut flower concession in the Heden department store, Newark, N. J., with George Sims in charge.

The market is flooded with lily of the valley and surplus stock has been going at $1 per 100, with plenty of it offered on the streets.

A. J. Anderson, of Manhasset, Long Island, is bringing in fine stock of variegated freesias.

Thomas Rowland, of Boston, was a visitor, February 27. A. F. F.
